Slumber Mere Reversion to Embryonic Status?

Sleep, Dr. Emil Guthell, noted Austrian psychintrist, told the Washington Psychological society, represented a return to the condition of the organism at various stages before hirth when there is perfect warmth, darkness and absence of disturbing stimuli. But, he pointed out, this embryonic state itself is very close to the dividing line between death and life.

"It is a curions paradox," he said, "that we spend one-third of our existence yet unborn." Every hour of sleep is just so much added to the state of life before it emerges into conscious individuality.

The language of dreams, Doctor Guthell said, is the language of primordial men. It is a very similar sort of symbol language, he pointed out, as that which emerged from the long past of the race in the earliest writing and was preserved in alphabets, such as the Chinesc, the Egyptian and the picture writing of some of the American Indian trihes.

The extreme fear sometimes experienced in dreams, he declared, is nothing more than fear of ourselves. The inability to escape from the thing feared, the seeming magic power that hinds the victim of the nightmare, is natural since it is impossible to escape from the self.

Doctor Guthell warned against persons discussing their dreams too freely. The knowledge of dream interpretation now is widespread, he said, and persons are likely to give an nnfair picture of themselves.

Unofficial Bird Census Leaves Doubt in Mind

An unofficial census taker has hecn on duty at the cathedral at Rouen, France. He reports that it has a hird population of 1,200 permanent residents. There are 900 pigeons, 250 hats, 60 hawks, 40 owls nnd 35 ravens.

On the whole, it is a peaceful congregation, hut occasionally the ancient enmity hetween hawks and pigeons breaks out and a dead pigeon hearing the marks of hattle is sometimes found in the cathedral.

It would he interesting to know how the statistician was able to make nn even approximately accurate count. Field glasses, and perhaps a mechanical counting device, may have helped, and a particularly invish offering of food may have brought down all the inhabitants from the topmost rafters. Even so, it would seem to require an almost self-registering eye to count a flying population.—New York Times.

Obedience

The following is an incident that happened some years ago in India: A hachelor friend was giving a dinner party to some of his pals and their wives, and thonght that wild dnck would he a nice change. Instructions were duly given to the cook, and late that afternoon, when the host returned from his office, he found the cook hnsily chasing the wretched duck round and round the compound. Upon being asked why, the cook replied (after having safely caught the duck) that as he was nnable to get a wild duck in the market, he had bought a tame one and was trying to make it wild by chasing it round the compound.—Exchange.

Dog's Status Unjust

The fact that in ancient nnsanitary days, numhers of mongrel wolf-like dogs were nllowed to haunt the streets of hot eastern cities to act the part of scavengers nnd disposers of garhage of all sorts, thievish, snarling creatnres kicked about hy everyone, pnt them into the lowest class of the hrntes. To cast anything to the dogs was to consign it to infamy as deep as could he imagined. We have a relic of that feeling in the expression "gone to the dogs," applied to one who has lost all or become ontcast.

Queer Weather

On still, cold nights when the air is exceptionally calm temperatures may vary hy as much as 10 degrees within short distances. In extreme cases the distance may he ns little ns 300 feet, thongh it is usually half a mile or more. A killing frost may damage vegetation on the ground or on low land when a thermometer stationed high above it shows a temperature well above freezing. United States weather hureau experts have found that the ideal place to record temperature is 5 or 6 feet ahove the ground.

Teaching the Bishop

After evensong, the good bishop took his ense in the country parson's garden and diverted himself with the company of the parson's little daughter. She asked many questions and finally demanded, as bed time came: "What makes it get dark?"

"Can't you," said the hishop, "tell me?"

"Oh, yes I can," she answered, nodding a sage head, "God shuts his eyes."—Boston Transcript.

Poetry Found to Be True

"A rose hy any other name would smell as swcet," said the poet, and tests in Germany have disclosed that even if the rose were artificial, it would be as attractive to the butterfly in its search for food. It is the color, and not the odor, that altracts, it has heen found, the insects settling indiscriminately on paper and on real flowers that were scattered abont a garden.—Exchange.

MT. LAKE PARK

Chicken Supper

The Ladies' Aid of the Baptist congregation at Loch Lynn will conduct a chicken supper at the home of Mrs. U. G. Ford in Loch Lynn on the evening of September 15 (Thursday), beginning at 5:30 o'clock.

An Outrageous Occurrence

It is unfortunate, and certainly much to be regretted that the peace and good order of the Park, which persisted to a marked degree during most of the summer months, should have been disturbed by the assault on "Big Boy" Woods on a recent evening.

We have not been able to get the true story, nor the names of the parties guilty of the assault, and for the purpose of this item it is not necessary. We understand, however, the investigation of the occurrence has not been dropped. What we want to say is, that the assailants of Woods have, to say the least, been guilty of not only a breach of the peace and a violation of the law of the State, but have likewise been guilty of a breach of good faith with the peace officer of the town, who, as we know, has always treated those who are inclined to step from the path of rectitude with the kindness and consideration compatible with his duties. There comes a time, however, when patience ceases to be a virtue and Bailiff Wiley has reached that point.

Minor infractions of ordinances and the law may, in the exercise of good judgment, be passed by, but when rowdyism seeks to destroy property, or, as in this instance, endangers human life, it passes the point of toleration. The victim of the assault, too, should have every consideration, as he is one of those unfortunates whose mental capacity is undeveloped to a large degree.

We do not have in mind any particular person or group of persons, but indiscretions, prompted possibly by bad booze, may lead to high misdemeanors or even felonies, carrying long terms of imprisonment. The Mayor and Council and their employes are trying to maintain a high standard of citizenship in this community and make persons and property safe from harm or destruction. Neither friendship nor favoritism will be allowed to interfere with this plan.

Baliff Wiley has received his instructions and we believe him to be a man who will fearlessly carry them out.

A Tragic Death

Friends were deeply shocked on Tuesday when word was received of the tragic death in an automobile accident of Dr. Luther Davis, of Fairmont, W. Va., as he was motoring eastward with a friend from California. The friend was instantly killed and Dr. Davis died on the way to a hospital.

Dr. Davis was an outstanding physician of Fairmont and a former associate in practice with the late Dr. Hugh Carr, well known in this community. Dr. Carr was the son of Dr. and Mrs. L. L. Carr, of this place, who motored to Fairmont yesterday.

Fire Hazard Should Be Lessened

It is time to begin to plan for the reduction of the usual fire hazard of the Park which always presents its possibilities at this season of the year. Aside from the removal of the leaves, which should be done as soon as they have fallen, some attention should be paid to the cutting of the grass and weeds on vacant lots which are in proximity to buildings. In the event the owners do not attend to this important duty voluntarily, it should be made mandatory.

THE MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY'S CORNER

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

At the annual meeting of the Board of Managers held in April, 1910, the Society honored itself in the election of Dr. John Franklin Goucher, LL.D., as its president. Dr. Goucher possessed all of the fine and noble qualities of mind and heart requisite for the large success which attended his administration. Dr. Goucher was preeminently missionary minded and had the Master's conception of Kingdom growth—from within outward, from center to circumference.

In the first year of his presidency the Maryland Bible Society made a subscription of $10,000 to the American Bible Society to enable it to secure half a million conditionally promised by Mrs. Sage, and, when the subscription was paid in three years, a further subscription of $10,000 was made to the Society, to be paid in four years, and to be used in payment for the revision and stereotype plates of the Arabic Reference Bible. This splendid achievement being namely, the assumption of the cost of erecting a Bible house at Christobal, in the Panama Canal Zone. The project cost $50,000 and the Maryland Bible Society's pledge contemplated paying the entire sum in ten years. The building long since completed and out of debt, bears a bronze tablet with this inscription:

The Word of our God shall stand forever.

The Maryland Bible Society
Presents to
The American Bible Society
In commemoration of its centennial anniversary
THIS BUILDING
With thanksgiving to God for the marvelous opening of the Gospel to the peoples of the earth through the ministr yof the Society during these first one hundred years.
Grace to you and peace be multiplied in the knowledge of God and of Jesus our Lord

In 1916 the Society received a legacy from the estate of John K. McCulloh, which greatly enhanced its power to serve the State in Bible distribution as well as to further its missionary program in aiding the nation-wide work of the American Bible Society.

However, with the rapidly changing social conditions, and the increase of endowment there came a gradual falling away of auxiliaries in the counties until in 1916 there were only two active county societies in Maryland—the Young Men's Bible Society of Frederick county and the Ladies' Bible Society of Princess Anne.

During the year 1917-1918, 34,472 volumes were distributed, of which 13,570 were given away, and $3,858 came in as gifts to the Society. Two Princeton students were employed in the summer of 1917 as colporteurs and their work in the countryside registered favorable results.

In the spring of this year the United States entered the Great War and thousands of copies of the well-known khaki Testament were distributed, bringing comfort and strength to many a homesick lad in the concentration and training camps within and without the State.

At Camp Gaither, Laurel, Maryland, one thousand New Testaments were presented to the regiment and a khaki bound Bible was given the Chaplain, Rev. F. C. Reynolds, now the beloved pastor of Grace Methodist Episcopal church, Baltimore, Md. At Cockeysville, Md., twelve hundred men of the Fifth Regiment were assembled by Col. Washington Bowie. Rev. John F. Goucher, LL.D., read Ephesians 4:10-17. The executive secretary, Rev. James Hart Hyatt, D.D., assisted by helpers, then handed each man a New Testament, Roman Catholic and Protestant, Jews and Gentile received alike, and, marching by in single file, gratefully acknowledged the gift.

The members and friends of the family assembled in the church for a short program and the reorganization. Approximately 200 people from Maryland, Pennsylvania and West Virginia attended.

Church service next Sunday at the Cherry Grove church of the Brethren. Rev. Arnold, of Burlington, W. Va., will preach.

Miss Mildred Fike went to Frostburg on Monday evening to begin her school work for another term at Beall High school.

Miss June Merrill returned home on Sunday after spending the summer with her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Michael.

A few of the people of this community attended the Sunday school picnic held in the Kamp grove on Monday.

Miss Mary Merrill returned home on Tuesday night after visiting Miss Sarah Eisel at Frostburg a few days. She was accompanied home by Miss Margie Grimm, who visited a week at her home.

Ellis Robeson and family, of Frostburg, spent the week-end at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. S. Fike.

A large crowd attended the weiner roast held at Cherry Grove church last Wednesday night.

Mrs. Harriet Blocher is visiting her daughter, Mrs. E. O. Robeson.

Those returning to the Grantsville high school on Tuesday as students were Mary, William and June Merrill, Albert Robeson, Louvinia Broadwater, Edgell and Dallas Stark, Austin McKenzie, Pearl Robeson and Naomi Chaney.

CHARGE TO GRAND JURORS IS MADE BY JUDGE DOUB

September Term of Circuit Court Convenes Monday With All Members of Bench Present

TEXT OF CHARGE GIVEN

The September Term of the Garrett County Circuit Court convened Monday morning with a full bench, consisting of Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan and Associate Judges Frank G. Wagaman and Albert A. Doub, presiding. The charge to the grand jury, of which Joel A. Beachy is foreman, was delivered by Judge Doub, following which the memorial service in memory of the late Edward Z. Tower, was held.

The charge to the grand jury was as follows:

Gentlemen of the Grand Jury:

The custom of charging the grand jury arose in England many years ago, at a time when there wasn't very much education; no public schools; when there were no newspapers; when there were no good roads or means of transportation and when the citizens of the country very seldom came to the county-seat and had no menas of knowing what the duties and obligations of the grand jury were. We are, however, living in a new day. We have newspapers through which men living at the very far distant parts of the county know what is going on at the county-seat. We have the radio; we have the moving pictures putting before the public all the happenings of the day; we have good roads and there is frequent and easy communication between the town and the country and therefore I assume that the members of this grand jury are pretty well advisted as to what their duties are and what the obligations are that they have assumed in taking upon themselves the oath as grand jurors.

Notwithstanding that, this custom has been handed to us through the years and it is a part of the duty of the Court to deliver such a charge to each grand jury.

The Legislature of the State of Maryland has seen fit to require the Court at each session of the grand jury to give a charge to the grand jury as to the duties it is to perform, and that is the duty I am now about to perform.

I need not to remind you of the solemnity of the obligation which you have taken, under which you are to east aside all feeling of envy, hatred, malice, or ill-will, as well as of fear, favor, partiality or affection. As grand jurors of the county of Garrett you are a part, and a most important part, of the administration of justice for the county and I want to impress upon you that the obligation which you have taken is as serious and as binding upon you as the obligation which the members of this Court have taken. Therefore, I say it is your duty to consider nothing except the obligation which you have assumed, by becoming as grand jurors a part of the machinery for the administration of justice for this county, and during all of your deliberations to carry in mind the seriousness and the importance of that obligation.

Ordinarily the work of the grand jurors is outlined by the State's Attorney. He will call your attention to all the chief offenses and to the persons against whom crimes are

To Transfer More Trout to Savage River

Plans to transfer more trout from Folly and Laurel runs to Savage River were made at a meeting of the Cold Spring Rod and Gun Club at the Devon Club, Westernport, the Piedmont Herald announced. Recently about 100 trout were transferred and more will be moved.

Reports of hunting and fishing out of season were made and as a result a recommendation was made that a justice of the peace be appointed at Bloomington and that an additional game warden be appointed for the section of Garrett county to see that violations are discontinued.

The establishment of a Maryland state-wide license fee of $2 was recommended by members of the club.

Former Oakland Men Charged With Robbing The Pines

L. W. Beeler and Brunin Beeler, formerly of Oakland, were arrested Monday evening by Deputy Sheriff Clarence W. Spear, charged with having robbed The Pines, west of Hutton, on last Thursday night.

Seventy-five slots for a machine, cigarets and some chewing gum and other articles were taken, and the merchandise was missed by the proprietor Friday morning. The arrests were made at the home of Bill Hartzel, Oakland, where some of the stolen goods were recovered. Preston county authorities took charge of the prisoners on Monday, and they were taken to Kingwood, W. Va., where they will be given a hearing.

WEST VIRGINIA MAN DIES AS RESULT OF CAR WRECK

Collision Occurs East of Deer Park on Sunday Night

A. T. "Bill" Shelton, 47, Clarksburg, W. Va., was fatally injured in an automobile accident on the Deer Park-Kitzmiller highway about 9 o'clock Sunday night, two others were injured, while three in one car escaped with slight bruises. Shelton died in the office of Dr. A. K. Fidler, Kitzmiller, a few minutes after being taken there.

Miss Georgia Moore and James Gribble, of Clarksburg, were the two more or less injured, while Ernest Fitzwater, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Fitzwater, of North Glade, W. E. George, and Theodore Beckman, of Barton, all in the same car, were not hurt.

The wreck occurred near the Schmidt filling station. Fitzwater attempted to pass another car, and just as he was abreast of him, the other car appeared, enroute to Kitzmiller. Both cars simultaneously turned into the same ditch. Gribble, driver of the Clarksburg car, was attempting to turn back on the road when the collision occurred.

Shelton was thrown through the wind shield to the road and his skull was broken. Miss Moore was thrown throug the top of the car and badly bruised.

W. W. Dawson, State's Attorney, and Sheriff Walter IL Haenftling, investigated the accident.

Shelton has resided in Clarksburg for the past two years or more, but was born and reared in Grafton. He was well known among the sporting fraternity in Clarksburg. He is survived by his father, John Shelton, of Grafton, and a brother, Cleveland Shelton, of Clarksburg. He was a former railroad employe.

His wife died several years ago. Two children, of Grafon, also survive.

County Goodwill Banquet Will Not Be Held This Year

That the annual goodwill dinner sponsored by the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland would be discontinued this year, was announced today by Mayor Grover C. Stemple.

Upon the occasion of the goodwill dinners for the past two years, the mayors and councils of the incorporated towns of Garrett county were guests of the mayor and council of Oakland at a banquet. William F. Broening and Haword W. Jackson, mayors of Baltimore, were the speakers upon the occasions which brought about a more neighborly feeling in the several communities and at which problems confronting the various towns were discussed and in many instances solved. The annual banquet in Oakland was a climax to a tour of the local governing body to the different towns of the county during the summer months.

"The goodwill dinner was not included in our budget this year," the Mayor stated, "and it is not being held because of this reason."

Making Preparations For Bowling Leagues This Fall and Winter

Preparations are being made for the formation of both a senior and junior bowling league for this fall and winter, according to William Gibson, manager of The Recreation. The senior bowling league was formed several years ago under Mr. Gibson's management, but this is the first that a junior league has been attempted.

It is planned to have a number of churches and local organizations to enter teams, if at all possible. The junior league will probably start the last week in September, while the senior league will get under way shortly after.

The formation of a young ladies' league is also being discussed.

GRAND JURY COMPLETES ITS WORK AND ADJOURNS

Body Finds Sixty-two Indictments In Three Days' Session; Forty Bills on Liquor Charges

CRIMINAL DOCKET MONDAY

The September Term grand jury completed its work last night about six o'clock and after submitting its report to the Court was discharged from further service at this time.

During its three days' session the jury had before it fifty witnesses and from the testimony of these persons sixty-two indictments were found and returned to the Court. Of this number it is said that forty are for violations of the liquor laws of the state and county.

Monday the criminal docket will be called, at which time members of the petit jury will be present in court.

The report of the grand jury follows:

To the Honorable, the Judges of the Circuit Court for Garrett County:

The Grand Jury for the September Term, 1932, hereby submits its report as follows:

We have had before us and have examined fifty witnesses and have found sixty-two indictments.

Pursuant to the impressive charge delivered to the Grand Jury by the presiding Judge, Albert A. Doub, we have carefully considered the evidence brought before us and have been governed by our obligation as jurors in our action in each instance.

We wish to commend the officers for the splendid effort that is being put forth to apprehend and punish offenders against the law. And we also wish to thank the State's Attorney, Walter W. Dawson, for his courteous assistance to us and for the manner in presenting all matters which required our attention.

We have examined the Sheriff's residence, Jail and Court House and find them in good repair. We wish to recommend that the interior of the jail be painted and suggest that the work be done at an early date. The conditions in the jail are in excellent shape and we heartily commend the Sheriff and his deputy for the interest shown in the county's property.

We wish to thank His Honor Judge Doub for the assistance rendered us in performing our duties as Grand Jurors.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Impostor Places Orders For Supplies and Gets Money for Advertising

Representing himself as the advance agent of the Roberts and Ramish shows, a one-legged man came into Oakland last Friday and after placing orders for work and supplies at a number of stores, he gathered in approximately $65 in cash for advertising to be placed on the merry-go-round when it is set up here at the fair next week and then decamped.

He obtained sums of money from Harry Miller, NuWay Laundry, Oakland Model Bakery and one or two others about town, and also it is thought he obtained a sum from an out-of-town bottling company. He also attempted to obtain some money from W. R. Browning, but without success.

H. A. Holden, the legitimate advance agent of the shows, who was in Oakland several years ago with the Murphy shows, is now located at the Central Hotel. He says he is the only representative and that he is not making any collections.

Mr. Holden stated that he had taken the matter up with the Billboard, a show magazine, and that they would give proper publicity to the confidence game in an effort to apprehend the man.

POLLUTED WELL BELIEVED CAUSE OF TYPHOID FEVER

Thirty-Four Cases of Disease Are Reported at Vindex—Few Cases Are Severe

NEW WELLS BEING DUG

Polluted water, obtained from a well, is believed to have caused the typhoid epidemic, which has gripped "Six Foot Row," at Vindex. During the past two weeks there have been 29 cases reported. All cases are confined to the upper row of twenty-six houses, the occupants of which obtain their water supply from one well in the middle of the row.

"All the cases have no doubt developed from contamination of this well through a previous case occurring the middle of June," Dr. George E. Clarke, health officer, stated.

As soon as the first case was reported, Dr. A. K. Fiddler, who has the medical eare of the Vindex miners, began giving typhoid immunization to everyone in Vindex. Most of the people had already been infected, however, Dr. Clarke stated, and developed typhoid fever just after or just previous to the last innoculation.

"It is entirely due to this immunization, however, that all cases except three, are of the very mild type. New cases may develop in the next week, but will become less severe as the serum takes its effect.

Nurses On Job

Beginning Sunday morning both State nurses, Mrs. Joseph F. Fahey and Mrs. Samuel Cole, were detailed to full time duty in Vindex under the supervision of Dr. Fiddler. Each patient is given nursing care at least once each day and in addition the nurses are supervising the distribution of special food provided by the County Commissioners. This food consists of pasteurized milk, buttermilk, eggs, cream of wheat and lemons for lemonade. Safe water for drinking purposes is being hauled into Vindex by the miners from other sources.

Digging New Wells

The Manor Coal company, operating the Vindex mine, is doing everything within its power to better conditions in this row of houses. Ice is being provided each day, new privies are being built and a new deep well is being drilled to provide for adequate and safe water supply.

Due to lack of work at the mines, rents in this row have been allowed to remain unpaid and food advanced to the miners in excess of their earnings for several months, according to George W. Pritts, mine superintendent.

The weekly income is approximately $6 or even lower. Many of the families in the row had little or no gardens planted this summer as a survey of surroundings revealed an almost barren stretch in rear of the company houses.

Dr. Joseph Franklin, Allegany county health officer, was in charge of the situation for a few days, as the Garrett county health officer was in Memorial hospital for treatment of an infection, but he returned to his duties here on Sunday.

Prospects Bright for Largest Number of Exhibits in Years; Fine Entertainment Offered

COUNTY AGENT COMMENTS

The sixteenth annual Garrett County Fair will open at the Fair grounds in Oakland on Tuesday, September 20, with prospects for the largest number of exhibits and finest quality in years, according to Henry M. Speicher, general manager, who says that conditions are favorable, notwithstanding the dry weather, and that farmers should exhibit as never before.

In addition to prospects in the exhibit line, one of the largest traveling shows in the entire country will be here to furnish the entertainment. The Roberts and Ramish Shows, under the direction of the former manager of the Murphy Shows, which exhibited here several years ago, will bring 200 people to Oakland. There will be five rides, 9 shows and 25 concessions and they will have a fireworks display nightly.

County Agent's Suggestions

In commenting about the coming fair, John H. Carter, County Agent, said: "I would particularly impress the farmers and others of the advantage of showing at this time. With premiums remaining the same and comparative value of crops reduced, the farmer would be getting twice as much for his products as in former years."

"In selecting the exhibit, quality is the primary consideration," Mr. Carter continued. "Next in quality comes uniformity. Try to have a fair representation of what the market demands, whether it suits the individual taste or not. If the market is demanding an eight-ounce potato, the potato exhibit should contain eight-ounce potatoes, regardless of other weights which might be larger."

The fair will continue from Tuesday until Friday evening, September 23, with entertainment all four days and all four nights. Wednesday will be known as school day, when all children of school age will be admitted to the grounds free of charge. A parade will be held in the morning composed of the school children, the Crellin Band, the Oakland Band and a band connected with the Roberts and Ramish shows.

Department Heads Listed

Departments this year will be in charge of the same individuals who managed them last year: Horses, Harry L. Porter; cattle, Carl Frazee; sheep, H. W. Smouse; hogs, M. H. Moon; poultry, N. C. Sanders and A. D. Naylor; farm products, George D. White; horticulture, David Ridder; elementary schools, Mrs. H. A. Loraditch; boys 4-H Club work, John H. Carter; girls' club work, Miss Burtis; household department, Mrs. Margaret Casteel; domestic art, Mrs. Chas. A. Tower; community booths, John H. Carter.

Admission will be 10 and 25 cents during the day and at night 10 cents for everybody.

The fair grounds and buildings are all in good condition and ready to receive all entries. With farmers everywhere in the county promising to enter their livestock and agricultural products, it is expected that in point of exhibits it will be the largest in the past several years.

To Discuss Proposed Tableland Constitution at Meetings

Meetings throughout the county during the next week will be held for the purpose of discussing the proposed new constitution for the Allegheny Tableland association, and to determine whether or not the different communities want to organize units in the association.

The proposed constitution calls for each community to have a unit organization, which will be a part of the whole association throughout the eight counties in Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Maryland.

Premium lists for the trl-state fair, to be held at Pittsburgh, in Gimbel Brothers store, in October, may be obtained at these meetings, and a discussion will also be held.

Meetings will be held as follows: Pleasant Valley, September 13, (tonight) at 7:30; Oakland, Monday, September 26, 7:30; Grantsville, Tuesday, September 27, at 7:30; Friendsville, Wednesday, September 28, 7:30; Accident, Thursday, September 29, at 7:30.

STUDENTS TO LEAVE SHORTLY TO CONTINUE STUDIES IN VARIOUS INSTITUTIONS OF HIGHER EDUCATION

Eighteen Graduates of Last Year's High School Will Join Ranks of Advanced Students

Forty-six students from Oakland and vicinity, the majority of whom are graduates of Oakland High school, have left or will leave within the next few days for various business schools, hospital training schools, colleges or universities, when the doors of those institutions open for the coming school term.

Eighteen graduates of last year's high school class are expecting to seek higher learning away from Oakland, while two have applications in for nursing and five for post-graduate courses. Most of the remaining students who will leave are returning to their respective schools, while a few are continuing their training after having taught or remained out of school for a year or more.

Those who are beginning their advanced work are Carroll Casteel, Washington College, Chestertown; Lewis Ray Jones, West Virginia Wesleyan College, Buckhannon, W. Va.; James Treacy, Notre Dame, South Bend, Ind.; Logan Weber, Wayne Fitzwater, Wayne Hamilton, Lloyd Bowers and Mary Lynn McIntire, University of Maryland, College Park; Catherine Baker, Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Betty Broadwater and Adeline Stuck, Hood College, Frederick; Marian Brock, Mary Baldwin Seminary, Staunton, Va.; Alice Butt, Ohio Valley General Hospital, Wheeling, W. Va.; Clara Bell Hamill, National Park Seminary; Cecelia Kerins, St. Mary's Seminary; Lindsay Gonder, Charlotte Hall Academy; Mildred Hamill, Catherman's Business School, Cumberland; Isabel Hoye, in training for nurse at Morgantown, W. Va.

Mary Schmidt and Hazel Gates have applied for admission to the University of Maryland School of Nursing; Lloyd Bowers will take one-half year at Oakland High School before going to Maryland University.

Others returning to school include: Mary Jane Porter, Ethel Stier, Mary Porter and Virginia Paulie, Frostburg Normal; Kathleen Jessee, University of Maryland; Lewis Wildman, Thomas Gonder, Jr., West Virginia University at Morgantown; Mitchell Franklin, Harland Biggs, McClelland Dixon, University of Maryland; Howard Rathbun, Western Maryland College; Susanna Dixon, William and Mary, Williamsburg, Va.; Dorothea Sturgiss, Linwood School, St. Charles, Mo.; Adeline Sincell, Maryland Institute of Art; Ernest Spoerleln, Bridgewater College, Bridgewater, Va.; Leonard Murphy, St. John's College, Annapolis; Elwood Hauser, Gettysburg College, Gettysburg, Pa.; Evelyn Bosley, Drexel Institute, Philadelphia, Pa.; Roland Ready, Washington College, Chestertown; Helen Leighton and Virginia Weeks, Bowling Green, Ky.; Dorothy Welch, Mt. The State Police and the Highways

The Extensive Authority Which One Maryland Bureau Has Acquired

By P. STEWART MACAULAY,
In the Baltimore Sunday Sun

He is a hardened Maryland motorist who fails to slow down and glance apprehensively at the speedometer when a brown-clad motor cyclist appears suddenly from around a bend in the road. And he is an extremely fortunate driver who never has been haled to the side of the highway by one of these brown figures to receive, at the very last, a word of warning.

But since, as the authorities agree, most automobile operators are reasonably careful and law-abiding, it is probable that only a few realize the extent of the power over motorists which the State Police Force represents. The force itself is merely an arm of a much larger and more powerful agency—the office presided over by E. Austin Baughman, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles. And that office has become, through successive amendments to the motor-vehicle code, virtually the high arbiter of the highways. It prescribes who shall be permitted to drive cars in the first instance; it keeps a constant watch over the army of more than 500,000 operators within the State to make sure that the laws are obeyed, and it metes out swift and vigorous punishment to those who disobey them; it may take away, for cause, the driving privilcges it has granted.

Not many of these powers belonged to the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles when that office was first established in 1909. Then it concerned itself chiefly with registering automobiles and collecting license fees from their owners. Governor Crothers, whose creation it was, expressed the hope that some day the office might turn over as much as $100,000 annually to the State Treasury. The office still conducts the routine business of registration and the collection of fees (last year its receipts were nearly $4,000,000), but to an ever-increasing extent its police and judicial functions have been gaining ascendancy. Now two large sub-divisions of the office concern themselves almost exclusively with the detection or punishment of offenders against the motor vehicles code.

The most familiar of these subdivisions, of course, is the State Police Force, for even the innocent motorist can scarcely be unaware of its existence. It was organized back in 1921 and strangely enough, the most effective arguments used by those favoring the establishment of such an organization had nothing to do with traffic control. In that year there had been a number of robberies and other crimes of violence in several of the rural counties and the cry went up for a State-wide police force to afford protection to those portions of the State where local authority was inadequate. There were some who feared that such an organization might develop into a band of "Cossacks," to be utilized for suppressing labor disturbances and for other questionable purposes. But the force was established and its subsequent evolution has quieted the fears of many of its original critics.

For those in command point out that instead of becoming a general State constabulary, the force, to an ever-increasing extent, has concentrated upon traffice control. At the outset most of the State troopers were deputized as peace officers in the counties in which they served; now they act in this capacity only in a few counties—chiefly in Western Maryland, where there are wide-open spaces in which local authority is almost non-existent. Capt. Edward McK. Johnson, the present commander of the force, discourages its participation in local police problems and nowadays, he asserts, the State patrolman is called into such cases only in emergencies or by accident. Naturally, State policemen are called upon to look out for wanted criminals and to cooperate in other ways with local authorities, but generally speaking their province is the highway.

And, Captain Johnson says, they do not confine their activities to the search for speeders, reckless driving and other violators of the traffic laws. A good part of their time is devoted to providing assistance and guidance for the large body of innocent motorists. As a matter of routine, the State patrolman is under Instructions to give aid, information, or advice whenever it is needed on the road. When an accident occurs he usually is present to see that the injured are cared for, to clear the road of obstructions so that other traffic may pass—and to make arrests if the circumstances so indicate.

Each of the nine substations, located along heavily traveled highways in all sections of the State, is an information bureau for bewildered travelers. The woman driver who has lost herself en route to Baltimore on the Conowingo road is speeded on her way by the State patrolman at Conowingo—albeit without much hope that she will be able to follow the straight road without a convoy. The doughty fishermen who have aroused sleepy troopers at 4 a. m. in an effort to find out where the best fishing grounds are receive the most expert advice available at the moment and are sent on their way. Every year thousands of motorists apply to the substations or the patrolmen for information, according to Captain Johnson, and whenever possible it is provided.

Aside from their routine duties, State policemen frequently are called upon to fill special assignments. They supervise traffic at fairs, race tracks, or other events at which crowds of motorists gather. They serve as escorts for notables and others not so notable who may be traveling on the highways in motor caravans. Although a special police escort is generally regarded simply as a bit of ostentation, Captain Johnson asserts positively that it is also a necessary precaution whenever automobiles travel in groups. In such cases, he points out, the caravan is very likely to become entangled with other traffic and accidents are quite likely to result. The State police like to be advised of any such movement of vehicles and whenever practicable they provide an escort.

One of the most difficult convoying jobs ever faced by the State force was the recent assignment to guide the refugees from the evacuated Bonus Army camps through the State. The assignment came without warning and little or no preparation was possible. To the State police fell the task of creating some semblance of order in thoroughly disorganized groups—and of keeping the groups moving until the State line had been passed. The job was accomplished quietly and efficiently.

After all, however, the main job of the State police is to watch for and arrest the exceptional motorist whose disregard of the rules of the road renders him a menace to other travelers. When such arrests are made the culprit is hailed before a local magistrate for a trial, and, if found guilty, the magistrate imposes sentence. But if the offense has been a serious one the motorist's troubles do not end with the prison sentence which may be invoked in some cases. After he is through with the magistrate he still must face the second disciplinary arm of the office of the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles.

The law provides that a driver's license is "subject to revocation" when he has been found guilty of such serious offenses as driving while under the influence of liquor, racing on the highways or failing to stop after an accident in which someone has been seriously or fatally injured. In all such cases, when the courts have found the motorist guilty, the Commissioner's office, regarding the law as mandatory, takes away the offender's license automatically. But for less serious offenses the law places the decision as to the status of the operator's driving privileges in the hands of the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles. The latter, for example, may at his direction revoke the license of a motorist convicted of having speeded in excess of 60 miles an hour; in fact, on his own initiative he has established a general rule that this shall be done. For lesser offenses which reveal the incompetency of the operator or for a succession of offenses which indicate that he is a menace to others on the road, a license may be revoked or suspended at the Commissioner's discretion.

The machinery by means of which this judicial function of the office operates is one which no convicted motorist is able to escape and one which involves as well a number of drivers who never have been called upon to answer traffic charges. In the department of investigation of the Commissioner's office there is a permanent record of every licensed operator in the State. Every traffic conviction—major or minor—comes into this department automatically to be scrutinized by the chief and to be entered on the driver's personal record card. Even the most trivial violation is duly noted. Many motorists have criticized the "red tape" which requires them to stop and present their credentials whenever a State policeman catches them driving with defective lights or obscured markers; but this is part of the system. Even though the trooper allows the motorist to drive on, the violation is reported to headquarters and is duly entered on a card.

The chief of this department of investigation (W. G. Noble is the incumbent) is the lord high keeper of the records and acts as Mr. Baughman's deputy in weighing the sins of the motorist and meting out the appropriate punishment. The daily grist from the Baltimore Traffic Court and from the county courts having jurisdiction in such cases come before him and he sorts them over carefully. The trivial offenses are passed over if the offender's previous record is reasonably clear. Those found guilty of serious offenses, however, usually are summoned to appear before Mr. Noble to present reasons, if any, why their driving permits should not be revoked or suspended. The hearings are brief and to the point and, except where there are extenuating circumstances, the nature of the offense itself, plus a consideration of the driver's previous record, usually determins the penalty.

Some of the victims of this system have complained that too much arbitrary power has been vested in the Commissioner and that his office is unduly harsh in its treatment of those who come before it. Indeed, in glancing over the weekly reports of suspensions and revocations, a disinterested person might assume that some of the punishments were out of proportion to the crimes. But Mr Baughman and Mr. Noble assert emphatically that, if they err in their judgments, it is on the side of leniency rather than of harshness. The cases which at first glance appear to involve extreme penalties are in reality extreme cases, they assert.

For example: One motorist has had his operating license suspended for thirty days for parking without lights. Most drivers, through carelessness or accident, have been guilty of the same offense at one time or another, and to them the suspension seems entirely unreasonable. Mr. Noble produces the record of this offender to justify his action. On the man's card are listed twenty-four separate offenses, ranging from parking without lights (a half dozen times) to participation in a fatal accident and reckless driving. The man, according to Mr. Noble, is a bad driver and as such is a menace to all careful drivers. He has been fined repeatedly in the traffic court, he has been warned over and over by representatives of the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles; but his bad habits have persisted. Appearing before Mr. Noble on a previous occasion he had been placed on probation—advised that his next offense, no matter how trivial, would result in the withdrawal of his driving privilege.

Dozens of similar cases might be dug out of the record books of the office, Mr. Noble asserts. Often the operator can go along for some time without committing a single act which, in itself, would warrant his being kept off the road. Yet a study of his record for this period might reveal him to be either incompetent or incorrigibly reckless. He may have a dozen or a score of relatively minor offenses listed against him—so many that all could not possibly have resulted from bad luck or the carelessness of others. When a record of this sort appears in connection with an otherwise minor charge, the Commissioner believes his duty is clear. The law places upon him the responsibility of protecting the law-abiding motorist and it gives him discretionary powers to aid in carrying out its mandate. Careless or reckless drivers may sometimes be curbed by a temporary suspension of their operators' license; outright incompetents and those who do not respond to milder treatment must be ruled off the road permanently.

Even though it may cause some motorists a bit of inconvenience Mr. Noble insists that it is necessary to keep a permanent record even of trivial offenses. Only by this means, he points out, is the Commissioner's office able to decide whether an individual motorist is the victim of circumstances or a weak moment or whether he is a habitual offender against the motor laws. If a driver has been warned repeatedly for driving with defective lights, for failing to stop at boulevard highways, or for other offenses of the sort, he is a bad driver and a menace to others, Mr. Noble asserts. And if the policeman who warns him does not also stop him long enough to inspect his credentials and make out a report of the warning, the Commissioner's office may be entirely ignorant of his previous "unofficial" record.

Like all agencies dealing directly with the public, the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles seems bound to come in for a share of criticism no matter what course he pursues. In addition to those who feel that he is too strict, there are others who accuse him of leniency in restoring driving privileges which have been withdrown. Usually these criticisms are voiced after an operator whose card has been returned gets into trouble again. Mr. Baughman and Mr. Noble estimate that only about five percent of those motorists who have been reinstated by the officer come back as second offenders—and they hold that this figure is remarkably low. The officer has set up machinery designed to make it extremely difficult for one whose card has been revoked to get it back again. In the first place application for reinstatement cannot be made for ninety days after the revocation has taken effect. Then the applicant must produce the signatures of three responsible citizens to a document stating that, in the belief of the signers, the offender is capable of driving within the law. Investigators from the office of the Commissioner then look into the applicant's habits and record and check up on the sponsors, often by means of personal interviews. If the inquiry results favorably the license usually is restored.

Some idea of the extent of this particular function of the office is revealed by last year's figures, which show that more than 12,000 penaltics were handed down, ranging from brief suspensions to permanent revocations. There is a growing list—now totaling some 5,000—of licenses marked "permanently revoked." Some of the former holders are known to be in the Penitentiary or insane asylums, while others have developed physical infirmities which will prevent them from driving again. Then there are, among this 5,000, a smaller number marked "never to be reinstated unless ordered by the courts." Most of these are the repeaters, those who previously have had their privileges restored and who for a second time have been convicted of major violations of the law.

In connection with the work of this department it may be noted in passing that the Motor Vehicles Commissioner believes that speed is responsible for more of the serious accidents on the highways today. Mr. Baughman is unalterably opposed to any upward revision of the present speed limit of forty miles an hour on the ground that to increase it would be to handicap police severely in their efforts to make the roads safe. While admitting that forty miles is a more or less arbitrary figure he insists that it is necessary to have some such standard and he is opposed to the adoption by Maryland of the Michigan or Connecticut laws which fix no limit but which prescribe heavy penalties for reckless driving. Reckless driving is an extremely difficult charge to sustain in court, he asserts. When the motorist so charged has several friends along, all willing to swear that he was not driving recklessly, the single officer's testimony usually does not prevail and the case is dismissed. When an officer presents a speeding charge, on the other hand, the magistrate does not have to rely solely upon verbal evidence. The officer may present the testimony of a speedometer to which is attached an automatic device for recording the maximum speed attained in "pacing" the defendant upon the road.

The fast driver—or even the drunken driver—may be, in other respects, a law-abiding citizen. But the office of the Motor Vehicles Commission also is called upon to concern itself with a lawbreaker who falls definitely into the category of criminal. He is the automobile thief and the dealer in falsified titles. Usually these two practices go hand in hand but not always, and the State police and special investigators must be on their guard constantly for either or both. Each year a number of stolen cars are returned to their owners as a result of their investigations and each year a number of arrests are made. A special squad of plainclothes troopers is kept busy constantly on work of this type and civilian investigators also assist in unearthing frauds or other illegal practices involving the motor vehicles code.

It has been noted that prosecutions of all motor vehicle code violations begin in the courts of local magistrates or justices of the peace, and over the findings of these dignitaries the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles has no control. Since each of these courts operates independently and since many of the penalty provisions of the law are very flexible, it is inevitable that the quality of the justice dispensed by the former is anything but constant. Motorists have added their complaints to the criticisms of competent students of the law in pointing out the defects of the system under which petty violations—including traffic violations—are handled. But the file of complaints in the office of the Maryland Automobile Club does not indicate that Maryland's justices are any worse than those of other States.

To the motorist the most confusing feature of the State's administration of the motor vehicle laws is the variety of procedures which may be called upon to face in the various municipalities and counties. In Baltimore City, of course, automobile cases are a specialized function of a Traffic Court and in some of the smaller cities a single police magistrate is designated to handle all cases of this type. In most of the counties the offender is brought before the nearest justice of the peace, where his case is heard and sentence imposed. In Montgomery and Queen Ann a single police magistrate sitting in the county seat hears all cases originating within the county. Prince George has a system all its own. There the defendant first is brought before a local justice of the peace or magistrate who simply fixes the bond or collateral and sets a date for trial. Then, at the date set, the offender appears before a special magistrate who rides a circuit of the county holding courts at various centers for one day in each week.

Those familiar with their operation point out serious defects in all of these county systems, In Montgomery and Queen Ann, for example, the motorist may be put to serious and unnecessary inconvenience if his alleged offense has been committed in a remote corner of the county, for the case must be heard at the county seat and nowhere else. The charge also has been made that in these two counties and in Prince George as well the prevalent custom of requiring a bond has given rise to practices akin to the "bonding rackets" familiar in some courts of higher jurisdiction.

This objection does not exist in those counties which permit the trial of motor vehicle cases by the nearest justice of the peace. Then the case is handled with a minimum of red tape and formality; but the latitude of the law and the temperament of the local judges result in many inequalities. As an exmaple it may be pointed out that in July two motorists were convicted of drunken driving in Baltimore City and both were given jail sentences. In all the counties, for the same month, there were 131 convictions for this offense and only eleven were sent to jail. The Baltimore Traffic Court has a definite policy in regard to such cases. The offender knows, positively, that he will be sent to jail if he is convicted. On the same charge in the counties he may receive either the minimum, which is a fine of $100, or the maximum, which is a $1,000 fine and a year in jail. The fact that so many county magistrates are satisfied to impose the minimum penalty may explain the fact that there were only two convictions on this count in the city, as against 131 in the counties, despite the fact that the population of the two divisions is approximately equal.

Purely from a legal point of view there are a number of observers who object to the justices of the peace because the latter are, in most cases, supported by the costs levied upon persons convicted before them. Some time ago this practice came to public notice when the Attorney-General, at the instance of the Automobile club, ruled that justices could not, under the law, levy costs alone, without fines, after a plea of guilty. By this practice some of the county justices had been increasing their incomes illegally, since the law makes the imposition of both penalty and costs mandatory when the defendant has been found guilty. Those who have criticized the "costs" system assert that no judicial officer should be in a position to profit by his own judicial acts. In fact, some critics well versed in the law have intimated that the existing system, since it violates a fundamentel principle of law, would not stand up under the scrutiny of higher courts.

Only In one or two small details does the office of the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles exert a measure of control over the local magistrates. It can, under the law, and does in practice, act as a guardian of the receipts of these minor courts. The magistrates and justices are required to turn over all fines and an accounting thereof to the commissioner and the latter several times has been compelled to bring pressure to bear upon those who have been tardy in making their returns or upon others who have levied fines less than the minimum prescribed by the law for the particular offense.

Taking all things into consideration, it is apparent that the office of the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles exerts a more direct and more effective control over the motorist of the State than does any similar agency over so great a percentage of the populace. Its powers are greater than mere police powers, for it acts in a judicial capacity as well. Mr. Baughman points out that there is an analogy in the control exerted by State mebical and bar associations over members of these professions. He asserts that the operation of a motor vehicle is a privilege, not an inherent right, just as the practice of medicine is a privilege granted only to those who have proved themselves proficient. And the doctor's license to practice, or the driver's to operate a car, may be taken away by the authorities which granted them for the same causes—violation of the rules of the game or incompetence.

The disciplinary functions of the office, Mr. Baughman asserts, have been built up for the purpose of enforcing as effectively as possible the provisions of the motor vehicles code. And the code, in turn, is chiefly concerned with making the highways safe. He points out that all of the activities of the disciplinary branches are directed toward this latter end; and that the end justifies the means even though some few mild offenders may suffer inconvenience, which, to them, seems unnecessary.

AUTHORITIES AT ODDS OVER POTOMAC FISHING

Maryland Contends Licenses are Necessary; West Va. Says Not

The placid waters of the Potomac and the fish in their depths, again are the subject of a controversy that has bobbed up repeatedly for generations —can Virginians and West Virginians fish in the stream without obtaining Maryland licenses?

Maryland officials say "no" and the attorney general's office in West Virginia says "yes" and stands ready to defend its contentions in any court of the land.

It all goes back 147 years to a time when fish pulled from the stream played a big part in stocking the larders of many Marylanders and Virginians.

Then, in 1785, representatives of the two states decreed that citizens of both states should enjoy common and equal fishing rights in the stream.

More than three-quarters of a century later the state of West Virginia was formed from a portion of the old state of Virginia and officials of the new state contended the fishing rights were extended to the Mountain State citizens.

Periodically the right has been questioned, the West Virginia attorney general's office says, and frequently West Virginians seeking to claim fishing rights under the old compact have been warned that they must obtain Maryland fishing licenses.

The Maryland supreme court ruled upon the controversy in a decision that the terms of the old compact relates only to tidal waters which end at Little Falls, four miles west of Washington. The West Virginia officials, on the contrary, hold that the compact covers the entire stream.

Conferences of officials of the three states, the attorney general's office said, resulted in "the uncompromising attitude of the officials of the state of Maryland in refusing to acknowledge that the compact of 1785 is applicable to the state of West Virginia."

Two methods of finally ending the controversy were proposed by Attorney General Howard B. Lee, in opinion written for the West Virginia game, fish and forestry commission by Assistant Attorney General W. Elliott Nefflen.

Institution of a suit in the United States Supreme Court to restrain Maryland officials "from interfering with the vested rights" of West Virginians under the old compact was one proposed method. The other would be to determine rights under the compact by institution of federal court habeas corpus proceedings if and when a West Virginian is arrested "for alleged violation of the fishing laws of Maryland."

GRANTSVILLE

Broadwater Family Reunion

The second annual reunion of the descendants of Cornelius Broadwater, who emigrated from England and settled in Loudon county, Virginia, in 1790, later coming to Allegany county, Md., with his four sons, Amos, William, Ephraim and Ashford, in 1807 to 1811, was held at Meadow Mountain Inn, five miles east of Grantsville, on the National Highway, Sunday, September 11. There were several hundred members of the family present and they all enjoyed an ideal day, renewing and making new acquaintances and partaking of the bounteous food prepared by each family present. The reunion was due to the untiring efforts of Manley J. Broadwater, Avilton, Md., chairman, and C. M. Broadwater, Cumberland, president.

The following officers were elected to serve for the ensuing year: C. M. Broadwater, Cumberland, president; Manley J. Broadwater, Avilton, vice-president; Ethel Broadwater, Grantsville, secretary; Darius Broadwater, Salisbury, Pa., chairman of the program committee.

It was decided to hold the reunion annually on the second Sunday in September at Meadow Mountain Inn, as it is one of the ideal spots in Garrett county and accessible to those living in Virginia, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Western Maryland.

The following program was rendered: Singing of appropriate songs by members of the New Germany church choir and others; recitation, by Max Broadwater; selections on guitars by Olin and Amos Broadwater, sons of C. M. Broadwater, Cumberland; recitation, Alfred Broadwater, New Germany; recitation, Miss Wiley, of New Germany.

Charles Stewart, of Frostburg, president of the board of County Commissioners of Allegany county, gave an eloquent address on the history of the Broadwater family as being leaders in the localities where they settled as upright, thrifty people and instrumental in the development of Western Maryland.

They carried with them that spirit of leadership both in a business way and socially, making the name of Broadwater the outstanding name wherever it was possible to do so.

The members of the Broadwater family greatly appreciate the kindness of Mr. Keefer, proprietor of the Meadow Mountain Inn, for the use of the grounds and other accommodations which he so generously gave them the privilege of using.

Grantsville School Largest in History

This year more students have enrolled in the Grantsville school than ever before in the history of the school. A total number of 372 students will be enrolled in the school within the next week or ten days. At present there are 365 boys and girls registered, with 7 more to enter soon. The enrollment is divided as follows: Elementary school, 1st grade with Miss Ferne Folk, instructor, 37; 2nd grade, Miss Mary Miller, instructor, 39; sixth and seventh grades, Miss Vivian Powers, 60, a total of 247. In the high school there are 125 students classed as follows: 1st year, 34; 2nd year, 31; 3rd year, 30; 4th year, 30.

Last year at this time there were only 197 in the elementary school and only 97 in the high school. At no time during the past year did the elementary school enrollment exceed 215 and the high school not more than 113.

It is well to note the economy program which has been adopted in the school. With a much larger enrollment there is still the same number of teachers in the elementary school, while the high school has one less instructor.

The principal is urging the parents to cooperate in keeping their children in school regularly. On the first day of school a call was given for field and soccer ball teams and in answer 28 girls, eight of whom were members of last year's team, responded, and 35 boys, ten of whom played with the team last year, came upon the field. Practice will continue each day at 3:00 o'clock with Mr. Mullinix in charge of the girls and Mr. Spoerlein coaching the boys.

This coming Friday the students will elect their class officers and members of the student council. The latter body will select one project which they consider most demanding and will attempt to solve this problem during the first semester; then will choose another project for the second semester.

The Maryland Public Library has made available to the Grantsville school students 125 books for their use. A fee of ten cents will be exacted from each student to cover losses and purchase magazines.

Professional faculty meetings will begin Tuesday evening, the 27th inst.

The Home Economics department has remodeled its room by repainting and repairing the furniture. This puts all of the rooms in the school building equal in equipment and in general appearance. This department plans to make the project "Science as Related to the Home" their display at the Garrett County Fair to be held at Oakland next week.

Allegany Tableland Fair

Mr. Cornell and Mr. Priddy, members of the Tableland Council of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, were in town on Friday afternoon, September 9th, and explained to a group of citizens the Allegany Tableland Fair to be held in Gimbel Bros. store in Pittsburgh on October 13, 14 and 15. This fair is to be a showing of Tableland products. Cash prizes are offered, ranging from 50 cents to $5, but the prizes are not the most important reason for showing, the real object being to bring the Tableland products to the attention of the Pittsburgh public and thus create a market. Explanations and entry blanks may be secured from a number of Grantsville business men.

Every farmer should consider this matter seriously and thoroughly inform himself of the opportunities awaiting him for immediate sale of his products.

SAFETY CAMPAIGNS MAKE FATAL ACCIDENTS LESS

Accidents Among School Children Especially Are Decreased

"When you see what the 'Safety' campaigns in the schools have accomplished in reducing the number of fatal accidents among children of school age, you wish that something equally effective could be done to reduce the number of fatal accidents that occur in the older age groups," Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health, said in commenting on the report recently issued by the National Safety Council, under the title, "Accident Facts."

"The safety education program in the schools became national in scope about 1924. From 1922 to 1930—the latest year for which such comparisons are available—the general death rate for accidents for people at all ages, increased 16 percent. During the same period, the general rate for accidents for children from 5 to 14 decreased 11 percent, and there is good reason to believe that a large part of this may be attributed to the habit of taking care, that is being developed among children by the safety drills.

"It is not surprising to find that the greatest increase in the deaths from fatal accidents at all ages has been due to automobile fatalities, but even here, the influence of the safety campaigns in the schools is noticeable. From 1922 to 1930, the rate doubled for auto accidents for persons at all ages; the rate for children from 5-14, increased only 4 percent.

"Our records for Maryland for 1931 show that out of a total of 21,768 deaths from all causes, there were 1407 from accidents of some sort. Automobile accidents were responsible for 467 deaths; railroad accidents, 74; railroad and automobile collisions, 14; street car and auto accidents, 14; and other land transportation, accidental deaths were 15. Accidents due to machinery caused 19 deaths, water transportation, 3, and air transportation, 2. There were also 279 deaths from falls, 141 from drowning, 131 from crushing, 88 from burns, and 81 from excessive heat.

"Out of 99,300 deaths due to accidents in the United States in 1930, 18,166, or nearly one-fifth, were due to falls. Of this total, 13,099, almost three-fourths, occurred among people 55 to 75 years old or older; 7,709—42 percent of the total—occurred among men and women 75 years old, or older.

"We have had much the same experience in Maryland as that reported by other States. Approximately one death out of every five due to accidents was caused by a fall, either indoors or out-of-doors. Since the greater number of injuries, fatal and otherwise, of this sort occurred among persons who have reached middle age, or who were older, it is apparent that the advice particularly needed by all in that age group is—'Watch your step.'"

TAXES AND POLITICS

Governor Roosevelt has made a great discovery, if we are to judge from his recent address opening the campaign at Bridgeport, Conn. That discovery discloses the fact that taxes are too high, especially State and local taxes. "The taxpayers, particularly the farmer, is blanketed by too many layers of local taxing authorities," the Governor is quoted as saying.

Then he continued: "My principle, however, and that of the Democratic Party, is * * * that the small farmer and the small home owner must be the object of our most careful solicitude in these times of distress and relief."

The good Governor then goes on to say that it is because the Republican Party has failed in its leadership in overcoming these things which the Governor has discovered to be wrong, that the people are going to turn to Roosevelt and Garner and the other Democratic leaders in the coming election.

Governor Roosevelt's statement that taxes are too high, especially local taxes, may have been a bombshell to that Democratic Connecticut audience, but it will not be any great surprise to any of the readers of The Republican. We have been stating for years that local taxes must come down, and newspapers and statesmen everywhere, regardless of party, have been saying the same thing. But until recently it has been like the weather, as Mark Twain once said—everybody talks about it but nobody does anything. Of late, because of new economic conditions, there has been a real effort here and there to reduce taxes.

Governor Roosevelt does not offer any new remedies for reducing taxes—probably because there are none, as he well realizes. He does say, however, that these taxes and the burdening of the farmer and the home owner are the fault of Republican leadership and for that reason the people are going to vote for a change this fall.

Well, let's see about that. Local officials, who spend the local money and levy the local taxes (where they are permitted to do so under the existing laws, as in Maryland), are by no means generally Republican. They vary in the different States and communities, with local political conditions. Nowhere in the country are people suffering from higher taxes and greater burdens of public debt than in the South, where Democratic leaders have been in undisputed control and possession of the public offices for a half century or more. And nowhere is there greater shrinkage in the value of municipal, county and State securities than in the South. The Northern states, of course, have their share of these tax burdens, too, showing that local extravagance is not a partisan matter by any means, but it is evident that if the people are depending on Democratic leadership to pull them out of local tax burdens and extravagance they are apt to be disappointed. The record is against them.

And to go a little nearer home to the good Governor, it occurs to us that we have heard quite a little complaint in past years about the burden of taxation in New York State, of which Mr. Roosevelt has been the chief executive for the past four years. And for local extravagance, if anybody has it on the Democratic organization in New York City and New York State in this respect, we would like to have his number. The same conditions also exists in Maryland where we have been under a Democratic State administration for a dozen years and no relief in sight for at least two years.

It is true that the home owner and the farmer are burdened by local taxation, but the homeowner and the farmer are in a great measure responsible for this themselves. They elect the local officials and demand improvements and the additional service which brings on these higher taxes. Improvement will not be brought about in a change of national political leadership, but in an aroused public economy in local affairs.

DIED.

Roy Wiland, 20 years old, was instantly killed at Grafton, W. Va., on Sunday night by Baltimore and Ohio train No. 1 as he was crossing the railway tracks in an automobile. JACOB LEO ECHARD

Jacob Leo Echard, 65 years of age, of Mt. Lake Park, died suddenly at his home Monday afternoon from a heart attack. He had an engagement to drive some friends to the country and was evidently about to enter his machine when he was stricken, as the door of the driver's seat was open and his body was discovered by Mrs. Walter G. Myers lying in the road.

Although he had been complaining somewhat of severe pains in his arms and about his neck and chest, he had not been incapacitated and was apparently in his usual health. He had been working at his farm on Monday morning.

The deceased was born near Hoyes, on August 12, 1867, and had been a life-long resident of the county. His father, Levi Echard, died about 20 years ago. His mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Echard, is now nearing her 92nd birthday and is in fairly good health.

In addition to his mother, he is survived by his widow, one daughter, Mrs. Frederick Peddicord, Oakland; and a son, Hugh E. Echard, of Mt. Lake Park.

Funeral services were held from his late residence Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, Rev. I. S. Middaugh, officiating. Interment was in the Oakland cemetery. Pallbearers were Messrs. H. V. Leighton, H. M. Weeks, H. L. Bittner, J. E. Chance, Lewis Killius, and A. C. Winters.

MEMORIAL HELD IN COURT IN HONOR OF E. Z. TOWER

Memorial Presented at Meeting of Court Officials Following Charge to Grand Jury

BRIEF ADDRESSES MADE

A memorial service in honor of the late Edward Z. Tower, for more than half a century connected with the office of Clerk of the Circuit Court for this county, as deupty clerk and later as the chief Clerk of the court, was held on Monday morning in the court room following the delivery of the charge to the grand jury by Associate Judge Albert A. Doub.

Resolutions were presented by F. A. Thayer, a member of a committee appointed by the Bar Association. E. R. Jones and W. R. Offutt delivered short addresses in honor of the deceased. Judges D. Lindley Sloan, A. A. Doub and Frank G. Wagaman, also spoke, paying high tribute to the late Mr. Tower as a citizen and public official.

The resolutions, printed herewith, after their presentation by Mr. Thayer were ordered spread upon the minutes of the Court, thus becoming a public and permanent record.

The preamble and resolutions were as follows:

Death, always an unwelcome visitor, has again obtruded his dread presence among us and has taken one whom the citizens of this county felt was almost indispensable in the office which he so satisfactorily filled for many years—Edward Z. Tower, late Clerk of this Court.

While Mr. Tower was a member of this bar, he never engaged in the active practice of law. Early in life, before any member of this bar now present was admitted thereto, he entered the Clerk's office of this Court, first as recording clerk; then as deputy clerk under hisf ather, the late William H. Tower; then upon the death of the latter was elevated to the office of Clerk of this Court by appointment of the Court. From thence on, without a break, he was elected and re-elected to that position for each sueceding term, and held the same at the time of his death: an uninterrupted occupancy of said office in said several capacities for more than fifty years. For forty-five years thereof he was Clerk of the Court, which no doubt is a record in the State of Maryland, and attested his popularity.

Mr. Tower was a most efficient, courteous and obliging clerk, always willing and ready to furnish the most humble citizen seeking it such information as the records of his office disclosed. The office, under his administration, was not only managed with skill and efficiency, but with great courtesy and assistance to the members of this bar and with proper respect to the Court; therefore be it

RESOLVED, That in the death of Mr. Tower this county has lost a valuable and efficient public servant; our town has lost a good citizen; this bar has lost a member and friend, and his family a kind, affectionate and indulgent husband and father; and be it further

RESOLVED, That the sympathy of this Court and the bar be extended to the members of his family and that this preamble and resolutions be spread upon the records of this Court and a copy thereof be given to his widow.

Another Outbreak of Hog Cholera in County is Checked

Another primary outbreak of hog cholera was discovered among a pen of pigs belonging to M. V. Kildow, and as a result probably ten of them will be lost to the owner.

Dr. O. K. Hoffman, federal veterinarian from Hagerstown, came to Oakland Monday at the request of J. H. Carter, county agent, to verify his diagnosis. Dr. Hoffman stated that the disease was due to the feeding of infected meat scraps. One animal had died and several others were sick before it was feared what the trouble might be.

No further danger is expected. In discussing the symptoms, Mr. Carter stated that as soon as the hog refused to eat, the owner should begin checking up on possible causes of this, because one of the causes is the beginning of hog cholera.

charged. You are the only official agency of this State that has the power of originating prosecutions and it is for you and for you only to determine whether the parties appear to have been guilty of the crimes for which indictments are sought to be found or not, and whether indictments should be returned upon which the parties should be arraigned and tried before the petit jury or not.

You will remember that your number is twenty-three and that a majority of your number is twelve. It makes no difference whether your number may be reduced by illness, absence or other cause, you can find no indictment unless twelve of your number vote in favor of the indictment. Probably information will be presented to you against particular individuals for larceny, for burglary, for incest and for other crimes that may occur from time to time, but it is not necessary for me to speak of such matters. I know that you understand the law with regard to such things, and that with the assistance of the State's Attorney you will take care of such matters as they may arise.

There is, however, one thing about which I want to say a word to you as grand jurors. You will noaice through the newspapers that the two great political parties have declared in favor of the repeal or modification of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act—one to repeal the Amendment and the Volstead Act and the other to replace another Amendment instead of the present amendment. Do not be in any way deceived by the public discussion of these matters. You are not in any way concerned in these matters. The Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution and the Volstead Act might be repealed tomorrow, yet your duty as a grand jury remains the same. Your duty is to enforce the laws and all the laws of Garrett county, and that duty involves the enforcement of the liquor law as well as of all other laws. The people of Garrett county are responsible for that law and they have said, through their legislature, that it is unlawful to sell intoxicating liquors in Garrett county without a license to do so, and that it is likewise unlawful to have intoxicating liquor in one's possession in Garrett county for the purpose of sale. You may be in favor of the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment; you may be in favor of the repeal of the Volstead Act, yet your duty as grand jurors remains the same. Therefore, I repeat it is for you to determine whether a prima facie ease is made out by the evidence presented to you. If you as grand jurors, feel that evidence has been presented to you sufficient to indicate that the law has been violated and that the accused person is probably guilty of such violation, it is your duty to find an indictment. The matter can then be presented before the petit jury for trial and it is for them to say, after a consideration of all of the testimony both for and against, whether the person accused is guilty.

The legislature has further said that we should charge the grand jury with reference to certain statutes. One of them is the crime of abortion. If evidence is presented before you indicating that any person or persons have been guilty of this offense you will be expected to give it your careful attention and to return indictments if the evidence in your opinion warrants.

The same applies to the offense of carrying concealed weapons. The practice of carrying concealed dangerous and deadly weapons is a very dangerous thing which in many instances leads to more serious crimes, because in the heat of passion the fact of having a dangerous or deadly weapon at hand is the cause of many crimes of vilonce, which might not have been committed had the guilty party had time to reflect.

It is the duty of the Clerk of this Court, the Sheriff, the Tax Collector and the County Treasurer to collect, receive and pa yover money to the State and by law it is made your duty to examine the books of such officer to determine whether such moneys have been properly accounted for and whether there are any defaulters and you will investigate accordingly.

The manufacture and sale of habit-forming drugs, such as morphine, opium, cocaine and the like, the use of which is dangerous and so destructive to the lives and happiness of our people is also forbidden by law, and this law is one which we are required to call to your particular attention. You will therefore look into this matter and make as full investigation as possible. If you find that any person has been engaging in this horrible traffic it will be your duty to return indictments in order that they may be tried, and if conviction is had, punished for the offense.

Up until a few years ago the Court was required to charge you with reference to the mining laws of Garrett county. The law has since been changed and amended, but we do want to ask you to call in the State Mine Inspector and make full inquiry as to whether these laws are being complied with, because neglect of proper precautions in the operation of the mines of the county may bring about suffering and death to great numbers of people engaged in the mining industry.

Now, gentlemen, I have nothing more to say except that I want to call your attention to the fact that it is your duty to be as expeditious in your deliberations as possible, having due reference to a full and efficient performance of the duties involving upon you.

It is the duty of the Court, it is the duty of the lawyers, of the School Board, and it is the duty of everybody that has anything to do with the expenditure of public moneys to reduce expenses to the lowest reasonable figure in these times of depression, and therefore I ask you to be as expeditions as possible in the performance of your duties, commensurate with the faithful performance with the faithful discharge of your duties as they may appear in connection with your service as a grand jury.

It will be your duty also to examine the Court House and Jail to see whether they are kept up properly, and to make any recommendations which you may think necessary.

You will now be given in charge of the bailiff who will conduct you to the grand jury room where you will take up the matters of public business which may be presented to you.

ROAD COMMISSION HAS $2,330,036 FOR HIGHWAYS

Will Be Expended in Next Three Months to Aid Unemployment

An Associated Press dispatch from Baltimore dated yesterday says that a total of $2,330,036 is held in hand by the State Roads Commission for relief of unemployment and increase in the volume of business of Maryland during the next three and a half months, according to an announcement made by members of the commission.

The commissioners said $1,207,850 was a portion of the large bridge bond issue for construction of 25 bridges throughout the state, $550,000 for highway maintenance in various portions of the State; $550,000 unallocated 1932 reconstruction fund; $324,000 new construction, reconstruction and road widening and $1,019,570 for the federal emergency road construction fund.

The largest amount, $1,577,616, was for sections of State highway allocated to various counties or Baltimore City for 1932 construction not yet advertised and for reconstruction or road widening.

Beyond the County

In New York, Col. Raymond Robins, famous social economist and prohibitionist, disappeared on his way to confer with President Hoover, a nation-wide search failing to clear up the mystery.

In France, a new campaign has been started against war debt payments to the United States, charging that the debt account submitted by the U. S. has proved "to be extraordinarily exaggerated."

In Chicago, three burial societies to which Caesar Milt belonged, hearing that he had died in a hospital, arranged for his burial and sent a dead wagon for him. The driver finding Milt alive tried to telephone his boss that the funeral was off, but was cut off. So the "corpse" mounted the driver's seat and when the hearse reached the church, the mourners were startled to see the "corpse" step down and shake hands with the nearest.

At Washington, West Virginia has been granted a loan of $400,000 for unemployment relief and Missouri $663,000 by the Reconstruction Refinance Corporation.

NEW BATTERY RADIO HAS TONE AND VOLUME COMPARABLE TO A. C. SETS

A remarkable new Battery Radio employing the late type "B" amplification, which provides ample volume for the average home has been developed by the Silver-Marshall laboratories in Chicago, according to an announcement by L. B. Shaffer, of Oakland.

This radio uses for power supply one of the new Everready Air Cell "A" batteries which eliminates all recharging and destructive acids that are associated with the common storage battery, yet gives 1,000 hours of service with a minimum of attention.

This new radio employs eight tubes, including new Variable-Mu R. F. Pentodes, which have a high amplification and a very low battery drain.

These coupled with the very latest Super-Hetrodyne circuit produces a radio that is very selective and sensitivity that is unsurpassed.

Equipped with low drain Dynamic speaker of special design and full tone control causes this radio to reproduce a program with amazing fidelity.

Due to several economies in battery consumption, this radio can be operated for less than the average A. C. set and is now on display at L. B. Shaffer's Jewelry Store in Oakland, Md.—Advertisement 31-1t.

THE MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY'S CORNER

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

At the annual meeting of the Maryland Bible Society, held in April, 1917, Dr. James Hart Hyatt was elected executive secretary of the Society.

Dr. Hyatt, who died in March of the present year, was an honored minister of the Baltimore Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He entered the Conference in 1898 and was sent as junior pastor to the Baltimore Circuit for one year. From 1899 to 1903 he served Brookland church, and in 1904 Gorsuch, both in the District of Columbia. His outstanding ministry was at Milton Avenue church, Baltimore, where, in a pastorate of nine years, he built a beautiful stone church and gave leadership of a very high order to that congregation. After a ministry of two years at Franklin Street church, 1915-16, he was called to the executive-secretaryship of the Bible Society, a position which he filled with marked success from 1917 until one year before his death.

Dr. Hyatt was a man of fine christian character, intense seriousness of purpose and unflagging devotion to his task. His zeal and fidelity to trust held him long after failing physical powers demanded release from responsibilities too great for his frail strength.

He was careful in the management of the Society's affairs, a conservative in all business dealings, and he sought always to build for the future while never neglecting the demands of the present. He won many friends for the Bible cause.

During his incumbency in office the Society made great progress along many lines, including improvements in its home, 9 E. Franklin Street, and better organization of its office procedure. Indeed it may be said that Dr. Hyatt's best memorial is his work of the last fifteen years as reflected in the advancement of the Maryland Bible Society.

Dr. Hyatt's service covered approximately one-eighth of the entire period af the Society's life. We may say of him and the goodly company who preceded him, "Other men have labored and we have entered into their labors."

Throughout the period of one hundred and twenty-two years of the organic life the Maryland Bible Society and its predecessors have faithfully striven to distribute the Word of God to men. No attempt has been made to place other religious works in the hands of the people, but the entire effort has been centered in the sale or gift to men of the Bible, the New Testament or smaller portions of the whole Bible.

The Society has been faithful to its duty in times of peace and has run to meet the greater emergency in time of war. In the Civil War and the great World War care was taken to see that the soldiers were equipped with "the sword of the Spirit which is the Word of God." The future is "bright as the promises of God," for the Society is not one whose life is alone in the past. Rather does it press forward to meet the needs of the future years, confident that the Lord who has blessed its work hitherto, will grant it still greater usefulness in the time to eome.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

Republieans all over the country are naturally delighted with the endorsement of President Hoover and his administration by former President Calvin Coolidge, in his article under the caption "The Republican Case," in a recent issue of the Saturday Evening Post. Mr. Coolidge not only endorsed the administration—he "gave his reasons." And the literary effort which he produced will go down through the eampaign alongside President Hoover's acceptanee address as a constructive political document.

Mr. Coolidge discussed every phase of the economic situation during the past four years, explaining the development of the depression step by step, with the remedies sought to be applied by the administration. And he did it in a calm and lueid way that will doubtless make a profound impression on the country—especially upon those Republican voters who may have been uncertain about their procedure in the coming election. The Coolidge article is designed to repair breaches in the Republican line, to assist in the building of a solid front for the coming campaign. This is sound political strategy, for if the Republicans do present a solid front they will win because of their natural numerical superiority.

One of the principal points of attack of the shallower critics of the administration has been efforts of the government to relieve the economic situation. Appealing to what they regard as popular prejudice these class agitators have charged that the administration has bent its efforts toward relieving the big financial institutions and the giant corporations, and has not attempted to rescue the "little fellow." The argumentt is silly and demagogic and falls of its own weight if the record is actually examined. Administration speakers have sought to counteract it and have met with some success but its constant repetition makes its appeal to those who never take the trouble to reason for themselves.

One of the high points in Mr. Coolidge's article Is the terse and lucid way in which he answers this class prejudice appeal. After pointing out that many unreasonable critics have criticized the admistration because help has been afforded the banks, the railroads and the insuranee companies rather than individuals, Mr. Coolidge says:

"When a person is suffering from hunger, the common-sense method of relief is to put food into the stomach whence it is sent into all parts of the body. Under the method of relief that is proposed for the body politic by the critles, instead of providing food in this way to nourish the hands and the feet, I suppose that the needle would be used to Inject the nourishment into the fingers and toes. Under such a treatment the whole body would soon perlsh and the fingers and toes would become useless. The policy of the President has been to place nourishment in the digestive organs of society in order that through the natural distribution of the channels already in existence the whole body would be strengthened and able to function in the usual way."

Here is an illustration so simple and logical that anyone can appreciate its force, followed as it is in the discussion by a comparison of the present situation in the United States with that of other nations of the world where currencies have depreciated and revolution has run riot.

Mr. Coolidge's defense of the protective tariff is admirable and the figures he quotes successfully contradict the arguments of the free traders that the Smoot-Hawley tariff has ruined our foreign trade. And Mr. Coolidge effectually disposes of the bitter personal criticism which has been directed against the President by pointing out that criticism no less personal and no less violent was directed during their official life against George Washington, Abraham Lincoln and Woodrow Wilson. Of the latter Mr. Coolidge naively remarks, in speaking of the "defeatists," "Wilson had them during the war to such an extent that he found it necessary to turn over the conduct of important legislation to Republican leadership. We have them at the present time doing their best to capitalize distress and preaching the overthrow of our system of econoimcs and government."

Attractive Looking Varnish Tree Is Adapted to Certain Parts of State

A varnish tree, Koelrentaria paniculata, is a handsome small growing tree, which is much used in the West, particularly the middle portions, where it is noted for its drouth resisting qualities. It is not considered a long lived tree but is easily grown from seed planted in the fall of the year.

The foliage is of a dark green color and has a pinnate leaf. The large showy clusters of yellowish flowers are followed by a three celled pappery like husk containing small round black seeds. The tree is rather closely related to the sumacs and it is frequently scen in sections of Maryland that are more or less hot and dry.

Homemakers' Column

From the homemaker's standpoint, the tomato is a satisfactory articele of food because it can be used in so many ways. Raw, cooked, or canned, it furnishes a welcome contrast to many other vegetables, both in flavor and color. And it can be served at any meal or in any part of any meal. It is the only common vegetable that may be safely canned at home without a pressure cooker. Thus it can be put away for use in winter when fresh vegetables and fruits may be out of season or out of reach because of cost.

Tomato, Corn and Cheese on Toast

3 tablespoons flour, 3 tablespoons melted butter or other fat, 1 onion, sliced, 2 cups tomatoes, fresh cooked or canned, 2 cups corn, fresh cooked or cannd, 2 teaspoons salt, ¼ pound sharp cheese, shaved thin.

Brown the flour in a frying pan, remove the flour from the frying pan and blend with 2 tablespoons of the fat. Brown the onion In the remaining fat, add the other ingredients exccpt the cheese, and cook for about 10 minutes. Stir in the cheese and when melted serve on thin crisp toast.

Broiled Tomatoes

Wash tomatoes, remove stem ends, cut in half, put in a greased shallow baking dish, add salt, pepper, and melted butter or other fat to season, and place under the flame of a broiling oven, far enough from the heat to allow the tomatoes to cook before browning. Broil for 20 to 30 minutes, or until tender and lightly browned. Serve hot, garnished with parsley on crisp buttered toast.

Baked Eggs in Tomato Cups

Scoop out the centers of large, firm, ripe tomatoes. Sprinkle the tomato cups lightly on the inside with salt and dot with butter. Break an egg into each tomato, sprinkle with salt, pepper, and fine dry bread erumbs, and dot with butter. Bake in a moderate oven until the tomato skins are slightly wrinkled.

Stuffed Tomato Salad

Select large ripe tomatoes. Skin the tomatoes, cut a round piece from the stem end, and remove enough of the pulp to make a cup. Season inside with salt, turn the tomatoes upside down to drain, and place in the refrigerator until time to serve. If a hearty salad is desired stuff the tomato shells with cottage cheese, or a filling of chopped cooked meat, fish, or crab meat, diced cucumber, chopped celery or some cooked green vegetables, the tomato pulp, and thick salad dressing. For a less substantial salad, use only vegetables in the stuffing. Fill the shells with the mixture, add a spoonfull of dressing on the top of each stuffed tomato, and serve on crisp lettuce leaves.

BITTINGER

A very large congregation attended the morning service at the local Lutheran church in Bittinger on Sunday when the pastor, Rev. David E. Straesser, a recent graduate of Gettysburg Seminary, was installed by Rev. Charles G. Aurand, president of the West Virginia Synod of the United Lutheran Church in America. Rev. Straesser becomes pastor of not only the Bittinger church but also of the churches at Jennings and Meadow Mountain, succeeding the Rev. E. E. Campbell, who on account of failing health and advaneing years, resigned from the pastorate of the Bittinger parish several months ago.

Mrs. Josephus Glotfelty spent last week visiting her daughter, Mrs. Roy Hetrick, at the daughter's home in Salisbury, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. James Frye, of Braddock, Pa., are visiting relatives here for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Roger Powell, of Frostburg, were guests of Mrs. Francis Bittinger and son Asa over the week-end.

Rev. David E. Straesser enjoyed a visit from his father, mother and sister, who motored to this village from their home at Curryville, Pa., last Sunday morning, returning in the evening.

The members of the local Luther League met on the Engle farm near Bittinger and enjoyed a corn roast and a general good time around a huge fire one evening recently.

Samuel D. Brenneman, of the Amish Settlement, near here, who has been seriously Ill for some days, is now reported as being better.

The village school opened formally last Tuesday morning with Mrs. Bessie Baker in charge and with an enrollment of forty pupils.

Prof. Aiken, principal of the Accident high school, visited prospective students in this neighborhood last Saturday afternoon.

The Meadow Mountain Lutheran congregation will hold their regular annual church picnic In their pleasant grove next Saturday, September 17., and the good people of that community should have the patronage of the public.

THE REPORTS OF THE SPIES

GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? the Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?

LESSON TEXT—Numbers 13:17-14:45.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Two Brave Spies.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Scouting Through the Promised Land.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Brave and the Cowardly Scouts.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How Faith Gives Courage.

I. The Spies Sent Out (13:17-20).

Less than two years have passed since the Israelites were delivered from Egyptian bondage. They are now at Kadesh-barnea within sight of the Promised Land. Moses urged them to go in and take immediate possession (Deut. 1:21). But they failed to do so because of unbelief (Heb. 3:19). The record in Deuteronomy 1:19-25 shows that God did not take the initiative in sending out the spies, but that the people, because of lack of faith, made the request. There was a threefold purpose in sending out the spies:

1. To see whether the land was as God had told them (v. 18).

2. To see whether the people who dwelt there were strong or weak, few or many (v. 18).

3. And to see whether the cities were made up of strongholds or of tents (v. 19).

II. The Commission Executed (13:21-23).

They entered the land from the south and traversed it to its northern limits. On their return they gathered some specimens of fruit.

III. The Spies Rendered Reports (13:26-33).

On their return this committee of explorers rendered both a majority and minority report to the entire congregation (v. 26).

1. The majority report (vv. 26-29).

a. "The land floweth with milk and honey" (v. 27).

b. The people who live there are strong (v. 28).

c. The people live in walled cities (v. 28).

d. The land is inhabited by giants (v. 28 cf. v. 33). In comparison with the inhabitants they saw themselves as grasshoppers. Furthermore, they saw the people so distributed that it seemed impossible to conquer them.

2. The minority report (vv. 30-33). This report in part agreed with the first. It did not ignore the difficulties nor dispute the facts, but it did deny the conclusion of the majority. They did not minimize the task before them, but asserted that with God's help they were well able to get possession of the land, and therefore urged immediate action.

IV. The Rebellion of the People. (14:1-44).

1. This rebellion began by crying (vv. 1-3). They even wished that they had died in the wilderness or in Egypt. God took them at their word. He sent them back to wander in the wilderness for thirty-eight years, during which time all of that generation died except Caleb and Joshua.

2. Proposition to return to Egypt (vv. 4-10). They proposed to select a captain as their leader. Joshua and Caleb protested against this, which so exasperated the people that they were about to stone them when God manifested his glory before all Israel in vindication of the loyalty of Joshua and Caleb.

3. God's wrath upon the people (vv. 11, 12). Because of their unbelief God purposed to smite them with pestilence, disinherit them, and supplant them with a nation mightier than they.

4. Moses' intercession in behalf of the people (vv. 13-19). Moses plead with God against this judgment because the Egyptians would hear of it and blaspheme and this they would pass on to the other nations, saying that God was not able to bring them into the land.

5. The Lord's response to Moses' plea (vv. 20-30). He assured Moses that he had granted pardon according to his intercession but told him that although he would bring them into the land according to his promise, yet with the exception of Joshua and Caleb the men of that generation should be debarred.

6. The presumption of the people (vv. 40-44). Having in unbelief refused to go up at the command of Moses, they now in presumption go.

V. The People Smitten by the Amalekites and Canaanites (v. 45).

Because the people refused to heed Moses and presumptuously attempted to go up, God permitted the Amalekites and Canaanites to come down upon them to their destruction.

RANDOM THOUGHTS

There is never a gospel in a growl.

The man who forgets to pray may regret that he has lived another day.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

Ho, hum! What to write about this week? Were it not for my public I don't think I would say anything.

I've been staring out of the middle window for a long time, but nothing interesting has passed but the garbage wagon, and that is interesting only to the one who sits behind and gets the eternal whiff of soured conglomeration. What an abnormal nostril he must have! I'll bet watermelon rind of two weeks ago smells sweeter to him than violets.

I might get up a story about the Boss Editor having a tire and rim stolen off his automobile last Saturday night in front of his house, but he is rather touchy on the subject and might not appreciate the joke. I might add, however, that the tire and rim were both new.

Or again, I might say something about the one-legged man who worked a confidence game on Harry Miller, Henry Lauer, Ray Teets and a few others of town last week and carted away some good sized sums of currency, but they might think I was trying to make them out as suckers, so I'd better pass that up.

I might tell about getting my pants caught in the barbed wire fence on Sunday afternoon chasing a baseball, but that was no joke on me, and probably sad news to a lot of folks because I didn't crack my skull, and good news to Harry Sincell because I'll have to buy another pair, so I couldn't make much out of that.

There's a story about a cat Elmer Ault sold to the Piedmont Grocery Company's manager. He sold it as one cat but shortly after it was delivered Mr. Michael had a whole flock of cats. But that story is several months old, and most everybody in the country gets too many cats. I'll have to think of something else.

There's a possibility in the story about George Giessman getting his coat stolen—the one with Herbert Hoover's enlarged picture on the lapel. If the person who hooked it had only substituted a photograph of Mr. Roosevelt and returned it, but he did not. It was returned "as was," so there goes another opportunity for a real story.

I might tell what it feels like to stay up all night, but that's nothing new to a lot of readers of The Republican and their feelings would probably be more exciting than mine.

Might tell you that many of our confirmed old bachelors are expecting to attend the fair and visit all of the shows, but you probably already know that they will do just that.

I could tell you about the advertisement for "Titus-Pearls" that The Republican threw in the waste basket and the Democrat published. A letter received here the other day stated "Every publisher who was gullible enough to accept this order should be compelled to eat a dozen boxes of these miraculous pills that restore glands, bring back vital physical powers and remove dizziness and depression." But it wouldn't be exactly right to picture Editor Willie eating those dozen boxes or to try to conjecture the result following digestion, so that's out of the running for this week.

Maybe you'd like to know how to scrape varnish from old beds so they will ultimately appear as modern antiques. I don't know myself what the successful way is; I'm just trying. So I'll let that go until next week.

The bootlegger is always an interesting subject, but Judge Sloan will probably tell them plenty next week, and there's no use rubbing it in.

One day last week a stranger approached me. He had my name written down (misspelled, by the way), and said a friend of his told him that I would recommend him to a certain bootlegger in this town so that he could get something to drink. If I thought that would be as funny to you as it was to me, I would tell you about it. I am afraid to estimate just exactly what weight a recommendation from me would carry with any of the bootleggers around here, but I don't suppose they would receive it with open arms and a key to the cellar. But the stranger did tell me where to get it, which confirmed an age-old suspicion.

A fellow called here Saturday from the Gorman community. Said he couldn't get anybody to help him thresh this year. Everybody he asked said they didn't have to work to get food to keep them; that they received flour each week from the government through the Red Cross. He told some other stories about two unmarried people, living together, who got three bags of flour a week; about a man feeding flour to his dogs; about trading the flour for moonshine to get drunk on. But that isn't the fault exactly of the Red Cross. It's the fault practicallyy of all the working people of the country.. They are making lazy and shiftless men for the future and the action of these lazy men is hurting those who are hard working when they get the chance, but who are temporarily in want. But I'll get into deep water if I say much more about this, so maybe I'd better change the subject.

In a Massachusetts town not far from Boston there is a substantial bungalow that has been built by its owner entirely from newspapers—newspapers that have been rolled up and pressed and varnished to the point where they became serviceable building material. Even the furniture in the house is made entirely of pressed newspapers.

That's an idea. If I don't get that house soon, I'm going to build one out of Republicans. I might do that about the furniture, anyway.

Ho, hum! Wish I could think of something to write about. Maybe something will turn up next week.

MT. LAKE PARK

All too frequently we express regret on the death of an acquaintance or a passing friend, in a perfunctory manner. But this is not true in the present instance, as no one who knew Jacob L. Echard can but deeply regret his passing. He was that type of man with whom it was good to be in daily contact. Always cheerful, always pleasant, in good health and ill, in affluence and in adversity; accommodating, always ready to oblige; reliable, honest. In short, a good citizen of the highest type, one who will be missed, not alone by his family and intimate friends, but by the community at large.

We have always contended that good fishing in any county is a source of much revenue. There is proof of this in the statement made by Swepson Earle, Conservation Commissioner, who stated in a report that anglers spent more than $100,000 in one week in pursuit of this pastime in fishing trips in the Chesapeake Bay and its tidal tributaries.

No county in the State, excepting, of course, the shore counties, has a finer opportunity of developing a paying business than has Garrett. With the finest inland body of water in the State, natural habitat for game fish, it would seem that an opportunity is being neglected.

The report further states that approximately 9,000 of the 17,000 persons who engaged in fishing for this one week, remained at boarding houses and hotels for at least two days and spent at least $5.00 a day for board and lodging and incidentals. This item alone put $45,000 a day in circulation. If we could do one-tenth the business it would pay big.

SECOND WEEK OF CIRCUIT COURT NOW IN SESSION

Criminal Docket Was Called on Monday Morning and Many Cases Have Been Disposed of

JUDGE SLOAN IS PRESIDING

The second week of the Circuit Court for Garrett county convened Monday morning at which time Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan appeared upon the bench and has been conducting the business of the court.

With the reconvening of Court on Monday members of the petit jury reported, but very few cases have been tried before them, the majority of those indicted for offenses by the grand jury either entering pleas of guilty or electing to be tried before the court in lieu of a jury trial.

Cases disposed of up to the hour this paper goes to press are as follows:

An appeal case, in which Louis Waingold, found guilty by Justice Kimble of a violation of the automobile laws and fined $300 by the justice, was tried before the Court who reversed the decision of the justice and declared Waingold not guilty.

Frank Sereno, sale of liquor; confession of guilt entered; $100 and costs.

In the case of John Wilburn, Cecil Wilburn and Thomas Hoover, charged with larceny and receiving stolen goods, the Wilburn brothers were found guilty and sentenced to one year in the Maryland House of Correction. Hoover was likewise found guilty as charged but his sentence was suspended for three years.

Roscoe Runion, Alvin Runion and Ezra Liller, for larceny and receiving stolen goods, each entered pleas of guilty and sentenced to 18 months in the House of Correction, with a suspension of sentence for three years contingent upon their good behavior during that time.

John Long, indicted for burglarizing the filling station of James Walters at Deer Park, was sent to the Maryland Training School for Boys until he arrives a the age of 21 after he had confessed his guilt to the Court.

John Fazenbaker, indicted for assault upon a woman at Bloomington with intent to kill, entered a plea of guilty to the fifth count of the indictment.

Charles Walcott and Laura Walcott, manufacture of liquor; $200 and costs.

PLANS FOR EIGHT-COUNTY FAIR BEING PUT IN SHAPE

Entries From Exhibitors Already Being Received—Decorators To Arrange Fair Booths

TO BE OCTOBER 13, 14, 15

Elaborate plans for the eight-county fair which the Allegheny Tableland Council of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce will sponsor at Gimbel's store in Pittsburgh on October 13, 14 and 15, are rapidly being whipped into shape, and it is promised that every man, woman and child from the Tableland will have the time of his or her life when visiting the fair.

Entrry blanks from prospective exhibitors are already being received at the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, for the prizes offered are so liberal that any man or woman who has produce to exhibit is tempted to make at least one entry.

For instance, a first prize of five dollars is offered for the best peck of wheat, and another five dollars for the best three cucumbers, and another five dollars for the best peck of potatoes. And similar prizes are offered in all the fifty or more classes listed in the premium list.

And who wouldn't take a chance of winning a first prize of three dollars on the display of a dozen eggs, or four dollars for the best exhibit of a woman wouldn't be tempted to send an exhibit of her choicest jellies or canned fruits when she knows that she may win a prize of four dollars, and at the same time have a chance to sell the lot for actual cash? It is a chance for people of the eight Tableland counties to get their products before the buying public of Pittsburgh.

Men and women of Garrett county are urged to send in their entry lists. Copies may be had from the County Agent or from the Secretary of the Allegheny Tableland Council, Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce. Or, if

Local Fire Department Answers Two Calls During Week

The Oakland Volunteer Fire Department answered two out-of-town calls during the past week, one of which was serious, resulting in the destruction of the Alpine Mills at Terra Alta.

The first alarm was given Friday afternoon when it was discovered that some grass near the Bolciano home in Loch Lynn had become ignited. This was soon extinguished.

The second call came at three a. m., Saturday morning from Terra Alta, W. Va. A record run was made to Terra Alta, but flames had gained too great a headway. The walls of the structure did not fall, but the interior was gutted, destroying much valuable machinery. Recently the property was leased from the owner by someone residing in Pennsylvania who had a number of men making the necessary repairs to resume operations in the mill. It had not been in operation for two or three years.

Fall Program Gets Under Way in Local Scout Troop

A fall program of competition among the patrols of the local Boy Scout troop, which will continue until the first of the year, when prizes will be awarded to the winning patrol, was inaugurated last Friday evening.

The regular members are bringing new scouts into the troop in response to the request of the national scout executives for a larger membership. Three boys to join the troop lately are Robert Broadwater, John Darby and Howard Smouse.

During the next month officers for the ensuing year will be chosen and all four patrols reorganized. Several scouts who have not been attending meetings or taking an active part in the work since their return from the summer encampment, will be dropped, to make room for new members.

Foster O. Speicher, Friendsville high school instructor, is planning to form a scout troop at Friendsville.

EXHIBITS ABOVE PAR AT SIXTEENTH ANNUAL FAIR

Carnival to Remain on Grounds Until Saturday Evening—Entertainment is Good

PARADE HELD YESTERDAY

The sixteenth annual Garrett county fair, which opened on Tuesday morning, will continue until tomorrow evening, and carnival attractions will remain until Saturday night, Henry M. Speicher, general manager, has announced.

Exhibits Are Above Par

That all departments were filled to overflowing was stated by department managers, with improvement noted in most cases. "The exhibits have been well above the average and surpass expectations," Mr. Speicher said. "The exhibit building is completely filled and the barns housing the live stock are not able to hold all of the exhibits.

"Farm products seem to be of as good quality as last year and there are some excellent exhibits among the horses and sheep. The 4-H clubs, home economics clubs and agriculture classes have very good exhibits.

Judges have been busy during the past two days in making awards and they will be announced in next week's issue of The Republican.

Prof. S. B. Shaw, chief inspector, State department of markets, who judged the farm products told Mr. Speicher that he had judged at all the fairs of the state and that Garrett county products were well above the average and the best in the state in some respects.

Entertainment is Good

The Roberts and Ramish Shows are considered to be above the ordinary run of carnival shows and have some good entertainment for those attending the fair. In addition to a number of shows and concessions there are four rides, including a Ferris wheel, merry-go-round, chair plane and tilt-a-whirl.

At Parsons, W. Va., where the carnival played during the fair there last week, W. T. Taylor, manager, had the following to say:

"The Roberts and Ramish Shows of Baltimore, furnished all rides, concessions and shows and never has there been a better line-up of amusements. The shows cannot be placed in the usual class of carnivals. Its shows and concessions are of the highest type and can be patronized by the women and children without the least fear of seeing or hearing anything of an objectionable nature."

School Day Was Wednesday

On Wednesday morning a parade of all school children was held, including students from Loch Lynn, Deer Park, Crellin and a few other elementary schools, Oakland grammar and Oakland high schools. The Oakland Boys' Band and the Crellin Band and two musical organizations attached to the R. and R. shows, participated in the affair. All children of school age were admitted to the fair grounds free of charge following the parade.

"During all the years of my management I have never received such wholehearted cooperation on the part of the business men and people of Oakland," Mr. Speicher said. "Not once did I hear anybody knock or make light of the Fair. Everybody was willing to help in some way."

It is thought the disease has been successfully checked.

FORM COMMERCIAL CLUB AT MEETING ON MONDAY

Purpose Is To Boost Anything For Good of Garrett County

At a meeting of a number of citizens of Oakland held in the City Hall Monday night the Garrett County Commercial Club of Oakland, was formed with Carlton McComas, president; Frank A. Smouse, vice-president; A. T. Shaw, secretary, and Geo. Littman, treasurer.

The club has for its purpose the boosting of Garrett county through any way it can, and the first project undertaken was the display of a booth at the eight-county fair in Pittsburgh on October 13, 14 and 15, showing Route 37, "The Scenic Highway of the Tableland," Deep Creek Lake, Oakland and intervening points of beautyy and interest to the tourist and the traveling public.

The details are to be worked out by the board of directors which is composed of the officers and one more member, the mayor of Oakland. The organization decided that the mayor of Oakland would be the fifth member of the board automatically upon his election each term.

Those present at the meeting included F. A. Smouse, C. N. McIntire, A. T. Shaw, R. L. McComas, Grover C. Stemple, Daniel P. Smouse, T. E. Bullard, Eddie Frye, Walter Hardesty, C. H. Browning, William Gibson, C. F. White, H. C. Sincell, L. M. Fraley, George H. Hanst and S. H. Jackson.

FIREMEN TO HAVE CHARGE OF HALLOWE'EN JUBILEE

Fifth Annual Celebration Is Being Planned—Committee Is Named and Work Started

PLAN MAMMOTH PARADE

That the annual Hallowe'en celebration would be held this year and that the Oakland Volunteer Fire department would sponsor the event was announced following a meeting of that organization.

William R. Browning has been appointed chairman of the executive committee, and preliminary plans are being laid by him and other members of his committee.

Mammoth Mummers' Parade

The big feature of the celebration will be the mammoth mummers' parade about 7 o'clock in the evening, the same as in previous years. There will be a number of prizes offered to the best four of seeing or hearing different organizations and individuals. Last year approximately 75 prizes were offered for attractions in the parade and at the dance, and the procession last year was one of the longest in the history of Oakland.

Second street will be roped off as usual for the street carnival and there will be a number of concessions and amusements along the thoroughfare. A dance is being planned for the latter part of the evening.

This is the fifth annual celebration on Hallowe'en and attracts a large number of people to Oakland. The celebration was started four years ago by the Knights of Pythias lodge. Three years ago it was turned over to the fire department, although one year the Boys Band organization was included.

Hallowe'en, October 31, falls on Monday this year.

WOMAN IS HELD IN DEATH OF FARMER OF BITTINGER

Chauncey Broadwater Dies of Poison After Writing Note Accusing Annabel Bowser

DENIES ANY CONNECTION

Garrett county authorities will await the action of the grand jury in their effort to determine whether Chauncey R. Broadwater, 42, of near Bittinger, was given or took the poison that caused his death about 1 o'clock Monday morning.

Broadwater had been calling on Miss Annabel Bowser, aged 43, Sunday evening, and while there had eaten some pears and drank some water. Feeling ill, he returned to his home, wrote a note charging Miss Bowser had poisoned him, and died early Monday after suffering with convulsions.

Miss Bowser has denied having any connection with the death; and told police that Broadwater attempted to commit suicide several weeks ago with a shotgun because he needed money and she would not marry him.

She was released Tuesday afternoon under $5,000 bond after Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan signed writ of habeas corpus.

When the woman was told of the death of Broadwater by Sheriff Walter W. Dawson, she said he must have become angry because she would not "sit up" with him that evening.

When Broadwater returned home Sunday night, it was said, he awoke his children after writing the accusing note. The children summoned Dr. N. R. Davis, from Grantsville, and surrounding neighbors.

Following the man's death a coroner's jury with Justice of the Peace W. A. Gonder reported the death due to strychnine poisoning.

Broadwater's wife died last winter, leaving her husband with six children, the oldest of whom is 16.

Broadwater's viscera has been sent to Baltimore for analysis.

Funeral services for the deceased were held this morning from the Bittinger Lutheran church. Rev. Ed. Walls, Dunkard minister, preached the service. Interment was made in the Bittinger cemetery.

"I didn't do it," Miss Bowser stated emphatically, when interviewed on Tuesday afternoon. "The man wanted me to marry him and I wouldn't do it. He called at our house Sunday evening before I got home. When I came home I remained with the family all the time until I went to bed. Broadwater stayed even after I went to bed, and when he left home about 9 o'clock my mother said he was feeling fine. He must have taken something after he started home, or after he reached it.

"It must have been his idea of getting revenge for me not promising to marry him. I never kept any poison in the house and never got any. Unless he got poison and forged my name, they'll never find my name in any drug store. If they find poison in his stomach, I guess there'll be a trial. If not, I guess they'll let me go home soon."

Miss Bowser said she was 43 years old. She is about five feet five inches tall, rather plump and extremely pleasant to talk with. She said her lawyers told her not to say anything, but she just had to let the people know that she "didn't do it."

Miss Bowser is a daughter of the late Perry Bowser, and is considered quite well-to-do.

4-H Club Girls Selling Cup Cakes At County Fair

Members of the 4-H Clubs of Garrett county have a special display at the county fair this year and are also selling cup cakes.

The display is in the Community Booth building. An electric refrigerator and electric stove have been loaned to the girls by the West Penn Power Company and have also donated an electric beater, which will be given away on the last day of the fair, Friday afternoon, September 23, at four o'clock.

The work is in charge of Catherine Moon and Beatrice Schnopp, of the Oakland Club, and they are being assisted by Pauline Wolfe, Virgina and Maxine Mason, of the Oakland Club, and Catherine Moomaw, of the Mt. Lake Park Club. An educational exhibit of dresses adjoins the display.

A Flaming Month In Maryland's History

NORTH POINT AND FORT M'HENRY IN THEIR STIRRING DAYS

By JAMES E. HANCOCK,
In the Baltimore Sunday Sun, Sept 11

August 15 to September 15, 1814, was a fateful month for the United States of America. For over two years this country had been at war with Great Britain in an effort to break away from her economic and maritime domination. It was our Second War for Independence from that powerful nation and we had almost exhausted the Federal Treasury by the wastage of several unsuccessful campaigns against Canada.

The British fleet had been blockading the Chesapeake from the very beginning of the conflict, hoping to keep the Baltimore privateers from sailing, and their activity had compelled the merchants of this city to build a fleet of gunboats that was placed under the command of Commodore Joshua Barney for counterattack against the British ships that were in the bay. This flotilla was manned by Baltimore seamen and had done effective work in the spring and summer of 1814.

But in early August the British were heavily reinforced by an additional squadron with Nelson's Marines and a division of Wellington's Invincibles, that had just been released from the War against Napoleon. This greatly superior force drove Barney into the Patuxent and followed him up the river until he was compelled to abandon and burn his vessels to save them from capture. The British then landed their troops at Benedict and followed Barney's Sea Fencibles to Blandensburg, where they met and defeated the American Army that had been hastily assembled to protect the city of Washingon. The next day th eenemy captured Washington and burned the public buildings, including the Capitol, the White House and the Treasury and forced President Madison and the Cabinet to flee into Virginia. Returning to their ships, Admiral Cockburn announced that they would next take and burn Baltimore.

Not only had Baltimore built and sent to sea more privateers than any other city in America, but some of these privately armed vessels had gone to the British Coast and had developed the particular anger of the British Government by taking a number of British prizes in the English and the Irish Channels.

With no hope of aid from an exhausted Federal Treasury and with less than 500 Federal troops in the Chesapeakc district, the State of Maryland appropriated a half million dollars and the people of Baltimore subscribed another million dollars for local defensc, and every able-bodied citizen was ordered out to serve either in the army or build fortifications around the town.

Picture a quiet Sunday morning, September 11, 1814. Baltimore had been anxiously awaiting the news of the enemy's approach for over two weeks. The churches were filled and groups of men gathered here and there to discuss the various rumors of the day. Suddenly a cannon roared on the Court House green. It was the signal that had been agreed upon to let the people know that the British fleet of nearly one hundred ships was coming up the bay, and the troops began to assemble at their appointed places.

That afternoon, General Stricker, commanding the Third Maryland Brigade, composed of the Fifth, Sixth, Twenty-seventh, Thirty-ninth and Fifty-first Regiments of Infantry, 150 riflemen, 140 cavalrymen and 75 artillerymcn, with six four-pound guns, marched out the Philadelphia road to the North Point road and on to the Old Trappe road where they spent the night, after sending forward the cavalry and the riflemen for observation.

Meanwhile the British fleet entered the mouth of the Patapsco and anchored in Old Roads Bay. Before daybreak on the morning of September 12 they began to land their troops on the low shores inside North Point. By 7 o'clock an army of 9,000 men was landed and beginning their advance, while their frigates and bombing vessels moved up the river and took their position in a large crescent line about two and one-half miles offshore from Fort McHenry and the Lazaretto.

Planning a joint attack against Baltimore by land and water, the British Army was deployed and started up the North Point road. Shortly before 1 o'clock in the afternoon their advance came in contact with a battalion of the Fifth Maryland Regiment, commanded by Major Richard H. Heath, who had been ordered forward to reconnoitre. In the skirmish the British commander, Gen. Sir. Robert Ross was killed and Major Heath, seeing that he had engaged a superior force, fell back upon the battle-line of his brigade, which was posted in advance of the North Point and the Old Trappe road. The line of the Fifth Regiment with its right resting on Bear Creek, extended across the North Point road with the Twenty-seventh and the Thirty-ninth in battle formation on its left. The Fifty-first was posted at right angles to the left of the Thirty-ninth facing a marsh on Back river, while the Sixth Regiment was posted as a reserve in the rear.

The fight at his point was maintained for about an hour and a half, when General Strickcr, realizing that he was facing the main body of the British with a force about one-third as strong, fell back to the slight elevation that was occupied by the Sixth Regiment. Later Stricker retreated to the jupction of the North Point and the Philadelphia roads and, when the enemy advanced early the next morning, he retired within the entrenchments of Roger's Bastion for the general defense of the city. Here the British were disconcerted by the display of strength of these large earthworks bristling with troops and cannon and stretching from the river shore around the eastern section of the city.

At daylight on the morning of September 13 the British fleet began its bombardment of Fort McHenry, which was fiercely continued throughout the entire day and night until about 7 o'clock on the morning of September 14. During the engagement the enemy fired more than 1,500 bombs, weighing over 250 pounds each and innumerable round shot and rockets Into Fort McHenry, but neither their army nor their navy was able to carry a single important position.

The British commanders held a conference during the night of September 13, and when it was reported that sevcral of their ships were leaking from the strain of heavy firing, they decided to make a surprise attack on Fort McHenry from the rear. Shortly after midnight a detachment of 1,200 men from the fleet, equipped with scaling ladders, attempted to get up the main branch of the Patapsco. Their boats had passed Cromwell's (now Wagner's) Point and their fleet had momentarily stopped the bombardment for fear of killing their own men, when in the lull of the fighting a detachment of Capt. Francis Hancock's company (Twenty-second Regiment) which was patroling the Annc Arundel shore, heard the creaking of their oars and lighted a haystack to see what the noise meant. This threw their boats in full view of Fort McHenry, the City Battery and Fort Covington further up the river and the terrific cross fire from these batteries prevented the enemy from making a landing and forced them to return hurriedly to their ships.

It was this diversion in the rear of Fort McHenry that made Francis Scott Key think that the fort had fallen. Key had gone to the British fleet, under a flag of truce, to plead for thc release of his friend, Dr. Beanes, but both men were transferred to their own vessel undcr a guard of marines to prevent them from landing until after the attack on Baltimore. The American cartel was anchored with the transports near Sparrows Point, but in full view of the artillery duel, and Key was anxiously pacing its deck when dawn broke and showed the flag still waving from Fort McHenry. In the patriotic fervor of the moment he wrote the lines of the National Anthem.

Withdrawing their army before daylight on September 14, the British troops went back to their transports, while their navy stopped its bombardment about 7 o'clock in the morning and sullenly joined them and began to sail away.

Fort McHenry was defended by 1,000 men commanded by Col. George Armistead, who were accounted for as follows: One company of United States Artillery (Capt. Frederick Evans) and one company Baltimore Fencibles (Capt. J. H. Nicholson) manned the guns of the Star Fort, while the upper batteries outside the fort walls were manned by one company of Baltimore Independent Artillerists (Capt. Charles Pennington), one company Washington Artillerists of Baltimore (Capt. John Berry), two companies of Barney's Sea Fencibles (Capts. M. S. Bunbury and William H. Addison), with another company of Sea Fencibles (Lieutenant Rodman) in the water battery along the shore. Six hundred United States Infantry under the command of Col. W. Steuart and Major S. Lane were stationed in the moat between the walls of the Star Fort and the upper batteries to oppose any landing that the enemy might attempt to make.

The regular armament of the Star Fort was composed of twenty-four pounders, four of which were placed on each bastion. The strength of the outer batteries, however, was increased with guns of various calibre by Commodore John Rodgers, who had charge of the general artillery defense of the city, while the forty-two-pound guns, which had been borrowed from a French frigate that lay at Despeaux's wharf, were used in thc water batteries. These guns matched the heaviest guns on the British fleet and as many of Barney's Sea Fencibles had served aboard the privateers out of Baltimore and were familiar with naval maneuvering, they knew how to use these guns to the discomfort of the British ships and prevented them from taking closer and more effective positions.

What is now Fort McHenry was first started as a battery of eighteen guns, which were mounted by the people of Baltimore on Whetstone Point as a defense agalnst a possible attack by the British who were operating in the Chesapeake in March of 1776. When another war with Great Britain was expected in 1794, President Washington ordered the cities along the seaboard to strengthen their defenses and Baltimore responded by engaging Major J. J. Ulrich Rivardi, who designed the present Star Fort, in the rear of the old Revolutionary battery. When the fort was completed in 1798, it was named Fort McHenry in honor of Col. James McHcnry, of Baltimore, who had been an aide to General Washington during the Revolution and who was Secretary of War under President Washington and President John Adams; and although the reservation was not formally ceded to the Federal Government until 1816, it was garrisoned by Federal troops in 1799.

Fort McHenry was built of Baltimore-made brick set in oyster shell mortar and is shaped as a pentagonal star, with a span of 300 feet between each of the star points. Its walls are fourteen feet high and thirty-five feet thick, and the original plan permitted a four-foot drop back of the first twenty-foot section as a protection to the men who manned its guns. The thickness of these walls can be readily seen at the sallyport, which contains two dungeons of arched brick that run underground into both sides of the fort walls, in addition to an office for thc captain of the guards and a guardhouse with iron-barred cells.

The dungcons, each of which is 18 feet wide, 9 feet high and 30 feet long, have entrances that are six feet wide and three feet high; and each of these entrances is protected by thick wooden doors heavily studded with Iron bolts. When these doors were closed the only possible ventilation and light for the prisoners who were confined in the dungeons was by means of a series of arched brick piping, one foot in diameter, which led up to the inside ground level.

Passing through this interesting archway, with its heavily iron studded doors at both ends of the passageway, one immediately sees the plan of the inside area of the fort. Here were the quarters for the old garrison, each of whose barrack buildings is approximately seventy-five feet long, eighteen fcet deep and two stories high with Colonial wooden porches running the full length of each building. Standing in the cntrance one sees the headquarters building, on the second floor of which the commandant lived, while the offices for the post were on the ground floor. Next in line is the old powder magazine with walls eight feet thick all around and inclosing a storage room that is twenty feet long by twelve feet high and wide, and placed between the headquarters building and the officers' quarters, which is now occupied by a caretaker of the fort and partly uscd as a rest room. Then comes the two-barrack buildings for the enlisted men, completting an oval surrounding a grass plot on which still stands the old pump that supplied the garrison with water.

The lower floors of the building are built of brick and each building is divided into communicating rooms, upstairs and down, with an outside entrance to each division and stairways to the floors above.

A moat runs between the fort walls and the upper outside batteries, with arched brick bomb-proofs running under each respective battery for storage of explosives; and when the heavy doubled doors at each end of the sallyport were closed in time of siege, the only other means of entrance into the fort for those who served the outside batteries was thru a unique one-man tunnel that runs under the walls of the fort.

One can but conjecture what would have happened lf Fort McHenry had fallen under the British assault in September, 1814. For political and commercial reasons, the merchants of New England had not supported the War of 1812 with much enthusiasm. The Hartford convention a little later agreed that the New England States should secede from the Union and make a separate peace with the enemy and after the British were defeated at Plattsburg they had started to recall their troops from the national service. The Mississippi Valley Region still echoed the scheme of Aaron Burr to make a new republic in the southwest and, it can be argued, would have willingly made terms with the enemy for their greater security. With the National Capitol destroyed, if Baltimore had been taken and burned, most observers think the British would have gone on to Philadelphia and New York to regain evcrything the Colonies had won by the Revolutionary War. But here the high tide of the British invasion was stopped, and Baltimore may be proud of the part that she played in it and equally proud that she is the only large city in the republic that dates from Colonial times, over which an enemy's flag has never flown.

The School Day Lunch

With waxed paper, paper napkins, paper cups, plates and covered containers, nowadays so cheap, the paper bag has largely taken the place of the school lunch box or lunch basket. This makes for cleanliness and convenience in packing although the lunch is often mashed or crowded.

In hot weather, the use of soft, moist foods should be avoided. Although chopped meat moistened with a dressing of some kind makes a good sandwich filling, such foods are less desirable in hot weather than slices of meat, peanut butter, cheese or other foods, which are not so likely to spoil.

For lunches to be carried to school, the following suggestions are offered:

(1) Sandwichs with scrambled egg filling and lettuce. A firm tomato; cookies; milk.

(2) Chopped cold cooked ham and ground carrot sandwiches. Lettuce leaf; apples or grapes; milk.

(3) Sandwiches filled with cottage cheese salted and mixed with any of these: Chow chow, chopped dill pickle, green pepper, celery, parsley, onion or other salad vegetable, chopped nuts; cup cake; milk.

(4) Peanut butter sandwiches, or ground shelled roasted peanuts moistened with cream or top milk on whole wheat bread; raw crisp cucumber sticks or celery; cup custard or rice pudding; milk.

(5) Sandwiches of chopped meat plus pickle or egg with crisp lettuce, cress or chopped parsley; banana or dried fruit; milk.

(6) Baked bean sandwiches on brown bread, the beans moistened with chili sauce or catsup and mashed to a smooth paste; raw carrot sticks; raisins; milk.

SMALLTOWN IS NECESSARY

Two things have come out of the depression that are worth noting. The large centers of population have discovered that they cannot get along without the country. The small communities havc discovered that they can make their own life without much worrying concerning cities. For long it was a habit of big cities to display airs of superiority to thc so-called "rural communities." They have pretended to believe that the small town was passing into eclipse, and that people could flock to big cities and make them more and more important and influential. And, also, a lot of "country" people, lured by the glamor of thc cities, have left the countryside. They have discovered, many of them too late, that life in the small communities have a thousand advantages not possessed by large centers, and that the mush-room development of big cities has been a bad, not too good thing. Today the small city or town is taking on a new dignity and individuality. We see everywherc the proof that the small community is realizing its possibilities, forgetting to ape the manners of the more artificial "centers of population," and attending enthusiastically to the duty of building a destiny for ltself. As the small community becomes strengthened, and as the farm community becomes more independent, the large city will prosper too. What we need in America is vitality of individual effort, and this is what thc small city will give in the next generation as it did in the past. The disillusioned folk who thought that the bright lights were what made life worth while, will be drifting back to the country, eager to capture once again the peace, the sincerity, the integrity, the gladness that abides where neighborly comradeship is possible.

DEBTS

In a newspaper interview given on his way home from Washington, Speaker Garner, expressing the most emphatic demand that the European war debts should not be cancelled, said:

"The $11,000,000,000 owed by the European nations to the United States comprise, not the money sent by us to help them defeat the Germans, but huge sums lent subsequent to the war to aid them in their reconstruction projects."

That ls true. The money these nations owe us was lent after the war was over, after the Germans had quit fighting and gone home.

And the money was lent by a Democratic administration, without authority of law and after Congress had been asked to give such authority and had denied itl

Mr. Garner might have added that to his statement but he failed to do it.

Furthermore the law required that for all money lent to foreign governments bonds should be taken, bearing the same rate of interest as our Liberty bonds and running thc samc period of time. And that law also a democratic administration dcliberately failed and refused to obey.

If a democratic administration had lived up to the law—first in lending money only on thc security of tho bonds of thc government to which thc money was lent, and second in lending money only when lt was needed to win thc war—all this pother about the cancellation of war debts would never have arisen. Thc whole problem is a democratic inheritanee pure and simple, the legacy of a democratic administration that thought lt was above the law and that didn't know how to manage the business of the country.

I don't mind being reminded of the fact that my ears are big, but saying that my face looks like a taxi with both doors wide open, is too much.

By special permission of the copyright owners, I have obtained an exclusive interview with Jesse Ashby wherein he describes his Checapeake Bay voyage.

"Lost in the Chesapeake," should be the title. Dinner and everything.

As Jesse describes it: "We were out in our forty-foot boat, six miles from shore. The waves beat upon the sides and entered the hold without invitation. It was up and down with us and a-rolling besides. I could stand the ups and downs, but rolling was entirely out of my category. After about an hour of this, I o-o-o-o-op went, o-o-o-o-o-op to o-o-o-o-o-op to the rail, just to see the white caps go by. Then I thought it was bye-bye for me—o-o-o-o-o-o-op, but not quite. Two hours later the fish were hungry again and then it was that I was able to haul them in. I'm feeling much better now, you landlubbers, thank you."

In the course of my several squints out of the middle window, I have happened upon many things. The fat lady bending over to tie her shoe, for instance; or the passage of the garbage wagon with the smile on the driver's face, sitting rearward and getting the benefit of nature's aroma.

There's nothing left today but a red-headed woman. A red-headed woman is always getting a second glance from me, tied up as I am, but there's nothing more I care to say. Stop! Maybe she's going to fool me this time. She's all squirmy and attempting to reach the small of her back with her hand. Somethin' itchin' you, lady? Why don't you use the telephone pole or that nice corner of the Garrett National's door. Nobody's looking but me and I don't count anymore, and there's nothing gives so much satisfaction to an itchy back as a good scraping.

There comes a nice looking gentleman. Maybe he might help a lady in distress. He IS a gentleman. He has stopped and is evidently asking if he can be of assistance.

Be careful, young man. This can go too far. Stop! He is beyond control. He has reached down inside and it looks bad from a distance. I'm even blushing myself. Stop it, I say; that's far enough. Slap him, lady; that's what I'd do. But all she does is to light a Murad. Maybe she's used to it. She's still squirming, though maybe she's struggling with him. I'll have to rush down and save her.

Oh, you're her husband, are you? Well, well; pardon me all over. That ought to make a difference.

A wild desire I've always had, and which will never be fulfilled: At some crucial point in an address, when absolute silence reigns, and the speaker has the audience spellbound—to holler a wisecrack, real loud.

Some people will persist in wearing a straw hat after the 15th. What do they care for fashion? Pooh! They're lucky to have a straw hat, which Bill Butt has not since the Boss Editor "busted" it the other day in front of The Republican office. Bill says he's going to have a $10 Stetson at the expense of the feller guilty of the outrage; and he probably will—not.

The carnival at the fair is the best that's been here for ages. The shows are worth seeing—most of them I should say, for fear some members of the uplift society will jump on my neck—and they don't cost much. The people are the higher type of carnival people.

I'm putting in a petition to the school board to have the school children keep quiet during Friday recesses. It breaks up my sleep after an all-night session at the presses. Archibaldson, the lucky stiff, gets a room on the other side of the house.

If I live to be one hundred, I'll still experience that awed feeling upon awakening in the middle of the night and hearing the fire alarm. Saturday morning was no exception.

When Henry Speicher wouldn't give Jim Bell a complimentary ticket to the fair he tried to walk in backwards, so the manager would think he was coming out, and what did he do but back right into the tent wherein was a show "For Men Only." "Hot-cha" is all Col. Bell could say.

THE MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY'S CORNER

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

The history of the Maryland Bible Society in so far as the present series of articles can deal with it, is complete. We shall now turn our attention to the current life of the great societies whose objectives are the same as those of the Maryland Society. In this article we shall discuss the Bible business from the standpoint of its international scope and value.

There are many misconceptions in the minds of earnest Christian poeple as to what the Bible Societies really are.

When the writer was suggested for the post of Executive Secretary of the Maryland Bible Society, one of his friends remarked to him: "It is a great pity you have given up the ministry in order to become a store keeper, and sell Bibles." It is true that we cannot by taking thought add one cubit to our stature, yet this candid friend metaphorically knocked off one of mine. I could feel myself shrinking until I recalled the many honorable people among my acquaintances who are behind counters and until I grasped the fact that perhaps I should accomplish a greater ministry in making known the Bible rather than my views of its contents.

Others there were who realizing the breath of opportunity represented by this field, offered congratulationns, and gave assurance of their belief in an expanding ministry as a result of this call.

The American Bible Society and its European neighbor, the British and Foreign Bible Society, are two great book concerns. Together they represent the world's outstanding publishing interests. As distribution agents they have no peers either in magnitude of their output or the extent of the fields they cover. They operate upon strictly business lines, accounting for everything from a postage stamp to a ball of wrapping cord. Laymen of sound intelligence and business acumen make up their boards of managers.

And yet, while the strictest business methods are employed in conducting the affairs of these great Societies, the annual reports reveal a "turn out," rather than a "turn over," and show losses rather than profits. And this because all Bibles, Testaments and Portions, in the 700 or more languages in which they are now published, are either sold at cost or given away.

The chosen emblem of these societies is "the Sower," rather than the "Man behind the counter," for the Bible is seed, instinct with life. The harvest of this seed is not material, but spiritual and eternal.

Just here is the vital bond between the Bible Societies and the Churches, a bond of mutual goodwill and helpfulness in the specialized work of supplying in languages the common provides food for the souls of men, people understand, the Book which ammunition for Christian soldiers, guidance for nations and races in their perplexities, and a charter of human freedom and brotherhood.

Next week we shall begin a series of stories of the manuscripts, under the general heading, "How we got our Bible."

WHY MISREPRESENT?

A man who deliberately misrepresents another has committed a grave offense. However, there have always been people in every community who delighted in leaving a false impression concerning someone or some business.

Some people will misrepresent their competitor, thinking that they will be the gainer, and might be for a while, but it will eventually become known, and when it does it always rebounds on the one who has thus acted.

We have seen innocent people suffer on account of a misrepresentation of their character, and in various other ways, all on account of some misstatements of some envious person. There is a golden rule which it would be well for us all to follow: "If you can't say something good about your neighbor, don't say anything."

You take most campaigns for office, and there are always a few who will stoop to misrepresent their opponent. This is wrong, and one reason why we have never had any desire to be a candidate for office. You will hear one fellow speak, and you would think his opponent was the crookedest fellow in the world, and he will come along and tell you about the other fellow and you just don't know which one is telling the truth. In such cases we wonder sometimes if they both are not right in their assertions. If they are, then both should go down in defeat.

Occasionally you will find a business man will misrepresent his competitor, thinking he will get business that his competitor has been getting. He might succeed for a while, but when you find a fellow like this he will finally lose the confidence of the people; and when he does he is going to get a hard fall; and he deserves one and has it coming.

Let us be square with each other, and when we say anything about anybody, let it be the truth.

FEAR STIFLES INITIATIVE

The only thing that keeps most of us from realizing our own possibilities and of getting the highest satisfaction out of life is fear. There are very few human beings in the world who are not afraid of something, and as long as one is afraid of anything he cannot achieve perfect happiness.

Primitive man must have lived in a state of almost constant terror. He was afraid of wild beasts, afraid of enemies of other tribes, afraid of the thunder and lightning, afraid of evil spirits that lurked in the darkness of the forest—of real dangers and of unreal dangers which he imagined. Very few people in these days have the perfectly natural physical fears that surrounded the lives of our ancestors. But who of us has not had some mental fear, fear of something that has not happened but which we think may happen to ourselves or our loved ones?

In the past two or three years the people of the United States have been the prey of a new kind of fear. They have been afraid that, in the popular phrase, the bottom has dropped out of everything. They have feared that never again would they have a job, that the factories that have shut down would never start up, that they would never be able to sell the products of their farms—those and a thousand other fears which have no relation to common sense or reality seemed to take possession of perhaps the majority of Americans.

And that is one of the reasons we have been slow in coming back from the economic crisis. We have been afraid to use our intelligence and common sense and go ahead when everybody else was afraid to do anything but accept conditions as they are and paint them,mentally, much worse than they are.

We see signs that this widespread fear is beginning to disappear. We do not believe It ever had any real foundation, and we believe people are waking up to that fact. If we are right, and hope and courage are beginning to replace fear, then we have made a good start toward the return of good times.—Northern Lyon County Journel, Allen, Kansas.

THE MAINE ELECTION

All sorts of reasons and excuses have been given for the Maine election result. Perhaps no one reason is a valid one because there were several reasons doubtless for the unexpected Democratic victory in the state last week. In the first place the personality of the candidates had something to do with it, and again, we are told that the wet and dry issue entered into it. The Republicans of Maine had adopted a bone dry platform and the candidates for Congress were bone drys. The Republican candidate for governor took no decided stand on the issue and the Democratic platform and candidates were dripping wet. The fact that the Democrats gained so heavily in the cities indicates that the liquor issue may have had something to do with the result.

But this was not all of it. The Republicans are now suffering from the fact that they are in power at a time of world-wide depression and are being blamed for the depression by a great many people. Of course the administration had nothing to do with bringing on this depression. But in times like the present the "ins" always suffer and the "outs" gain. This is shown by the number of political upsets there have been in foreign nations since the depression started. Few nations outside the absolute autocracies have the same government they possessed when the depression got under way. The same trend is shown in our own country in the way in which officials in both parties have been defeated for renomination.

Undoubtedly the dissatisfaction of the depression had its effect on the Maine election. The result is a severe blow for the Republicans but if they now redouble their efforts until the first of November they may gain from this early knowledge of the extent of the movement against the party in power. If the Republicans are to win in November, and such a result is by no means impossible, they will have to tighten their belts and go to it. They cannot rely on any belief that the trend has turned and that time is working for the Republicans. The only things which will answer now are genuine cooperation and continuous effort.

ROOSEVELT'S FARM PLAN

There is nothing in Governor Roosevelt's speech on agriculture to indicate to the farmer that the New York executive has a definite plan ready made to pull agriculture out of its difficulties. The speech contains a number of general assertions but no concrete plan to rescue the farmer. In the first place the Governor would have a soil survey to determine what farms can be made profitable and which ones ought to be turned into parks or forest reserves. But the average farmer already knows which farms are paying (if any) and which are not. On the tariff, Governor Roosevelt is somewhat obscure. After having denounced the Republican idea of protection and calling for a competitive tariff for revenue he now wants to give the farmer a 'real protective tariff' on all his products.

But his method of adding to the protection which the farmer already has are somewhat obscure and call for further explanation. The vague plan which he produces has some of the features of the McNary-Haugen idea. The plan must finance itself. It must not use any methods in disposing of our farm surplus which would give European nations the idea that we were dumping our produce on them. But just how we can get them to buy this surplus without dumping it at low prices the good governor does not tell us. Undoubtedly he doesn't know the answer himself.

Again he would have the farmers handle the machinery of the plan themselves and would have no centralized authority at Washington. The movement must be cooperative as far as possible and must be voluntary. Farmers must not be compelled to join and to sell through this agency but must in some way be persuaded to do it. Here is a gigantic task for somebody to put over, and again the good governor does not seem to know how it can be done.

Most important of all, It must be so arranged that raising the price of farm products, through this mysterious method, will not stimulate production at home. In other words, human nature and economic laws must be changed entirely. A task worthy of a real political giant, and here again Governor Roosevelt does not tell us how it can be done. Squaring a circle would be easier.

While the governor's stand against further financing of agriculture by the government, and against further bureaucracies at Washington is admirable, his speech from the constructive side is not so hot. He tells us what ought to be done, but every farmer knows what ought to be done. But he doesn't tell us how to do what he thinks ought to be done. And the reason he doesn't tell us how to do it is because he doesn't know how, and neither does anybody else. It is easy to see that we ought to get the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow and so end our personal financial difficulties. But how to get it—as Hamlet would say—there is the rub.

At Passaic, N. J., Thomas Shiners, a patient at St. Mary's Hospital for over 20 years, known as the "Sunshine Man," died this week.

At Accokeek, Md., a 17-year old boy killed his father after he had threatened to beat his mother, and then killed himself.

In Montreal, "He saved others but could not save himself" was exemplified, when a man, who had rescued a drowning swimmer, was himself drowned while the rescued man walked away without attempting to save his rescuer.

At Charleston, W. Va., Judge Morgan Owen, in a pending case, decided that a self supporting wife could not have temporary alimony during the pendency of her cause for divorce, and that a man who had paid alimony for 16 years, might be excused from further payments.

In Greenland, the flying Hutchinson family, consisting of the father, mother and two children, and four members of the crew, were rescued Tuesday, having made a forced landing on their flight to Europe.

In Texas, an official canvass of the Democratic vote for Governor, shows Mrs. Miriam ("Ma") Ferguson holds a majority of 3,333 over Gov. Ross A. Sterling.

At Portland, Me., a tabulation of the vote in Main from 1912 to 1932 inclusive, shows that the Republicans have carried the state in 1912, 1916, 1920, 1924 and 1928, and the Democrats in 1914 and 1932.

Maryland Again Leads in Forest Protection, Report Shows

Efforts on the part of Maryland to safeguard her forests show uniform success in comparison with her neighboring states, a report on forest fire data throughout the nation shows. On the basis of the size of the average forest fire, Maryland has done better than hold its own with Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Virginia and Delaware.

The average forest fire in Maryland burned 26 acres in 1931, being closely followed by the average fire in New Jersey of 32 acres. Pennsylvania, with 13 million acres of forest land to protect, or six times that of Maryland, managed to hold the average down to 37 acres, but Delaware, with fewer forested acres, did not fare so well and the average fire reached 48 acres in area. Virginia and West Virginia trailed the states to the north with average fires of 87 and 93 acres respectively.

In so far as the smallest average fire is concerned, Maryland has remained in the lead of her neighboring states, having held this position in the severe fire year of 1930, says the State Forester.

The work carried on by the 650 forest wardens distributed in every important wooded section of Maryland is said to be responsible for the low percentage of acre-fires.

The work has been substantially assisted by the growing realization on the part of every citizen that all forest fires should be reported, as soon as discovered, to telephone operators, who in turn notify the fire fighters and send them off to save timber, game and property from destruction, it was also stated.

time is short, make your list on plain paper and send it to the Secretary. All entry lists must be in the mails by September 30th.

There will be absolutely no charge for making entries. All the exhibitor has to do is to pack his exhibits carefully, deliver them to a place which will be designated to him when he sends his entry list, and then he is through. Trucks from Pittsburgh will pick up the entries and take them to Pittsburgh.

Decorators To Arrange Exhibits

Gimbel's entire staff of decorators will arrange the exhibits in the store ready for the opening of the fair on the morning of October 13th. The exhibits from each county will be kept by itself, so that the judges can consider them as a whole. The county which has the best exhibit will win a silver cup for its county agent. Inasmuch as there will be counties in three states competing, the contest will be interesting. People of this county are asked to get behind their agent, John H. Carter.

Another valuable feature of the fair is this—potato raisers, egg dealers, apple growers, any one with any farm produce to sell in large quantities may be on the spot to take orders for all he can sell. What better chance can these men hope to have to meet Pittsburgh buyers?

There will be at least twenty-five thousand people passing through the fair to see the products.

The boys and girls also have opportunities to win prizes and they should insist that their parents take them to the city to visit the display at Gimbel's and to tour the city.

Entertainment Provided

The entertainment committee of the Allegheny Tableland Council is arranging an interesting program for the visitors, beginning with a luncheon on October 13 at the Chamber of Commerce for the Secretary of Agriculture of Pennsylvania and corresponding officials of West Virginia and Maryland, as well as the county agents from the Tableland.

On Thursday afternoon there will also be a free automobile tour of the city for all Tablelanders who wish to go. The trip will take visitors to the top of Mt. Washington to look down on the city and the Point, where the Monongahela and Allegheny Rivers join to form the Ohio. From there the visitors will go to the parks, to Carnegie Museum, past the University of Pittsburgh Cathedral of Learning—the only skyscraper university in the world; they will visit the Heinz plant and have a lunch; they will cross the million-dollar bridges in downtown Pittsburgh; they will visit numerous industrial plants and generally have a highly educational and interesting afternoon.

Some event for the women is being planned for Friday afternoon and this will be entirely free of cost to the visitors.

On Friday evening there will be a banquet with Press Bailey of the Westinghouse Airbrake Company in charge. The cost will be one dollar per person; but there will be expensive door prizes without number, an elaborate entertainment put on by all the radio stations of the city, and bags of souvenirs.

Those who wish tickets for the banquet should send their orders immediately, for six hundred will be available. That number will not go far among the hundreds of thousands of people of the city and the Tableland. Send orders to the Secretary, Allegheny Tableland Council, Chamber of Commerce, Pittsburgh.

To Be Free Parking Space

It is announced that the bus companies will give special low rates to Pittsburgh during the fair; and there will be free parking space reserved for Tablelanders. The location of this space will be announced later, but it is now announced that those entering it must show their driver's licenses, since no one will be permitted to park there except people from the counties of Somerset, Fayette, Pennsylvania; Garrett, Maryland; and Grant, Mineral, Monongalia, Preston and Tucker, West Virginia.

Send your entry list immediately! Get one from your county agent or send for it. Men should show their products and women should show their handicraft of various kinds.

Send your fruit and vegetables and eggs and grain and quilts and candy and all the other things eligible. Put a price on them.

Plan to go to the fair yourself! The Allegheny Tableland Council of the Chamber of Commerce sponsor of the affair, and Gimbel's, who offered to attend to all details, wait to welcome you.

When you go, park your car in the free parking space; then go to the Chamber of Commerce and register. You will be given a badge to identify you as a visitor from the Allegheny Tableland, and when you register each man, woman and child will be given some souvenir to prize and enjoy. After that—Pittsburgh is yours, according to the members of the Chamber of Commerce.

CAMP BEING DEVELOPED BY GREEN GLADE CLUB

People of Tri-Towns Contribute To Ever-Growing Lake Colony

Tri-Towns people, according to the Piedmont Herald, are developing an attractive camp at the Green Glade Club property on Deep Creek Lake near Swanton, where high altitude provides delightful weather conditions during the summer months.

Last season the promoters purchased the Briar Bend school building, formerly used as a girls' seminary at Mountain Lake Park, and after tearing it down moved the material to the camp site where it was re-erected and proivdes a spacious club house. On the first floor are a large living room with big open fireplace, a kitchen and storage room. Many screeden porches add to the facilities for enjoying the cool breezes from the lake. One of the porches is used as a dining room and the others are equipped with swings and easy chairs.

Upstairs four bedrooms open onto a long hall, running the length of the building. The hall gives access to another large screened porch.

The families of the club members have use of the club house a week at a time.

Club members have been assigned plots of ground for cottages and already a number have built summer residences there.

For some weeks this summer Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Fredlock occupied their new bungalow there. It is a cozy five-room structure, which includes a living room with open fireplace, kitchen and three bedrooms. A porch opening from the kitchen provides dining quarters. A front porch gives a view of the glorious sunsets on the lake. The cottage is appropriately named Lock Haven.

Frank Dixon has a group of three small buildings, one of which provides living quarters and the other two sleeping quarters. At present he is erecting an addition to the living quarters.

Charles S. Friend has a small cottage which he and his family have occupied at various times during the summer.

Martin Watson has about ready for occupancy a one-room house with porch. With the expectation of enlarging the building by enclosing the porch, a window has been placed at either end of the fireplace in the living room so that they may easily be replaced with doors.

The cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Boyd is also nearing completion.

Across an inlet of the lake is another group of cottages, including one recently erected by Dr. Jas. H. Wolverton, of Piedmont.

The Owl Club, composed of Tri-Towns people, also has a cabin within sight of Green Glade Camp.

Between the club house and the lake shore is a fine grove of trees, beneath which the campers while away some of their time watching the activities on the lake.

During recent weeks water has been taken from the lake to generate power. As a result the lake has receded considerably.

Boating on the lake is a favorite pastime of the campers and affords a convenient means of visiting the neighboring camps. Motor, sail and row boats are all in use on the lake.

The recent opening of the Altamont-Swanton road brings a hard surfaced road within a short distance of the camp. This connects with the improved road running from U. S. 50 at the top of Allegany mountain through Elk Garden, Blaine, Kitzmiller to Deer Park. A much shorter route is via the dirt road of Bloomington. By the latter route the distance to the camp is only about 15 miles from Piedmont. The Green Glade Club members are therefore desirous of seeing the road from Bloomington to the junction of the Kitzmiller road improved. The mileage to the cross roads is 12 miles, of which only two miles to Bloomington is hard surfaced.

SHE lay on the Indian blanket she had bought from an old squaw in Reno, slid the slim wedding-band from her right hand to the left hand then back again, thereby confusing the man, hidden in the sumac, who watched her avidly.

His painter eyes loved the set. A grove picketed by tall trees, a willowy girl in white reclining on a bright blanket.

He completed the picture, he with his shock of jet hair against the flaming sumac, his bright blue eyes riveted spellbound on the unsuspecting girl. Under the sustained pressure of his moccasined foot a twig snapped. The girl swung around. They stared, their tense poses shattered only by a startled blue-jay screaming through the woods.

"I thought you were in Europe," she spoke in a throaty monotone, her creamy cheeks and neck hotly tinged.

"I'm not." The man stepped from behind the sumac, softly tread the thickly packed pine-needles. "Nor am I shadowing you. I thought you were in Reno."

"I was."

There was an awkward pause.

Can't we reminise awhile? It can't be called collusion now that we're nicely divorced."

She hesitated. "What is there to reminise about?"

"I can think of something," planting himself squarely on the blanket. "First, who told you I'd gone abroad?"

"Andy." She chose a tiny corner of the quilt.

"So you still see him?" he snapped.

"Don't be ridiculous, Ronald. Andy is my adopted brother."

"He forgot that," he reviewed past events. "All right—the man loved you—he couldn't help it. But he could have helped loitering around! He with his legal mind framing situations and buttoning them on me! Then goading you till you saw things that weren't there. Why did you seek his advice? If you wanted to lose me why didn't you tell me?"

She ignored this. "By the way, I haven't received your announcement."

The man was non-plussed.

"Yours and Gert's," she explained. "Surely you remember Gert? Long fair hair and the best hack in the country. You said so yourself."

"Little idiot! The man roared up at the clouds. "How can you pretend such things! I never have got chummy with my models. Why the unrelenting spotlight on me when Andy led you around by that funny little nose? Andy was a lawyer, darling, you shouldn't have believed all he said. Didn't he just tell you I'd gone to Asia?"

No answer.

"Because he wanted you himself he imported a fabric of lies to hoist over your vision and distort it. He picked his time when I was slaving on that fresco order, spending every minute with my model! You should have been your usual sane self and realized an unknown painter doesn't reap orders like that every day.

"You might have let me know when you flung me back to the world's other women."

"What do you mean?"

"Isn't it customary to let a fellow know when you're through with him? When the matrimonial bond is severed shouldn't an impressive document go forth? Suppose I had wanted to marry Gertrude?"

"Never mind," he continued tenderly, his tone sent the blood surging up her neck, "I never wanted to know."

He sighed and rose heavily to his feet. "Maybe you're right. Reminising isn't so good. Instead of switching that poor ring around why not throw it away? Why, Ann! You're crying!"

In an instant he was on his knees, had gathered her quivering form close. "'Annsome!"—it was his pet name for her—"darling, don't heave like that, you'll wear yourself out!"

"I've done something terrible!" she sobbed.

He took his big handkerchief and mopped her eyes. "Sweetheart, we're both in a fog. Pull yourself together, dear, you're marrying me again tonight. I don't want to take a woman to the altar who's crying her heart out."

But Ann, muddled up in her own straining confession, hadn't heard. "Ronny, I couldn't get it on non-support. You provided beautifully. You actually spoiled me."

He stroked her hair. "I'll provide better in the next world. Artists aren't appreciated till they die."

"I couldn't get it on cruelty! And I knew it wasn't another woman. Although I could have clawed out that Gertrude's eyes the way she oogled you."

His voice was soothing. "She only oogled me, dearest, because I was the only artist who hadn't oogled her. Why did his honor take pity on you?"

She lifted woe-be-gone eyes. "I went all the way to Reno, went through all the motions, and then—I couldn't accuse you unjustly, could I? And I couldn't make up anything horrid, not about you, Ronny—so I didn't go through with it." She sniffed. "Whatever you want to do now I'll abide by."

So Ronny, radiant and incredulous, took the slim wedding band from her right hand and put it where it belonged.

KEEP CHILDREN IN GOOD CONDITION PHYSICALLY

Need Lots of Restful Sleep To Offset Strain of School Life

"Growing children need a great deal of restful sleep to offset the strain, mental and physical, of growth, of school life and of modern conditions of living. They need nourishing food and at regular times. They should have some time every day for play, preferably out of doors. They should also have other wholesome recreation, but at times that will not interfere with the school routine." These were some of the suggestions made by Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health, in response to the question asked by a great many mothers at this season: "Now that our boys and girls have started back to school after the freedom of vacation time, how can we keep them in good physical condition and strengthen their resistance to disease?"

"My first suggestion," Dr. Riley said, "is to start them right. We have heard a great deal in recent years about allowing children to have plenty of opportunity for self-development. But isn't it about time to begin recultivating the old-fashioned virtues of self-control and obedience? It requires both of these to get a child into the habit of getting up early enough in the morning to sit down to an unhurried breakfast—but that is the habit that sets the pace for practically the whole day's work. The breakfast should be simple, but nourishing and satisfying.

"The amount of sleep a growing child needs depends upon his age. A child in the low grades, one from six to eight years old, needs twelve hours sleep every night. The average nine or ten year-old can get along with eleven hours; the child from eleven to thirteen needs ten hours and the older girls and boys—those from fourteen to sixteen—need at least nine hours' sleep every night. Some of them need more. School physicians and others who have made special studies of the health and general wellbeing of school children all agree that the child who gets too little sleep shows the effect of it in fatigue during school hours, in nervous strain, in inability to make the grades and in susceptibility to colds and other illnesses.

"All children need some free play time, and if possible, it should be spent out of doors. They need other recreation, too; but it should not interfere with the regular hours for sleep and preparation for school work should come first. Let them have their special recreation on Friday or Saturday, then they can sleep later the next morning to make up for it. Like many other jobs that mothers have to tackle, starting a regular routine of this sort is no easy task. But any mother who helps her children to establish such habits, can feel that she is laying the best possible foundation for good general health, for steady nerves and for the power to resist disease."

The Man Who Wanted a Son

Practically everyone has heard of the Order of DeMolay with its 160,000 active members and its alumni of 400,000 all over the world. Few perhaps know that its inspiration was due to the longing of a typical American for a son. That man was Frank Sherman Land, of Kansas City. In writing of the organization of the Order of DeMolay in the current issue of the National Republic, George B. Sykes says in part:

"In 1919, Frank Land was a 29-year-old tired-eyed secretary of the social service department of the Scottish Rite bodies of Kansas City. But he was still a good man and an able one. It is important that he was good. Professional social service workers too often are made cynical by their experience. He was good—but that was not enough. He was lolely. He wanted a son; he wanted a boy who could say 'Frank Land is my father.'

"It was in that year, 1919, that Mr. Land met Louis G. Lower; Louis was 16 years old then—right on the threshold of life. Mr. Land likes to talk of that night when he found Louis. It was a tragic night, however, for the boy. His mother was sobbing; friends of the family were arranging the funeral of his father. There were younger children in the Lower family; they would have time to get adjusted. But there was Louis, just at the age when a boy needs, more than at any other time in life, the guiding hand of a man. That was right after the World War, remember, when the youth of the country stood upon unstable ground.

"Mr. Land reached out his hand to the boy.

"'Come to my office tomorrow, Mr. Lower,' said he. 'I want to get acquainted with you.'

"Louis looked up in surprise. He was Mr. Lower, was he? Frank Land always treated grown-up boys as if they were men.

"Louis Lower was Mr. Land's first son. He found that boy in a home where a dead father lay. How Mr. Land glowed! He could take the place of the dead man. He could do what he always wanted to do—bring up a son. Here was clay for an artist; here was a son for a man. Far into the night, time after time, Mr. Land talked to the boy. The trafficway under the office window was deserted by everything but wind-blown paper and a loitering policeman. The boy should have been in bed long before, but Mr. Land had been sixteen years without Louis. He had moulding to do. That is how Louis received Excaliber, the blade that every man can give to his sons. That is how Frank Land made his first bid for that immortality which father can make for themselves upon this earth.

"Louis brought eight other boys of his age to Frank Land's office. He talked with them all. He sent for coffee and sandwiches. He chatted with them about their work, their parents. They learned to confide in him. They even called him 'Dad' in a quite natural and manly way. Frank Land was no simpering, loving fellow. Not at all. He was a man of the world who knew the stuff that life was made of. And he knew, too, the stuff that men must be made of.

"It was through these nine boys that Frank Land discovered himself. He realized for the first time in his life that his wanting a son had made him a father, not to one boy, but to any boy. He perceived with astonishment that boys loved him immediately that he held them, fascinated them. Here was a gift. He could have stopped with Louis Lower, but here was a gift. He could have stopped with nine boys. But Frank Land was one to hold a torch high and light the faces of the multitude. So he said, on the night of March 24, 1919, 'Bring in all your pals next Wednesday night and we'll make a club of it.'"

TOWN BEAUTY AN ASSET

In spite of the apparent commercialism of the age in which we live, it is evident to any observer that the American people are developing a greater appreciation of the beautiful. This is not common to the wealthier classes, but extends to the great masses in the towns and villages, and in the rural districts.

New towns and new sections of the older ones are being laid out with wider streets, with provision for larger lawns, more trees, shrubbery and flowers, and a more attractive setting generally.

New houses show better architecture and greater harmony with their surroundings, while unsightly yard fences have largely disappeared. The net result of all these modern developments is beauty. And aside from the satisfaction which it affords the eye, it pays in dollars and cents.

Beautiful cities, towns and villages attract people. They attract trade. It is natural that a person selecting a trading center will choose a town that is beautiful and clean in preference to one that is unsightly and dirty, if other conditions are anywhere near equal.

Therefore, it behooves the authorities of any community, as well as each individual citizen, to make the most of their opportunities for improving the appearance of the place in which they live. Beauty and cleanliness are a town's best assets.

Lesson for September 25

REVIEW: MOSES HONORED IN HIS DEATH.

GOLDEN TEXT—Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.

LESSON TEXT—Deuteronomy 32:48-52; 34:5-8.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Moses Goes to Live With God.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Death of a Great Leader.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What We May Learn from the Life of Moses.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What the World Owes Moses.

I. Moses Debarred From Canaan (32:48-52).

This act of God strikingly displays the tragedy of an unfinished task. Moses was loyal to God and faithfully served him through a long life. Though his "eye was not dimmed nor his natural force abated," he was obliged to leave his work unfinished. This is true of all of us. However, the tragedy is only apparent. Life is a probation. The question is not of finished tasks, but fidelity in service and growth in divine grace.

1. The reason for (v. 51). It was sin. The nature of this sin is given in Numbers 20:1-13. It was his failure to sanctify the Lord at Meribah. This penalty, while severe, was not too severe, for the righteousness of God demands the meting out of penalty upon every transgression. This was too glaring a sin for the Lord to pass over, though Moses had served him faithfully for many years.

2. God's treatment of Moses (vv. 49, 50). While it was severe, it was yet most tender. It was in keeping with God's nature. While God cannot pass over sin, he is always as gracious as his justice will permit. He appointed the place of Moses' death on the mount of vision. Moses was gathered "unto his people."

II. Moses Views the Promised Land from Mount Pisgah (34:1-4).

At the Lord's bidding Moses ascended the mountain of Nebo from which he got a view of the promised land. He obeyed though he knew that he was to die there (32:50). He greatly desired to go into the land (3:25), but submitted to the will of the Lord. Though he was not permitted to enter the land, God gave him a view of the fullest dimensions of the land which was to be the inheritance of the people he had delivered and led for forty years. While Moses suffered this severe penalty, we should remember that his salvation was not affected. He was debarred from entrance to the land at that time, but we see him in the land some fifteen centuries later in a state of glory discoursing with Christ on the loftiest theme of the universe; namely, the death which he would accomplish at Jerusalem (Matt. 17:1-5; Luke 9:28-31).

III. The Death and Burial of Moses (34:5-8).

1. His death (v. 5). Though he died in the vigor of manhood, his work was done. God put him into the world for a purpose and as soon as that work was done he called him home. It is stated in verse five that he died according to the word of the Lord.

2. The burial of Moses (v. 6). God buried him. Moses had no human help or sympathy in his dying hour, but he had something better. The Lord was with him. His grave was concealed to prevent his people from making it a shrine.

3. The time of mourning for Moses (v. 8). They mourned for thirty days. It was customary to mourn for the dead from seven to seventy days. It is not wrong to lay away earthly friends even with tears, but as Christians we should not mourn as those who have no hope.

IV. An Encomium upon Moses (34:10-12).

In this eulogy Moses is given a place at the head of the Old Testament prophets. With the exception of the greater prophet (Deut. 18:15-18) of whom Moses was a type, he stands as the greatest prophet of Israel.

1. Because of his intimacy with God (v. 10). "Whom the Lord knew face to face."

2. He was great in that he gave to the world a code of laws unequalled in the world's history.

3. He was great as a general in that he liberated the Israelitish nation from the oppression of the greatest nation of the earth.

4. He was great because he led two or three million Israelites through the desert for forty years.

5. He was great because he gave to us in the book of Deuteronomy three orations, which, according to the judgment of competent critics, stand at the head of the world's literature.

Believe it or not, Mr. Ripley, but Gene Comerford has so trained a grey squirrel that at the sound of his voice during feeding time he, or perhaps she, will sit up on its hind legs and wait for the tossing of another peanut.

And then, Mac Clayton, acting as squirrel traffic cop, seeing a mother and daughter, or perhaps a son, crossing the road over to the Association grove opposite his house, gave the command to "come back," and darned if they didn't obey. But perhaps it was the peanut he tossed them.

International Notes for Young People

Prepared by LUCY MEACHAM THRUSTON
American Friends Service Committee

During the past week I have been in touch with some of the youth of the world, states a letter just received from Geneva—a Scout camp on the edge of the city, having 5,000 boys from France, England, Germany and Switzerland. A vast get-together adventure. Baden-Powell was present for a day. I have also seen a company of "Y" boys touring Geneva. They have been in England, Holland, Germany, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Switzerland, and today they take the train for Paris. The Scouts and "Y" boys are about 16 or 17 years old. Camping together, travelling together cannot fail to increase their knowledge and understanding of one another. And over all America and Europe this season are literally hundreds of thousands of similar groups.

They are good to look at, these boys. The American boys had a swing that was good to see, as if it sprang out of "Freedom's holy light." I watched them at the big camp and as they went sight-seeing. The American boys were royally treated. A special service was held for them on Sunday at the American church, when inspiring ideals were held up, and the choice of them urged. At the League and Labor organizations there were lectures with questions. And when I went to sleep that night I saw, over and over again, these nearly six thousand boys marching and marching before me.

Where are they bound—these fine fellows from America and Europe, along with the myriads like them all over the earth? Less than twenty years ago millions of boys liks these, a trifle older, suddenly began to march, a few hundred miles from Geneva—but they were hating, biting, fighting, killing—one big slaughter for four years. We name it a Big War. Is that the right name? We call them warriors. Is that the right name? With over 8,000,000 killed, over 21,000,000 wounded, over 7,000,000 prisoners and missing—for commentary read Dante's Inferno!

Are the Scouts and "Y" leaders doing all possible to prevent a like catastrophe? Is the church, the school, the state—I am compelled to ask this, and of myself. I cannot dodge it. It concerns me, my generation. I have a right to ask, an obligation. We must work that all these boys may enjoy a world free from war.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

One of the most forceful pleas to the taxpayers of America to busy themselves in saving the nation from intolerable burdens of taxation and bureaucracy has come from Charles F. Williams, president of the Western and Southern Life Insurance Company, of Cincinnati, in a leaflet entitled "Time to Call a Halt!" Mr. Williams presents the case of the long suffering taxpayer with logic that is unanswerable and points out the mounting dangers to the very fabric of the nation. In pointing out the tremendous increase in governmental burdens during the past twenty years, Mr. Williams says:

"The present paralysis of business with its attendant unemployment crisis is due in large part to the fact that municipal, state and federal taxes are consuming the capital upon which business and industry operate. The load is unbearable and the resulting conditions have become intolerable. Make no mistake about it—increased taxation produces business stagnation and unemployment.

"Here is the situation: In 1912 the cost of government—federal, State and local—was two billion dollars, or 6 percent of the national income. In 1931 it was twelve billion dollars, or 22 percent of the national income, and it is headed upward. Where will we land at this rate of increase? One adult out of every ten in the United States is on the public payroll. One day's earnings out of every five goes to pay the cost of government. One dollar out of every three of profit of a corporation or firm goes to taxes.

In paying his respects to bureaucracy and the staggering load it has fastened on the American people Mr. Williams is no less forceful and convincing;

"The government is now engaged in many expensive pursuits that don't come within the scope of government. Small, well-organized groups have succeeded in getting appropriations for activities that have no relation to government. In the course of time a small research body becomes a major government bureau with a staggering annual appropriation and with an ever-increasing payroll of office-holders—and how they hold.

"This extravagance cripples all industry. Nobody escapes taxes. When the government taxes industry the tax is passed to the consumer, and that makes everybody a taxpayer. The government is all of us and each of us. When the goevrnment borrows money is does so in your name and mine. We endorse the note and must pay it with interest."

There can be no question as to the soundness of Mr. Williams' arguments and the conclusions he draws therefrom. If the present business depression, which everyone now hopes is drawing to a close, can give to the public mind the definite realization that the only real way to lasting prosperity is through economy in government and the paring down and elimination of governmental activities, so far as private business is concerned, it will be worth all that it has cost us.

Already there are indications that the people are beginning to realize that something is wrong and are going about the business of remedying it. Salaries of public officials are being reduced, their number is being cut down and unnecessary public activities curtailed. But a great deal more remains to be done. Bureaucracy like every selfish interest which is firmly entrenched will fight back with all its might, and has the ear of a great many self serving politicians. We cannot do the job without an aroused public conscience. The efforts of men like Mr. Charles F. Williams in arousing this conscience are invaluable. If their efforts succeed they will be real saviors of their country.

(Authorized and paid for by W. H. Smouse)

On Monday Evening, Sept. 19, about 6:30 W. H. Smouse had the misfortune of having a two-year-old steer run in by Mr. Tarenee Tamberene, and having it's leg broken off. The steer was carried and drug the distance of about seventy-five feet along the road before the party could bring their car to a stop.

When Officer Curey came on the scene he told the party to make no settlement of this and when Mr. Smouse ask him if he was on official duty he refused to tell him by saying that was his business and if I wanted anything done to see the State's Attorney.

Now I will ask the taxpayers and citizens if this is the kind of officers we should have to pay.

URGED TO SEND ENTRIES

Plans in Pittsburgh are rapidly maturing for the eight-county Allegheny Tableland Fair which is being sponsored by the Allegheny Tableland Council of the Chamber of Commerce of Pittsburgh. The City council has authorized free parking on city property for visitors from the Tableland during the fair on October 13, 14, and 15.

Those who have not secured a copy of the premium list should secure one immediately from the local county agent, and should send their entry blanks at once. Prizes are substantial cash awards.

Plans for entertaining Tableland visitors are being made at present, and they will be announced daily at 12:15 Eastern standard time, through station KDKA, by H. W. Correll, secretary of the Allegheny Tableland Council.

Residents of the Tableland who plan to visit Pittsburgh should note that they are expected to go to the Chamber of Commerce in Pittsburgh and register. They will then be given a badge to identify them as visitors, and those with automobiles will be given a free-parking sticker for on their windshields.

At the registration desk every man, woman and child will be given a souvenir to preserve in remembrance of the event, after which they will be directed to the exhibition at Gimbel's store.

The committee on exhibits and assemblies announces that awards will be made before noon on the first day of the fair, October 13th, and that the names of winners probably will be broadcast by radio that evening.

At a lunch in the Chamber of Commerce at noon on October 13th, the county agents from the Tableland will be entertained, and the name of the agent whose county has the best exhibit will be announced. That agent will be awarded a valuable silver cup.

Invitations have been sent to the Hon. Howard M. Gore, Commissioner of Agriculture of West Virginia, Dr. R. A. Pearson, President of the University of Maryland, and the Hon. Joseph MeSparron, Secretary of Agriculture of Pennsylvania, to visit the fair and attend the lunch on the opening day.

Dates of Exhibit Set for Friday and Saturday, October 28-29

The third annual county-wide potato show will be held in Oakland on Friday and Saturday, October 28 and 29, John H. Carter, county agent, has announced. The unoccupied room in the Miller building, Second and Liberty streets, will be used for the display room.

There will be three classes, the certified seed class for both the adults and the boys, and the commercial class, it was stated, so that there will be room for any potato grower in the county who desires to enter an exhibit.

The show is being held for the purpose of arousing more interest and improving the potato industry in the county by distributing better seed and increasing the yield.

People who expect to exhibit at the show should pick their entries at the time of digging, Mr. Carter suggested. "The potato crop is good, notwithstanding the dry weather," Mr. Carter stated, "and the show should be a successful one." There were about 80 exhibitors last year.

FIVE MEN HURT IN AUTO MISHAP ON BIG SAVAGE

Two Youths of Near Swanton Are in Critical Condition

Five men were injured in an auto crash on the top of Big Savage Mountain about 10:30 o'clock Saturday night. All were taken to the Miners' Hospital, Frostburg, where two were reported in a critical condition, another painfully injured and the other two released after examination and first aid treatment.

William T. Broadwater, of the Swanton community, 22 years old, driver of one of the machines, was badly cut about the throat, face and head. He was thrown through the windshield after the collision. Myrl Wilt, aged 23, a companion of Broadwater, sustained a possible fracture of the skull and severe cuts and bruises. Both these men are in a critical condition. Broadwater is suffering from shock and loss of blood. Chances of his recovery are doubtful. The third person in this machine was a cousin of William T. Broadwater, Wheeler Broadwater, aged about 19, also of the Swanton community. He was cut about the head, face, hands and body, but his injuries were not regarded as serious.

The other machine was operated by James P. McCabe, Oldtown, who was accompanied by R. W. Wheeler, Cumberland. Neither of the men remained in the hospital and aside from slight cuts and bruises and shock, are not seriously hurt.

According to State Police Officer J. R. Miller, the accident was a head-on collision, and apparently the machine operated by Broadwater was on the wrong side of the road. There was no rain, and the road was dry.

The officer did not definitely place responsibility for the crash.

CELEBRATION WILL MARK OPENING OF NEW ROAD

New Highway Promises to Become Popular in that Section

The formal opening of the recently completed Finzel road will be celebrated on Friday afternoon and evening, September 30.

This new road, which promises to become popular, with commuters from Finzel and Meyersdale and points along the road to Somerset, and for lovers of picturesque scenery, is constructed of reinforced concrete, sixteen feet wide. This route was at one time the main artery from Frostburg to Meyersdale and connecting with the Lincoln highway at Jennerstown. It eliminates eight miles of travel from the top of Little Savage to Meyersdale for people of the eastern end of the county.

Max Mathias, Frostburg city engineer, is general chairman in charge of the celebration. Bands and drum corps will be present and Governor Albert C. Ritchie has been invited to speak in addition to state roads officials. A. Charles Stewart and C. Glenn Beall are also asked to participate.

Those attending are asked to bring picnic baskets. There will be dancing during the afternoon and evening in the Finzel community hall and on the new road.

Slightly Injured in Wreck

Mr. S. M. Boliner and daughter, Miss Boliner, and their chauffeur, of Grafton, W. Va., were cut and bruised Monday afternoon when the automobile in which they were riding ran off the road and turned over at the Washington Spring turn on the Crellin-Oakland highway. Miss Boliner was the most seriously cut, her left arm going through a window as the car upset.

They were given medical attention by Dr. Broadwater and later drove to their home in the wrecked machine. Damage to the car was slight.

Lesson for October 2

THE CHRISTIAN'S DEVOTIONAL LIFE

GOLDEN TEXT—But grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. To him be glory now and for ever.
LESSON TEXT—Matthew 6:5-15; Daniel 6:10; II Timothy 3:14-17.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Talking to God.
JUNIOR TOPIC—What Real Prayer Is.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Christian's Devotional Life.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Means of Christian Growth.

The Christian's growth is by means of his devotional life. It requires the symmetrical development of his understanding and heart. Bible study and prayer go hand in hand. The believer's affections need proper direction and exercise.

I. The Christian's Prayer Life (Matt. 6:6-15).

In Christ's teaching in this passage on prayer we note:

1. False prayer (vv. 5-7). This consists.

a. In one praying to be seen and heard of men (v. 5). Many prayers uttered in public are false, for the supreme consideration is what the people think rather than what God thinks. Men who thus pray get a reward but not from God.

b. In using vain repetitions (vv. 7, 8). This does not mean that we should ask but once for the thing desired, for we have examples of Christ and Paul praying three times for the same thing (Matt. 26:39-46; II Cor. 12:7, 8); but rather that the use of meaningless repetitions, reiterations of empty sentences be avoided.

2. True prayer (v. 6). Real prayer is communion of the child of God with his heavenly Father. Life for its fullest development needs both solitude and companionship. God, our Creator, knew what our natures require. Therefore, he commands both public and private prayer (Heb. 10:25; Matt. 6:6).

3. The model prayer (vv. 9-13). This was given in response to the disciples' request that the Lord would teach them to pray (Luke 11:1).

a. A right relationship—"Our Father" (v. 9). Only those who have become children of God by faith in Jesus Christ can pray aright.

b. A right attitude—"Hallowed be thy name" (vv. 9, 10). When one realizes that he has been delivered from the power of darkness and translated into the kingdom of his dear Son (Col. 1:13) by being a child of God, he cannot help pouring out his soul in gratitude and praise, intensely longing for the kingdom, the righteous rule of Christ on the earth.

c. A right spirit (vv. 11-13). This spirit involves

(1) Trust which looks to God for the supply of daily need. We are dependent upon him for our daily food. With all man's boasted progress he cannot make a harvest.

(2) The spirit of love which results in forgiveness of others. God will not listen to the prayers of one who has an unforgiving spirit.

(3) That of holiness which moves one to pray and not to be led into temptation and moves him to long to be delivered from the Evil One.

(4) Regular prayer (Dan. 6:10). Though prohibited by royal decree from asking a petition from any god or man except the king, Daniel did not depart from his regular custom of prayer to God three times a day.

II. The Christian's Bible Study (II Tim. 3:14-17).

This scripture exhibits the value of the Holy Scriptures. Devotional life undirected by the Scriptures will develop in a wrong direction. The affections need to be disciplined through the understanding.

1. The Scriptures able to make one wise unto salvation (v. 15). Salvation is in Christ alone. It is secured through faith in his finished work on the cross. True wisdom leads to Christ crucified since "there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4:12), "and without shedding of blood is no remission" (Heb. 9:22).

2. The Scriptures discipline the life (vv. 16, 17). In the Scriptures doctrine is set forth, the standard of conduct which is absolutely needed. The only place to find God's standard of life is in his Holy Word. It not only exhibits the divine standard, but it reproves; that is, refutes error. The way to deal with error is not denunciation, but the positive presentation of truth. Then, too, it corrects; that is, sets straight many of the dislocations of personal and social conduct. The Word of God not only sets straight, but instructs in righteousness and equips for service.

GEMS OF THOUGHT

If you expect to get to heaven you must go in that direction.

Do not pray for easy lives; pray to be stronger men and women.

If I take care of my character, my reputation will take care of itself.

It is one thing to see the way you should go, and quite another to go the way you see.

Roaming 'Round In Maryland

THREE WESTERN COUNTIES HOLD THE DELIGHT OF THE HILLS AND THE WILD LAND

(Editor's Note—The article following, prepared by Mr. Henry M. Hyde, staff writer for the Baltimore Sunday Sun, appeared in that paper Sunday, September 25. In it there are several errors that are misleading and should be corrected. Oakland was laid out by John Armstrong, about the year 1852; the two springs referred to as existing at Mountain Lake Park are located at Altamont, nine miles east of that place and at the apex of Backbone Mountain; if there have been 600,000 pike planted in Deep Creek Lake they should soon make a showing of their prowess by annihilating the tench with which that body of water is teeming.)

Coming from the west you ride up the long climbing spirals of Seven-Mile Mountain on your way to the so-called wilds of Garrett county and meet a couple of farm boys driving a flock of ninety lambs to market. At sight of the car the fleecy fools jam themselves into a solid dam, blocking the highway.

One of the shepherds tells you that the chief place of entertainment in Oakland, the county seat, is the William-James Hotel. How unexpected and how charming that here, in the heart of the Maryland wilderness, the name of the greatst of Harvard philosophers should be commemorated!

Presently we were to learn that this is not the only literary association with Garrett county.

A Famed Bear Hunt

Crossing the huge shoulders of Backbone Mountain we pick up a foot traveler. He tells of a famous bear hunt which took place only last year on the slopes of Backbone. It lasted most of two days and ended with the killing of a four-hundred pound black bear. One of the hunters was a man named Browning. His great-grandfather was old Meshach Browning, foremost of Maryland hunters and one of the first and most enduring of Maryland authors.

I know not how many editions of his book "Forty-four Years of the Life of a Hunter" have been published. The first I have seen was dated 1859 and the last 1928. There were others between. It still remains one of the most thrilling and entertaining of hunter's tales.

The Daily Hunting

Old Meshach lived, with his "dear Mary" in a log cabin in what is now Garrett county. As almost every page of his book reveals, he was accustomed, day after day, to take his rifle, his hunting dogs, "Gunner," "Bos'n" and "Watch," and go out on the war path for bears, panthers, wolves and other "varmints," to say nothing of deer. He had many hand-to-hand encounters with catamounts and bears, the latter of which he did not hesitate to pursue down into their dens.

Some of the tales are tall, but they are vouched for in the first edition by what amounts to a series of affidavits by such men as Francis P. Blair, of Silver Spring, and Edward Stabler, of Harewood. They declare that old Mesach was a man of the strictest probity.

There is another good reason for not questioning his veracity. In his book Meshach Browning states that, writing at the age of 80, he has then living 130 male descendants. The clan survives in Garrett county in increasing numbers and they revere the memory of their progenitor.

Most of the Brownings inherited a love for music and, at family gatherings, it is said to be often possible to muster all the players for a full band or orchestra.

A thousand-acre State game refuge near Oakland is called by the family name.

Sold To Civilization

Once or twice a year old Meshach used to load a huge wagon with bear meat and saddles of venison and drive down over the hills to civilization, stopping to sell his load at Cumberland, Frederick and Baltimore. On such occasions his "dear Mary" made him fringed deerskin shirts of especial beauty.

What could be more remarkable than that this wilderness hunter—the first settler in what is now Garrett county—at the age of 80, should have had the industry—to say nothing of the skill—to write with his own hand a manuscript which fills 400 closely printed pages and which after seventy years remains a real hunting classic?

It is possible to get into more direct touch with old Meshach, for his long rifle, with which he slew thousands of deer and hundreds of bears and panthers, is still preserved in the Smithsonian Museum in Washington.

The Garrett Scene

We drop down over the crest of Backbone, but not far, for Oakland lies on the famous Glades plateau, a comparatively level plain nine miles long and half a mile above sea level. It is just over the top of the Allegheny Mountains and marks the dividing line between the watershed of Chesapeke Bay and that of the Gulf of Mexico.

On the grounds of Mountain Lake Park—more famous once than now as a training place for foreign missionaries and for religious and prohibition rallies—2 springs rise, not far apart. One of them flows into the Youghiogheny River—locally called the "Yough"—and so, finally, into the Mississippi. The other discharges into the north branch of the Potomac.

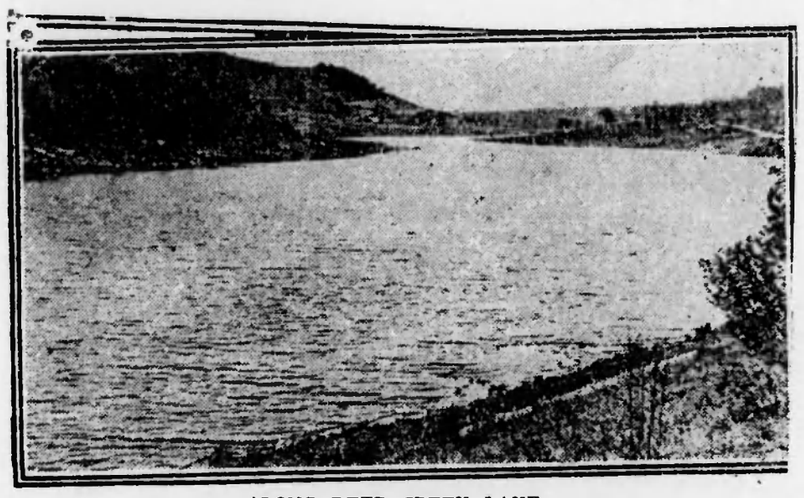
It is pleasant to find that the William-James Hotel is comfortable and that its meals are appetizing. We turn to look at a big map of the county and are intrigued by the names of the mountains. There are Roman Nose, and Negro Mountains, Big Savage and Meadow, the highest of all being apparently an unnamed peak which rises to 3,300 feet.

The Founder

Presently we are delighted by one of those bits of human interest and color which make leisurly travel in Maryland so amusing. This little mountain town of Oakland was laid out it appers by a certain aristocratic Frenchman, who came to the backwoods nearly a hundred years ago, fresh from the post of governor of the Island of Guadeloupe, one of the French West Indies. What strange chance of random fancy moved him?

A rough dirt road running by one of the State's forest reserves—there are nearly 30,000 acres in the county—leads to Swallow Falls, one of the two finest and most picturesque cascades in the State. The other and larger is Muddy Creek Falls nearby. Neither is majestic, but both, in the Maryland fashion, are charming.

Back again to the State highway, the road presently runs over a bridge, crossing Deep Creek Lake, which is twelve miles long, a mile wide in places and sixty-five feet deep, a reservoir of clear, cold mountain water among the hills, down which a half dozen small streams run into it.



ALONG DEEP CREEK LAKE

Long a Fishing Ground

Even before the dam was built and the big lake created, it was a famous place fro trout. Grover Cleveland spent part of his honeymoon near hy and other distinguished men have followed his example. A few years ago Henry Ford, Thomas A. Edison, John Burroughs and Harvey Firestone camped for a week at the door of Swallow Falls.

Swepson Earle, State Conservation Commissioner, is pretty mad at Baltimore people because more of them do not come up and catch some of the 600,000 pike and the scores of thousands of black bass and brook trout which he has added to the population of the lake. Deer come down to bathe in its waters, and in the mountain glades wild turkeys and big coveys of the native grouse make their homes, so there is a double attraction for the sportsman.

The fact that Baltimore is more than two hundred miles away, while West Virginia and Pennsylvania rub elbows with Garrett county, accounts for the fact that, at present, citizens of those states make up most of the summer population.

Real Winter Weather

One exception must be made to the statement that the winter climate of Maryland is mild and clement. True to its tradition of providing practically everything under one tent—and that a small one—the State offers in Garrett county, half a mile up in the sky, a marvelous field for winter sports. There are normally snowdrifts a-plenty, as is evidenced by the heavy snow fences piled for future use along the State highways. There are hills innumerable for skiing and lakes and rivers to provide miles of skating.

Thickly sprinkled among the forests and mountains of Garrett are a couple of thousand big farms. Many of their owners belong to such queer religious sects as the Amish and Dunkards. Some of them may fasten their clothes with hooks and eyes because they think buttons are sinful, but that does not affect their skill as farmers—or the fertility of their soil.

These amateur eyes have never looked on such fields of corn as sweep up the Garrett hillsides. It stands seven or eight feet tall in unbroken ranks, and in such a deep, rich green as to be almost black. The huge hay fields are clipped as smoothly as if they had just come from the barber. And back of many of the farmsteads stand big groves of hard maples, which produce each spring thousands of pounds of maple sugar—to complete the list of Maryland delicacies.

The State highway over Negro, Meadow and Big Savage Mountains, leading to Cumberland are just now undergoing reconstruction, and travel is not smooth. But its completion is not many months away.

A Classic Entrance

The classic entrance to Allegany county and Cumberland is from the east.

The State highway, cleverly engineered, runs up and over a series of five high ridges. From their crests the traveler looks down and out over as many wide and beautiful pictures, opening one after the other like so many pages in a book.

In fact the whole story of Allegany and Cumberland is almost wholly pictorial. From the earliest days the Cumberland Narrows were called "the front door of the Allegheny mountains" and through them passed, like pictures on a screen, a long procession of Indian fighters, pioneers, explorers and British generals. This was the gateway to the battlefields on which French and English fought for the control of the Ohio country. Nature made it one of the central points of early American history.

The Moving Figures

See, for instance, the ill-fated but heroic Gen. Edward Braddock, riding through the mountain wilderness—to fight French and Indians—in a coach, drawn by six blooded horses. Behind him, over the stony tracks toiled a train of two hundred wagons, conveying the tin bath tugs and other baggage and supplies of the general, his staff and other officers.

Watch again 1,400 tall British regulars—Coldsteram Guards—disciplined to the minute, taught to fight in hellow squares, marching into Fort Cumberland. Presently they are to cut a narrow path through the mountain forests to the west and to be slaughtered by unseen savages, who hide behind trees and fire down on them from the hilltops.

The Cumberland screen holds a score of snapshots of George Washington. First comes the youth of 21, already a notable, sent up through the Cumberland gap to warn the French that the British claim to the Ohio, the Great Lakes and the Mississippi would be defended.

Washington Again

A year later—in 1754—Washington appears again. Now he commands 300 Virginia militia and with that little army he fights—and wins—his first battle. It was the opening of the long struggle between French and English for the control of North America.

There are other Cumberland snapshots of Washington: After his defeat at Fort Necessity, after the rout of Braddock's army, and finally, last picture of all, President Gorge Washington, putting on his old uniform again and coming to Cumberland to command the little army called together to put down the Whisky Rebellion in 1794.

Western Maryland took a considerable part in that insurrection. It was impossible to transport rye and corn profitably over the mountain roads, so most farmers turned to whisky. It was used as currency, a gallon being the equivalent of a shilling at the stores. The census of 1810 records that there were 140 distilleries in Frederick county alone and more proportionately in Alegany and Washington. In 1858 the price of whisky in Cumberland was 28 cents a gallon.

Cumberland's Own Hero

Cumberland's own local hero of early times, Col. Thomas Cresap, the indefatigable Indian fighter and explorer, appears many times. He pioneered all over the western part of the State and even pushed out into the Ohio country, where he established a settlement. One of his sons was killed In a fight with the Indians on what has ever since been called Dan's Mountain. Another son and 2 grandsons were officers in the Revolutionary Army and, it is said, forty of his descendants served the United States in the World War. A monument to his memory stands in a Cumberland park and the remnants of some of the small stone forts he built are still preserved.

So the story of Cumberland—second city of the State—goes on in vivid snapshots. There is the dark night In 1865, when thirty-five Confederate raiders slipped by the pickets of the 8,000 Union soldiers camped about the city and captured and took away into captivity Maj.-Gen. George Crook and Maj.-Gen. B. F. Kelly of the Federal Army.

The Coal Industry

There is a series of pictures of the development of the coal industry, to which Allegany county largely owes its wealth—pictures of coal from the Big Vein on George's Creek, floating down the Potomac River in flat-bottomed boats, at first, then years later, filling long lines of barges on the Cresapeake and Ohio Canal and endless trains of coal cars.

There are pictures of Welsh and Scotch miners coming to Allegany settling mostly about such mining towns as Frostburg and Lonaconing, and digging not only coal, but iron ore and fire brick clay out of the mountain sides, giving a new flavor to the Maryland speech.

Now and then close-ups of strange and remarkable individuals flash on the screen.

Here is the figures of the brilliant and eloquent but eccentric and violent Francis Thomas, Congressman, diplomat and Governor of Maryland, who spent his last years almost as a hermit, in the mountains of Eastern Garrett.

The duel in 1840 between Thomas and William Price, later a leader of the Baltimore bar, was sensational, though it proved bloodless.

Fainter is the pictures of a strange Englishman named Evarts, traditionally of noble birth, who, being jilted by the girl to whom he was engaged, hid his broken heart in a log cabin on the tip of a remote mountain, which is still trackless. There he lived and died nearly 200 years ago. The few who have climbed Evitt's Mountain—so has the name been corrupted—report finding the ruins of a stone chimney, a small clearing and other indications of ancient occupation.

Driving back to Baltimore the car crosses just east of Cumberland Evitt's creek, another memorial to the man who died for love.

Now the car climbs on easy grades to the top of Martin's Mountain 1700 feet in the air, from which the picture is of almost unbroken woods, running up and down the shoulders of the nearby hills.

Solid Woodland

From the crests of Polish Mountain and the Green Ridge—slightly lower—the picture is much the same, deep, climbing slopes of solid woodland.

Not until the car stops on the top of Town Hill Mountain does the human element enter to make the scene more charming. Down in the valley of Town Hill creek, far below, are many formsteads, the yellowing stubble fields, the plowed land and the white and red buildings adding variety and color to the wide picture.

The easternmost barrier of Allegany is the quaintly named Sideling Hill, which appears on the early maps as Sidelong Hill.

Just west is a huge tract of State forest reserve, running down to the Potomac and almost up to the Pennsylvania line.

The State road over Sideling Hill—a part, of course, of the old route leading into the historic National Highway—runs close to the edge of the cliff, but the view, which should be very wide and beautiful, is largely cut off by the tops of trees.

One suggests, with all due modesty, to the men who have so skillfully built this road, that the cutting, here and there, of a few high-growing trees, would open up as many beautiful vistas and add much to the pleasure of the motorist.

Washington County

Drive east down Sideling Hill into Washington county and the picture immediately softens, the landscape grows more smiling. To the south lies the low green valley of the Potomac, with its wide meadows. Running from the highway far down to the river is the great 5,000-acre preserve of the Woodmount Rod and Gun Club. Close by are two big State game reguges, so that a sensible wild duck may take its choice of quarters with or without shooting.

Near Hancock, big apple orchards sweep over the slopes as far as the eye can reach. It is here that William Penn and Virginia did their best to cut Maryland squarely in two. They so nearly succeeded that just at Hancock the State is only two miles wide.

Bits By The Way

Up the road, beside the orchards, comes tramping a tall, red-headed young fellow, hatless and wearing a ragged white shirt. Incredibly, he carries a guitar swung around his neck and is thrumming a tune as he comes. Such a wandering minstrel would have been quite out of place on the high sides of Big Savage Mountain. Here in Washington county he, somehow, seems at home.

The Passing Villages

The road runs smoothly on through several of the friendly little villages which are characteristic of the Maryland scene. The small houses grow in rows tight up against the sidewalk. Just inside the curb are unbroken ranks of tall old trees which shade their fronts. Most of them sport gay, little window boxes and thick vines clamber up the porch pillars.

At the corner of one such street a more than plump and elderly gentleman sat in a wide rocking chair on the brick sidewalk. His face was rosy, his head covered with a thick thatch of white hair; he wore wide and baggy linen trousers and a white shirt, open at the neck. An old, hard maple tree completely shaded him from the sun. In his right hand he carried a palm-leaf fan, which he used chiefly to wave salutes to the neighbors who exchanged smiles with him and passed on the edge of the sidewalk to give him plenty of room.

He was poor. He was certainly not an intellectual giant; there was nothing to suggest that he had ever played a large or important part in the world. He merely looked like a man who had lived a long, comfortable and happy life—and who was still at it.

Some of the old ladies, who were paying neighborly visits and who wore nice blue and white checkered sunbonnets, had the same aspect.

Signs along the roadside indicate that relatives of the late Levi Z. Leiter, whose daughter became vicereine of India, are still doing business in the town which is named after the family.

Hagerstown's Memories

Hagerstown itself, the third city of the State, still cherishes the memory of the days when Gen. Thomas Sprigg lived on his great estate, which he called Sprigg's Paradise, maintained his private race track and pack of hounds and set the pace for gay and spacious living among the neighboring planters.

A more recent local hero was Gov. William T. Hamilton, one of whose daughters writes delightfully in the Atlantic about her life in Hagerstown, where even the street car conductors were most polite, carrying the bundles of each of their lady passengers to the very door.

In a Hagerstown cemetery is the grave of Thomas Kennedy, who seems to have been one of the most versatile of men. He was by turns merchant, poet, editor, politician and United States Senator. On his monument is a tablet, given by the Jews of Maryland in gratitude for Kennedy's successful effort to secure passage of a law giving Jews the right to vote without sacrifice of their religion. He was one of the apostles of religious tolertion in the State.

A Church Dispute

An amusing example of that toleration for which Maryland is famous is one of he memories of Boonsboro, a few miles down the valley. There, in the old days, the Lutherans and Calvinists decided to build a joint house of worship. They clashed on certain architectural details. The Lutherans proposed that the windows of the church should have rounded tops. The Calvinists held that rounded tops were sinful. They must be square.

Here was material for a first-class row. But the sweetly reasonable sons of Maryland did not quarrel. They simply went ahead and built their church, with the tops of the windows on one side round—that belonged to the Lutherans—and on the other side square.

The chief claim to fame of Smithburg, another village beyond Hagerstown, is the fact that so law-abiding are its inhabitants and so strong their taste for literature that they actually turned their jail into a public library.

Williamsport's Claim

A third hamlet in Washington, with an intriguing tradition, is Williamsport, on the Potomac, which was laid out by the famous Gen. Otho Holland Williams, with broad avenues and public squares. It was his idea that the new town should be chosen as the capital of the United States. George Washington looked it over, but decided that it was too far above the head of navigation for big ships and turned thumbs down on the project.

It is incongruous that here in the midst of this peaceful, happy, smiling countryside should have been fought perhaps the fiercest and most bloody battle of the Civil War.

Now, after seventy years, the small creek of Antietam again flows softly beneath the arches of its century old stone bridges and under the huge weeping willow trees which grow along its banks. And in the small town of Sharpsburg, which gave its name to the battle, the little dooryard gardens are gay with flowers.

COMMERCIAL CLUBS—

Every live town has a commercial club.

Dead towns have none and cemeteries do not need them.

The mission of a commercial club is to make good towns better—to make live towns livelier and to promote healthy business and social conditions.

Individualism may accomplish something. Every business man working by himself may get some results, but organization and cooperative effort, if rightly directed, can and will accomplish much more.

Purely commercial objectives are not the only reasons for a commercial club. A club can cultivate among the members a feeling of solidarity of interest and spirit of working together for the common good. Petty jealousies and rivalries which retard the growth of the town can be adjusted and the possibilties are unlimited.

Oakland has started a commercial club. It is hoped that the present objective of putting Oakland and Garrett county before the people of Pittsburgh will be a successful one, and that any other future objectives may have similar conclusions.

It is also to be hoped that other towns of the county follow suit.

SHIFTING GEARS

The speech of Governor Roosevelt at Salt Lake City on the railroad question is a virtual repudiation of the strategy which the Democratic orators used at the beginning of the present campaign. At the outset, it will be remembered, we were regaled with reference to the "forgotten man." President Hoover, we were informed by the opposition, had been seeking only to help the big corporations, the big banks, the railroads and other octopi of big business and the rest of us were "forgotten men."

But suddenly all of that has changed. In his Salt Lake City speech Governor Roosevelt informed us that "the problem of the railroads is the problem of each and every one of us." The owners of the railroads, he declared, are not "the great railway magnates sitting in luxurious offices and clubs," but "the people throughout the country who have a savings bank account or an insurance policy, or in some measure an ordinary checking account." Continuing Governor Roosevelt said:

"When you put money in the bank or pay that insurance premium, you are buying an interest in the railroads. Some $2,000,000,000 more are held by churches, hospitals, charitable organizations, colleges and similar institutions as endowment. The remaining bonds are scattered far and wide among a host of people whose life savings have been invested in this standard American industry."

Later on in his address Governor Roosevelt took occasion to approve the policy of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Here is noticeable a complete change in the Democratic compaign. A few weeks ago we were told that this was a battle of corporations and special interests against the "forgotten man." Now we are informed that the "forgotten man" has an interest in railroads and banks and other institutions which were supposedly in the hands of plutocrats.

In the meantime where are Senator Wheeler and the other Democratic big brothers of the "forgotten man" campaign? Governor Roosevelt is reported as having come to the conclusion that the election is now "in the bag" so to speak. Evidently Messrs. Norris, Wheeler, Dill, Huey Long et al., once in the forefront of the Roosevelt ian battle before the good Governor got the nomination, are in the bag too and the string has been pulled taunt.

At any rate we are pleased to note the amount of good Republican doctrine in Governor Roosevelt's Salt Lake City speech.

At Martinsburg, W. Va., thieves, breaking into a wareroom, stole 40 bags of Red Cross flour, intended for distribution among the poor of Berkeley county.

HOOVER'S GREAT SERVICE TO PEOPLE

Vice President Curtis, opening the Republican national campaign in West Virginia, declared that President Hoover had done ten times as much to relieve economic distress as had been accomplished in times of peace by any President in the nation's history. This is the truth and, if it be be properly presented to the people, it should utterly demolish the fault-finders who seek to blame the head of the nation for all the ills of the hour. Mr. Hoover was faced with a gigantic task, and he has undertaken it with the kind of industry, intelligence and courage that is beyond all praise.

Virtually every one of the relief measures put into operation has been sponsored by the President. He is responsible for halting immigration which, if continued, would have brot in cheap foreign labor to harass those of our own people who are still working; he has approved the protective tariff which, in spite of some inequalities, is shielding workingmen, farmers and manufacturers from the lower standards of living of other countries. He has encouraged the Farm Loan Bank and has fathered the Home Loan Bank for the benefit of the agriculturalist and the home owner. He conceived the idea of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation which has done so much to relieve economic conditions. The Vice President says that of the 3600 loans made to banks, 70 per cent went to banks in towns of 5000 or less population. Speaking of what he and his associates have done, President Hoover says:

"I rest the case of the Republican party on the intelligence and the just discernment of the American people. Should my countrymen again place upon me the responsibilities of this high office, I shall carry forward the work of reconstruction. I shall hope long before another four years have passed to see the world prosperous and at peace and every American home again in the sunshine of genuine progress and genuine prosperity. I shall seek to maintain untarnished and unweakened those fundamental traditions and principles upon which our nation was founded and upon which it has grown. I shall invite and welcome the help of every man and woman in the preservation of the United States for the happiness of its people. This is my pledge to the nation and to Almighty God."

These words are eloquent with both feeling and meaning; and when we consider what he has done and is doing he has a right to feel proud of his efforts to bring the nation through this dark period of adversity. He deserves to be reelected because of his honesty, his sincerity and his tireless industry. "I have but one desire," says Mr. Hoover, "that is to see my country again on the road to prosperity which shall be more sane and lasting through the lesson of experience, and to see the ideals of the American people perpetuated."

It is obvious that these sentiments come from the heart. The man from whom they come has devoted himself unselfishly to the interests of the taxpayers; he has done everything possible to hasten business recovery. He deserves the hearty support and the full confidence of the American people. Common sense demands that he shall be authorized to complete his unfinished task; and common justice requires that he be given a full measure of gratitude for the strenuous months of toil and thought he has devoted to the solution of the gravest problems that have ever confronted a peace-time President of the United States.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

Evidently the list of people who would like to know just what is Governor Roosevelt's stand on the question of protection is growing. The platform of his party, which has been endorsed by the candidate for President, calls for comptitive tariff for revenue. What does that mean?

One distinguished student of tariff principles has evidently come to the conclusion that this means competition between American workers and the cheaply paid workers of Europe and Asia who are not used to the American standard of living. That student is Matthew Woll, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, who assailed a lower tariff policy in a nation-wide radio address the other night, declaring that the application of such principles meant the menace of foreign competition and foreign wage scales for American workers.

In his address Mr. Woll pointed out the fact that average wages in American manufacturing industry last year were 60 cents an hour while the average wage rate was 12 cents an hour in France, nine cents in Italy and seven cents an hour in Japan.

Even a beginner in the study of economics ought to be able to see what would result if our tariff schedules were lowered to the point where we would have a competitive tariff for revenue. And Governor Roosevelt might tell his public whether he wants the American workers to compete with the twelve cent French, the nine cent Italian or the seven cent Japanese worker.

In dealing on the old question of markets Mr. Woll said: "Government statistics clearly indicate that more than 93 per cent of the products of American labor and agriculture are consumed in America. This is due to the high standard of living and work which prevails in our land. Our problem is rather that of extending the home consuming power.

"Unrestrained competition of foreign with domestic goods in our home markets, whether agricultural or industrial products, cannot and will not solve our problems, but will contribute to their severity."

There can be no question as to the soundness of this argument. The theoretical free traders would have us open the greatest market in the world, one which consumes 93 per cent of our farm and manufactured products, to the wares of cheap foreign producers in the fond hope that this would increase our markets abroad. But how would we fare in exchanging our big home market, made up of consumers who have money to spend, for one in Europe where the average rate of wages is ten cents on hour.

And as for Governor Roosevelt's competitive tariff, competition in goods means competition in wages. How would it help our producers to cut the earning capacity of our workers from sixty cents to ten cents an hour? The answer to this is of course that we haven't anything to do with fixing foreign wages. Certainly not, and in the meantime let us keep tariff schedules that will protect the sixty cents an hour worker in America from the ten cent worker in Europe.

The best way to help, as Mr. Woll suggests, is to extend the home market which still has great possibilities. There would be no sense or logic in giving up this market in the hope that sometime we might get something from Europe. About all this country ever gets in Europe is a pain in the neck.

But in the meantime there is danger to our economic structure in talk of a competitive tariff for revenue. As Mr. Woll well says: "Unless we stand guard, the barriers which have been erected to protect our standards and institutions will be nibbled away or torn down by our enemies and by our well meaning but ill advised friends."

Do Not Delay Culling of Flocks

If you have not already done so, poultrymen should be making plans for the culling of their flocks during the next few weeks, as the best time for this work is during September and early October, says Wade H. Rice, poultry specialist for the Extension Service, University of Maryland. At this time of the year it is possible to judge the value of a hen by her past performance, general condition and vigor.

Advantages of culling as pointed out by Mr. Rice are manifold; probably the most outstanding are: lowering cost of feed bill, elimination of weak and sickly birds, prevention of disease in flock, reduction in labor bill, saving in house space, lowering the clement of risk, reducing investment and improving flock generally.

Contrary to the prevailing idea, culling is very easy when done on a basis of growth, development and health, it is stated. The person in charge of culling should retain only those birds having large, bright combs and eyes, white, thin and flat shanks, well-sprung ribs, a broad back behind the hips, a body that is deep—front and rear—and plumage ragged and worn by late molting. In this connection, it is pointed out by Mr. Rice, that birds molting early likewise stop laying early and to be profitable birds should lay well into September.

Dairy Cattle Judging Team

The Dairy Cattle Judging Team representing this State and the University of Maryland was awarded highest honors in the judging contests held recently in the Students' Intercollegiate Judging contest at the Eastern States Exposition at Springfiled, Mass. Members of the winning Maryland team were John E. Clark, Forest Hill, Harford county; George E. Connelly, Rising Sun, Cecil county, and John N. Ensor, Sparks, Baltimore county. Strong prices for beef steers in recent months have tended to create a wide interest in beef cattle. There are already over 80 herds of Aberdeen-Angus beef cattle in Virginia and Maryland.

PLANS FOR 8-COUNTY FAIR AT PITTSBURGH MATURING

tour of the city, during which they will visit the Heinz and the Wm. G. Johnston plants as well as many of the interesting points of the city, including the parks and splendid boulevards.

A free theatre party for the women and girls is being planned, and it is believed that this will be on Friday afternoon. While this is in progress the men will have an opportunity to visit the stockyards, produce yards and markets.

Boggs & Buhl Department Store is entertaining at lunch on Saturday the various string bands from the Tableland which broadcast over Station KDKA; and the company plans to stage a fashion show for Saturday, October 15th, in connection with the orchestra concert. In addition to the string orchestra, there will be a large professional orchestra to provide music for the fashion promenade.

Gimbel's is taking extraordinary pains to have everything in readiness for the fair, and certain departments will be practically discontinued in order to provide space for th eexhibits. A section is being set asido for the men and women who wish to take orders for later delivery of potatoes, apples, eggs, etc., and in another section it is planned to have a reproduction of a maple sugar camp, with people from the Tableland in attendance.

Buckwheat growers in West Virginia plan to have women on the job making homemade buckwheat cakes for the city visitors; and Confluence whispers a secret about having a bevy of Maple Sugar Maidens present to see that the cakes are properly and thoroughly sweetened. It has not been learned who will furnish the butter.

The high-light of the fair will be a huge good-fellowship banquet on Friday evening, October 14th. This is the only event for which a charge will be made, which is to be one dollar per person.

There will be innumerable door prizes and souvenirs; and the entertainment will be provided by the various radio stations of Pittsburgh, who promise their best talent; and an interested friend of the Tableland promises all kinds of balloons and noisemakers to add to the merriment. Any one who wishes to attend should send one dollar immediately to the Secretary, Allegheny Tableland Council, Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce. Only 600 tickets will be available, and they won't go far among the thousands who plan to attend the fair.

A suggestion comes for the women and girls who plan to enter quilts and fancywork in the fair. Write your name and address on a piece of muslin and baste it securely to the back of your work. If the work is to be sold, put the price on the same piece of muslin, and write it also on the outside of your package. If it is sold, the money will be forwarded shortly after the fair closes. Otherwise the work will be returned without charge as soon as possible.

Men who enter huge pumpkins or anything else, for that matter, may take their exhibits from the display between five and six o'clock on the last day of the fair. Otherwise the exhibits will be disposed of as announced in the premium lists.

Attend to these things now: Get an entry blank from the county agent or the Secretary mentioned above; send the entry blank immediately; listen in to the announcements over KDKA at 12:15 E. S. T., daily this week; make your plans to go to the fair.

Rice for the Economy Diet

Rice Pilau

Two thin slices of salt pork, finely diced; ¾ cup uncooked rice, 3 cups of hot water, 2 medium sized onions, cut fine; 2 cups tomato juice and pulp, 4 tablespoons minced parsley, salt, pepper, paprika.

Fry the salt pork until slightly browned. Add the rice which has been washed and drained, and stir until the rice is a golden brown, adding the onions meantime. Add the hot water gradually, cover and cook. when the rice is tender, add the remaining ingredients, place in a greased baking dish, and bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven.

Rice Patties

Cook boiled rice until it is fairly soft, drain, but do not rinse. Spread it about an inch thick in a shallow pan, pressing it down well. Cut into rounds with a biscuit cutter. Place the rounds in a greased pan, adding a bit of butter to each. Brown in a hot oven or under a broiling flame. One cup of uncooked rice makes about twelve patties. Serve creamed meats or creamed vegetables over the rice patties.

Baked Creamy Rice Pudding

Three tablespoons uncooked rice, 1 quart milk, 1-3 cup sugar, ½ teaspoon nutmeg or cinnamon, ½ teaspoon salt.

Wash the rice, add to the remaining ingredients, and stir the mixture. Pour into a baking dish, and bake 2½ to 3 hours in a slow oven. Stir three or four times during the first hour. One-half cup of raisins may be added if desired. The creaminess and delicious flavor of this pudding result from long, slow cooking.

Substitute cooked rice for bread crumbs in making meat loaves or scalloped dishes.

Combine left-over rice with the less tender cuts of meat in making stews.

Make a stuffing for tomatoes by mixing boiled rice with chopped cooked meat, minced green pepper and celery; or omit the chopped meat, and use as a stuffing for meats or fish.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

I knew somebody out in the world would hear of me if I stuck to newspaper work long enough. I have heard from the American Magazine after being out of college only five years. Think of it, ladies and gentlemen: success is within my grasp at last. Below is part of the letter:

Dear Buddy:

I have heard that you are an ambitious boy who would welcome the opportunity to earn dozens of dandy prizes and earn your own spending money. (Spending money for two now, if you please)

All right! Listen closely! I am going to make you the biggest offer you ever heard of! You can become a Crowell Junior salesman, and deliver the American Magazine to regular customers in your neighborhood.

Do you know what that means? Just this: You can have a business of your own and make money by the peck. (I've always wanted both) Besides, you can win your choice of a bicycle, watch, flashlight, airplanc, clothing and athletic equipment. (It's me for a bicycle to ride to work)

Hyde's Interprcter Goofy?

When Henry M. Hyde came roaming 'round this section of Maryland several weeks ago, he let his imagination run wilder than he pictured this county in his article in the Sunday Sun last Sunday.

Although not belittling the literary accomplishments of anybody in this neck of the woods, he certainly barked up the wrong tree in assuming that the William-James hotel was named for the greatest of Harvard philosophers. How flattered Willie Davis and Jim Towler should feel over having combined their names to make this a great place for the literati.

Mr. Hyde's intentions when he set out were to wander among the counties and their people in a leisurely manner. As a matter of fact Mr. Hyde spent the morning in the northern section of the county and in the vicinity of Swallow Falls, arriving at Oakland late for the noonday meal. He left the same evening for Cumberland, having leisurely spent one day in Garrett county, the second largest county in the State.

His one and only picture of Deep Creek Lake shows the end of a sinall inlet, with stumps sticking out of the water and cows grazing out in the middle. An excellent foundation with which to make anybody believe that the lake is 12 miles long, 65 feet deep, and over a mile wide in places.

To say nothing of listening to the wrong tongue who told of this territory being settled by an aristocratic Frenchman, and calling this the heart of the wilderness. Having been fenced in by tall buildings for so long, this writer evidently went wild upon seeing a grove of trees.

Some day I will ramble 'round in Baltimore and write a story from my observations. And I will dare any of the Baltimore papers to print it.

Almost Human

There's a story that comes out of California. It's about the pelicans of Santa Monica Bay and these pelicans remind us of a lot of human beings.

For years these pelicans had been fed by fishermen from their surplus catch, until they got in the habit of eating without work.

Then one year high seas and changing currents off Santa Monica cut down the catch, and fishermen no longer had any fish to spare. They noticed that the pelicans languished and grew thin and it dawned on them that they had forgotten how to fish for themselves. So they went down the coast and found some unpampered pelicans who had never been ruined by easy living and free fish. They turned them loose among the starving birds, who sat about on the beach and complained of the hard times.

The way those imported pelicans went out after their own fish was an eyeopener. Pretty soon the hungry natives quit watching and tried it themselves. They discovered there are plenty of fish in the sea for the bird with energy and enterprise. And they quit talking about hard times.

A lot of Garrett county people have wanted to forget how to fish for themselves. They are already out of practice, and it might be a good suggestion to let them know that they better not get too far out of the running. The rest of the people might not have any new pelicans to bring in.

They'll probably have to rent the Maryland theatre for the cow trial that is to come up on Friday. There won't be enough room in Squire Gonder's office.

Somebody told me last week they thought it was a mystery about another member of this household coming here on October 1st, and that it was a mystery about the whole affair, because the party of the second part of the Scoop household had never been seen.

Well, the mystery will begin to unfold itself next Monday morning.

SLOSH! — wosh — slosh — wosh—Jim came to with a start.

He sat up gripping both sides of the skiff. The dickens! He was adrift and already several feet from shore. The rope must have come untied from the anchor. Yes, there it was trailing. But it looked as if—by Jove, it had been cut!

Probably by that red-headed kid back there on the beach, jumping up and down and laughing at him. Wait until he got hold of him.

Thoroughly awakened by this time, Jim examined the boat in which he had so casually allowed himself to take a nap. There were no oars and nothing detachable that might serve as oars. He must either jump overboard and swim, thereby doing considerable damage to his clothes, or else resign himself to the situation.

The outer rim of the small cove was fringed with small islands, some of them grassy and tree clad, others rocky and bare, and one with a house on it.

Chances were that he would eventually bump one of those islands, and could either pick up a bit of driftwood and paddle himself to the mainland, signal the occupants of the house for a rescue or, at the worst, simply wait until some one at the hotel discovered his absence and investigated. In time, no doubt, the red-headed ruffian would have sense enough to own up to what had happened.

Not until the skiff's side actually grated on the shoal did Jim feel altogether certain, however, that he was actually going to strike the bit of land with a house on it.

He heaved a sigh of relief, lifted his eyes, then gasped all but audibly.

Above him, obviously amused, was quite the prettiest girl he had ever seen.

Then it flashed upon him that she might possibly be alone upon the island, and, if so, the advent of a strange man would most certainly be annoying. She spoke first.

"I have been watching you, wondering if you would make a good landing. You see—my—my husband will be back here any moment with the boat and will be glad to take you back. I take it you accidentally got afloat."

"You've said it!" cried Jim gaily. "A little red-headed devil cut the rope while I was taking a nap. You see. I was—er—waiting for my—er—wife"—there, that would make it better all around. If she had a husband and he had a wife, the thought of them ought to act as sufficient chaperonage.

"That's what it looked like. That is, I don't mean it looked as if you were waiting for a wife, but as if you were adrift. Won't—won't you come up and wait until my—my husband returns? He's out fishing—there, I think you can see his boat out near that buoy?' She indicated a tiny black speck out towards the horizon. "He'll be starting home presently."

So, for two hours that passed all too swiftly, they sat getting acquainted while the sun sank lower and lower. If the girl was good to look upon, no less, in his own masculine way, was Jim. And they discovered a kindred taste in books, marine engines and radio announcers.

"What a pity," thought the girl, "that every nice young man I meet is always married!"

And "What a shame," thought Jim, "that the only girl I ever knew I could love has a husband!" but they did not speak aloud what was in their minds.

So engrossed did they become in unearthing mutual congenialities that the speck near the horizon had grown to a sizable object easily to be made out as a boat with a single occupant, before either became aware of its approach.

The figure it held was a slim one, khaki clad.

"Needs a haircut!" was Jim's unspoken comment as he glimpsed a tawny mop that matched the sunset.

Then he noticed that his pretty companion was folding and unfolding her slender hands nervously.

"Mr.—er—" she began.

"Jim Murdock," supplied Jim promptly.

"Well—why didn't you say so to start with?" cried the girl. "My sister, who is staying at the hotel, has told me all about you. And about the book you are writing. But—" and she looked at him accusingly. "She distinctly said you were a bachelor!"

"I am," said Jim meekly. "I invented a wife just to save you embarrassment. Thought you might not mind so much my unceremonious intrusion if you thought—"

He was interrupted by a silvery burst of laughter. "How funny!" cried the girl. "I invented a husband for similar reasons. I realized right afterward that sooner or later you'd find out, but I thought for the moment it would suffice. In reality, that person in the boat is my Aunt Agatha, the most indefatigable fisherman in Sheltered Cove!"

That night the telephone in the home of red-headed Billy Masters rang stridently. His mother answered, then turned in amazement to her son who had been watching his mother nervously.

"I don't understand," she said. "A man from the drug store has just called up and said that a gentleman has left orders that every day for a month you are to be given a chocolate ice cream soda charged to his account!"

MT. LAKE PARK

There is much speculation as to what is holding up the building of the hard-surfaced road to Deer Park. There is a rumor that failure to negotiate rights of way through various properties, among which is the Shaw estate and B. & O. Railway, is the main reason. In any event, it is hoped that any difficulty now existing will be ironed out so work may be begun this fall, if, for no other reason, that it will aid to some extent the unemployment situation in this immediate neighborhood. The very fact that no one but Marylanders and no material except that produced in the Old Line State can be employed and used on this, as on other projects, shows foresight and good sense by the authorities in charge, and will add materially to the earning power of the citizens of the state.

It would seem a good time to again call attention to the first fire hazzard of the Park. It is not yet too late for the city fathers to put in a few fire plugs. They, of course, know best what the finances of the town will permit, but in view of the heavy foliage on the trees the danger of fires from fallen and unremoved leaves will be increased this fall.

Mr. and Mrs. H. V. Leighton have returned from Moundsville, W. Va. While there Mr. Leighton attended the M. E. Conference, to which he was lay-delegate from the local church. We understand that Rev. In his former pastorate here, Rev. Middaugh earned the love and respect of not only the communicants, but of the community at large.

THE MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY'S CORNER

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

We have come to a place in our story of THE BOOK which is as sacred as the spot where Moses looked upon the bush that burned and was not cosumed. Let us approach our task with the spirit of humility by which he was prompted to put off his shoes, and yet with the same holy boldness that made him turn aside to see.

There is a sense in which all truth is divine. The Grand Architect of the Universe speaks to his children in the sublime Geometry of the heavens, in the marvels of embryology and in the sacred pages of Holy Writ.

The scientist invents nothing. His task is one of discovery. He observes the forces of nature, discovering their uniform activity in a given environment, and when observation and experiment convince him of the justice of his conclusions, he gives to the world a theory. Men accept this as a postulate or law of scientific discovery. Nothing has been added to the truth which was in the world since before time began, but man has discovered how God works in nature to produce certain results.

By the same token the Bible comes to us, not as a book of magic, different from all other books in its origin and in the manner of its coming within the sphere of human knowelge, but akin to all of the true sciences and philosophies of the world in that the lessons are true not because they are in the Bible, but are in the Bible because they are true.

Bible precepts have been tested in the hard school of human experiences just as really as chemical reactions have been tested again and again in the chemical laboratory. Just who among men first discovered the validity of the Ten Commandments is not significant. That they are universal in application and true for every race and clime is, after all, the only thing that really matters. The same may be said of Christ's law of love, and the well known but seldom practical Golden Rule. There are some who loudly affirm that Confucius taught the Golden Rule. So he did, but negatively. The great Chinese said to his disciples "Whatsoever ye would not that men should do to you, do ye not to them." A vastly different rule from the positive and constructive command of Jesus.

It is our purpose in the present series to examine the genuineness, credibility, integrity, language, contents and most important ancient versions of the Canonical books of the Bible, not attempting to prove that the great themes therin recorded never found an echo in any other human breasts than those of the accredited authors, but rather to show that truth is always with us awaiting discovery and promulgation, and that in the order of Providence the men who from time to time spoke as the Spirit of God gave them utterance, were men of destiny, called to fulfill a singular mission which will not be perfected until the light which never shone on sea or land shines undimmed by any earth-born clouds, in every human heart.

Such an inquiry as ours travels over a long period of human history. We are to consider books extending through more than 1500 years, the earliest of which appeared at the dawn of history, and the last were composed when the Roman Empire and Pagan Civilization were at their zenith of power.

MAN IS HELD FOLLOWING WEDDING HERE SATURDAY

Is In Morgantown Jail Pending Investigation—May Be Held on Charge of Bigamy

GIRL HAS DISAPPEARED

A serious charge involving William King Richards, 24, of Akron, Ohio, who told officers at Morgantown, W. Va., Sunday night that he was "George B. Smith," may be brought when a full knowledge of Richard's alleged escapade with Helen Louise Long, 19, a student of Morgantown, is in the possession of the proper authorities.

Richards is charged with failing to pay a board bill in Morgantown, although the offense will be secondary, officers said, when all is known about Richards' trip to Oakland Saturday when he and the girl were married.

Richards and the girl came to Oakland late Friday night for the purpose of getting married, but were unable to secure the license until Saturday morning when the ceremony was performed by a local minister. Richards stated on the marriage record that he was 24 years of age and a student. The girl gave her age as 19, and stated she was also a student.

Investigate Action

Following the marriage the couple were taken to Morgantown by Robert T. Hoffman and others who were enroute to a football game there.

Richards was taken into custody after Prosecuting Attorney Shuman had been asked to investigate his "strange" actions in a Grand street home where he was known. Attempts to question him at the city jail met with little success, the man continually rubbing his head and eyes and asking for "15 more minutes" to give his answers. The Smith name was believed to be fictitious but authorities at Morgantown did not learn until Monday evening that the prisoner was William Richards, a resident of Akron, and already married when he came to Oakland with the Long girl.

She had not returned home Sunday night, causing her mother great alarm. Richards did not seem to know where the girl had gone after the marriage had been performed, but it was learned Monday that she was in Philadelphia. She had left a note in her home Friday saying she was going there.

If the facts of Richard's previous marriage are confirmed, he faces a bigamy charge in Garrett county. The girl's mother was quoted as saying she would seek immediate annulment of the Saturday marriage.

Richards is still being held at Morgantown on a technical "investigation" charge. His mind is gradually clearing, it was said.

State's Attorney W. W. Dawson, of Oakland, has not been notified of any of the particulars, but if a bigamy charge is brought, it will have to be brought in this county, as the alleged crime was committed here, it was stated.

CIVIC CLUB TO SPONSOR PLANTING OF BABY TREES

Goal Is a Tree for Each Baby Born in County During 1932

In accord with Bicentennial conservation activities throughout the entire country, the Oakland Civic club is sponsoring the planting of bicentennial baby trees, in honor of all 1932 babies in Oakland and Garrett county, and this drive for further beautification of the county will continue until November 24.

A committee composed of Mrs. James P. Treacy, Mrs. E. H. Sincell, Mrs. W. W. Grant, Mrs. B. H. Sincell, Mrs. Paul B. Naylor, Mrs. F. E. Rathbun, has been appointed to take charge.

The planting of evergreens is being stressed as these will later become outdoor lighted living Christmas trees. A certificate will be presented by the Bicentennial committee, through the Civic club, if the name and date of planting is turned in.

Thus far this year more than 70 babies have been born in Oakland and vicinity, and more than 200 throughout the entire county, and it is being urged that the parents of these children plant Bicentennial Baby trees on their properties, in honor of those who will learn to appreciate the gifts later.

J. Frank Browning, Oakland, was appointed as the third member of the Board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett County to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late Wade H. Hinebaugh. The Board of Supervisors is now composed of E. G. Naylor, of Oakland, Republican member, and Fred. P. Miller, of Accident, and Mr. Browning, Democratic members.

"SAVE-A-LIFE" CAMPAIGN TO BEGIN ON OCTOBER 15

Fifth Annual Free Car Inspection Period in State Will Continue Until November 30

INSPECTION COMPULSORY

Virginia and the District of Columbia will join Maryland this year in what is to be a tri-State Save-a-Life Campaign, which will run from October 15 to November 30, E. Austin Baughman, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, announced today.

Preparations for this campaign are now getting under way in all three sections.

"Approximately 875,000 cars will be inspected for mechanical defects," the Commissioner explained. "In Maryland it is planned to provide more than a thousand official stations for the convenience of the motorists.

"Although this inspection is required by law, I want to appeal to all motorists to cooperate fully in this activity, which is being conducted for their own benefit."

The mechanical condition of the automobile is said to be a most important factor in the reduction of accidents.

The National Conference on Street and Highway Safety states that about 15 per cent of the accidents are caused by mechanical defects. Previous inspection records indicate that a third of the brakes were in unsafe condition and a half of the headlights were faulty.

Salient points of the inspection will be brakes, lights, horns, steering mechanisms, mirrors and license tags. During the first year of the inspection 1,003 cars were inspected in Oakland and vicinity, but since that time the number has increased steadily.

The inspection will be conducted under the provisions of Chapter 259 of the Acts of the General Assembly of 1929, which authorizes the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles to require the inspection of the safety factors of all automobiles.

Every motor vehicle owner or operator will have to show evidence that his car has been inspected before he can obtain his license tags for the year 1933.

Two Young Men Held For Delinquency of Runaway Girls

Lester Baker, Oakland, and Garvey Harvey, Kitzmiller, were released from the county jail yesterday after having been held for several days in connection with the running away of two local girls of high school age. They will be called upon to appear before the March Term of the Garrett County grand jury where charges of pandering, kidnapping, or abduction may be brought.

The two young men and two girls were picked up by Deputies Samuel Cole and Clarence Spear last week near Wytheville, Va., and brought back to Oakland.

PRESIDENT HOOVER CITES DOZEN WAYS HE HAS AIDED AGRICULTURE AND ALSO OTHER NATIONAL INTERESTS

Immense Throng Gathers at Des Moines, Iowa, To Hear Opening Address of Campaign by President; Declares Program of Democratic Leaders in Congress Would Have Meant "The End of Recovery"

HIGHLIGHTS OF INITIAL SPEECH ARE GIVEN

Declaring the program initiated under Democratic leadership during the last session of Congress would have been "the end of recovery" President Hoover Tuesday night sponsored, before an applauding farm audience at Des Moines, Ia., a series of 12 "policies of the Republican party," in aid of agriculture.

A throng that completely filled the 10,000-seat Des Moines caliseum and overflowed into the Shrine temple and across the Capitol plaza cheered the chief executive repeatedly as he opened his first campaign speech since accepting the renomination.

It listened as he expounded such "policies" for farm aid as shifting war debts payments to expanding agricultural markets abroad, revision of the agricultural marketing act, including repeal of the stabilization clause, and enactment of even higher tariffs on farm commodities where necessary.

Accounting his stewardship, the President asserted near the outset of his speech that through "battles on a thousand fronts" against depression economic forces, "a great national victory has been achieved."

Highlights of Mr. Hoover's First Campaign Address

" x x x Many of these battles have had to be fought in silence x x x because the very disclosure of the forces opposed to us would have undermined the courage of the weak and induced panic in the timid, which would have destroyed the very basis of success. Hideous misrepresentation and unjustified complaint had to be accepted in silence."

" x x x There has been but one test in my mind x x x the interests of the people in the homes and at the firesides of our country."

" x x x We were fighting to hold the Gibraltar of world stability."

When 18 months ago the financial systems of Europe were non longer able to stand the strain x x x an earthquake ran through 40 nations x x x first one then another either abandoned payment in gold or their obligations to other countries. x x x These events brought x x x a seething of despair which threatened civilization."

"In order to prevent the total collapse of the German people and its inevitable effect upon us, I brought about the German moratorium and so-called German standstill agreement by which Europe was given a breathing spell to arrange and stabilize its affairs."

" x x x Our own people, infected with world fear and panic withdrew and hoarded $1,500,000,000. This brought its own train of failures and bankruptcies."

" x x x At one point, the Secretary of the Treasury informed me that unless we could put into effect a remedy, we could not hold to the gold standard but two weeks longer x x x. Never was our nation in greater peril."

"x x x The Republican administration rejected every counsel of weakness and cowardice x x x the battalions and regiments and armies thus mobilized for this great battle turned the tide toward victory, the bills of credit are

MASKED DANCES WILL BE FEATURE OF CELEBRATION

Square and Round Dancing To Be Enjoyed After Parade

A masked round dance and a masked square dance, with a number of prizes for the best costumes, will be two of the features of the mammoth Hallowe'en celebration to be held here on Monday, October 31, under the auspices of the Oakland Volunteer Fire Department. The square dance will be held in the Miller building, adjoining the Garrett National Bank, on Second street, and the round dance will be held in Offutt's Hall, as in former years.

The evening's festivities will begin with a mummer's parade at seven o'clock. There will be bands, drum corps, other organizations and individuals taking part, with a large number of prizes to be awarded for various costumes worn in the procession by the marchers.

Oakland will be gaily decorated with numerous colored lights, corn shocks and other things emblematic of the fall season and of Hallowe'en, the committee has stated. Second street, from Alder street to Liberty street will be roped off, and the major portion of the merriment will take place within this area.

Wm. R. Browning and other members of the committee have been holding a number of meetings and plans are progressing favorably looking toward an enjoyable evening, it was said by the committee.

Not James Collins of Oakland

The James Collins mentioned two weeks ago in the Court proceedings, was not James Collins, of Oakland.

The man found guilty of the manufacture of liquor was arrested as Raymond Phillips, of near Uniontown, Pa., but he later told authorities his real name was James Collins. He was found guilty along with John Gusick and Everett F. Hershman, and was fined $100 and costs.

POTATO EXPERIMENT PLOT CONSIDERED SUCCESSFUL

Crop Is Harvested Last Week by U. S. Department Heads

Considering the results obtained in breeding different varieties of potatoes as highly successful, state and national potato experts spent last Thursday and Friday near Oakland in harvesting the experimentation plot set out earlier in the season.

That these experts would continue the work in Garrett county next year was announced by John H. Carter, county agent, and it was felt by officials that the work might become permanent. The closest field for experiment work in potatoes, other than this year's plot on the farm of H. L. Porter, is in Maine, it was stated, and much money could be saved by the U. S. Department of agriculture if a permanent field were located here.

William Stewart, head of potato breeding, U. S. Department of Agriculture, F. J. Stephenson, also of the U. S. Department; and Dr. J. H. Beaumont, head of the Maryland horticulture department, were all present last week to harvest the crop and complete their records. From the 164 varieties planted several were discarded as being of undesirable type. Others will be tested and replanted next year.

It is the object of the department to mix certain varieties of potatoes in order to obtain a disease-resisting potato that is marketable and has other favorable qualities.

Barn at Green Glade Burns

The barn on the farm of C. H. Glotfelty, Green Glade, was entirely destroyed by fire on Tuesday, September 27. The blaze was caused by spontaneous combustion, it is supposed.

In the building when it burned were stored 225 bushels of oats, several tons of alfalfa hay and several head of live stock, all of which was burned. Some insurance was carried.

WILL HOLD ORTHOPEDIC CLINIC HERE SATURDAY

Anyone With Physical Deformities Is Asked to be Present

An orthopedic clinic will be held at the office of the health officer, Court House, Oakland, on Saturday morning, October 8, beginning at 9 a. m., Dr. George E. Clarke has announced.

Dr. George Bennett, of Baltimore, will be present to examine all patients. Anyone with any physical deformities is requested to appear at this clinic.

"We have on our records approximately 150 within the county who are handicapped physically," Dr. Clarke stated, "and these have all been notified by letter of the time of the meeing, and requesting them to be present. We may have overlooked some, and those who did not receive a letter and who have some defect, are urged to appear also for an examination." The clinic applies to both old and new patients.

POTATO SHOW TO BE HELD HERE OCTOBER 28 AND 29

Prizes Totaling Approximately $150 to be Awarded in Certified and Open Classes

IS THIRD ANNUAL EVENT

When the third annual county-wide potato show is held in Oakland on Friday and Saturday, October 28 and 29, prizes totaling approximately $150 will be offered to exhibitors in all classes, according to John H. Carter, county agent.

There will be three classes, the certified seed class, 4-H club class and the open class, in addition to awards in the first year group and advanced group of the Garrett County Commercial Potato club.

Prizes are being offered by Maryland Extension service, the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, and the State Horticultural society.

The certified seed class is open to certified seed growers who have not exhibited in any other certified class in Maryland. Any bona fide Garrett county 4-H club member whose potato seed meets the requirements of the Maryland Seed Certification Board, is eligible to compete in the 4-H class. Prizes totaling $52 will be offered in these two classes.

Ten prizes, totaling $23, will be offered in the open class, a class for anybody in the county who wants to enter an exhibit.

The Baltimore and Ohio will give ten prizes totaling $55 among the growers of the first year group of the Garrett County Commercial Potato club, while $6 will be offered to growers of the advanced group.

The potato show will be held in the vacant building, corner of Second and Liberty streets, owned by Harry L. Miller, and formerly occupied by Coffman Fisher company.

The purpose of the show is to sponsor and encourage potato production on a more economical basis, thereby netting the producer a higher price for his product, Mr. Carter stated.

Unexpected Snowfall Covers Ground and Foliage

An unexpected snowfall covered the trees and ground this morning to a depth of several inches, causing considerable damage to foliage and making older residents delve deep into their memories to find another day like it for so early in the season.

The snow was so heavy that in many instances entire trees were snapped off. A limb, approximately 18 inches in diameter, was broken off one of the large oak trees in the Oakland Grammar school lot, while snow weighed many other limbs to the ground.

Slight damage to telephone equipment was reported.

SPECIAL RATES PROVIDED TO PITTSBURGH FOR FAIR

Blue Ridge Lines Reduce Round Trip Fare During Three Days of Tableland Activities

COUNTY GETTING READY

The County Fair to be held at Gimbel's in Pittsburgh on October 13th, 14 and 15th under the auspices of the Allegheny Tableland Association is attracting the attention of a large number of people in this county, as it is being held to promote the production and marketing of Tableland products in the Pittsburgh area.

To provide adequate transportation for this affair, Blue Ridge Lines have announced special three-day bus excursion rates. These tickets will be sold at the one-way rate plus 50 cents for round trip from any point on the Mountain Lake Division between Mt. Lake Park and Morgantown through to Pittsburgh. Children under 12 will be charged one-half excursion rates.

These tickets can be purchased only at agency points in Oakland, Terra Alta and Kingwood. Passengers west of Kingwood should purchase tickets upon arrival at Morgantown.

Because it is impossible for passengers to make the round trip to Pittsburgh in one day, Blue Ridge Lines have offered, providing 20 or more passengers are guaranteed from any one or more towns in the district, to run the 7:00 A. M. bus from Oakland into Pittsburgh and hold it there for a return trip at the convenience of the group.

The excursion tickets are sold, good for three days, including day of sale. The regular bus schedule to Pittsburgh on the Mountain Lake Division is as follows:

Leave Oakland at 7:30 a. m. and 2:10 p. m., and arriving at Pittsburgh 12:40 p. m. and 9:35 p. m. Returning, leave Pittsburgh at 7:20 a. m., and arriving in Oakland at 1:15 p. m. and 5:35 p. m.

Many requests for entry blanks and information concerning the coming fair have been received at the office of the County Agent John Carter, and if this is any indication of the number of exhibits to be placed at Gimbel's store, Garrett county will have her full share.

In addition a booth is to be arranged by the Garrett County Commercial Club of Oakland, which will include a miniature layout of Deep Creek Lake, route 37, and points of interest along the way. The miniature, which is about 20 inches square, was made by Bernard Gonder, Jr., and is made of plaster of Paris and other materials.

Maps, information about route 37, the Scenic Highway of the Tableland, and other features will be in the booth.

PAIR OF BLAZES OCCUR ALMOST SIMULTANEOUSLY

Sunday Morning Fires Evidently of Incendiary Origin

Two fires, evidently of incendiary origin, early last Sunday morning, were promptly extinguished by the Oakland Volunteer Fire Department, but not before the first blaze had done considerable damage to the kitchen of the home occupied by Miss Fannie Johnson, located on the western edge of town and near the Little Youghiogheny River.

The first call came about 2:30 o'clock when Joseph Stanton saw the flames from a window of his home on Second street and notified Patrolman B. B. Nethkin, who turned in the alarm. Miss Johnson was partially overcome by the smoke and had considerable difficulty in reaching the lower floor of her home where Vic Tasker and Bernard Nally rushed in and carried her out of the building.

The flames were confined to the kitchen which was entirely wrecked.

About forty minutes after the first alarm sounded fire was discovered beneath the porch of the Giessman Hotel building corner of Water and Third streets, which was promptly extinguished by the firemen.

In both cases an investigation made by firemen and officers showed that oil-soaked rags had been wound about sticks and placed in position where they were ignited. Arrests may follow, as a man was seen by two persons running from the direction of Miss Johnson's home just before the arrival of the fire department on the scene.

Lesson for October 9

THE CHRISTIAN IN THE FAMILY

Luke 2:4-52; 10:38-42.

GOLDEN TEXT—I will behave myself wisely in a perfect way. O when wilt thou come unto me? I will walk within my house with a perfect heart. Psalm 101:2.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Happy Family.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Home Life of Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Being a Christian at Home.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Making the Home Christian.

Confessedly our subject is a strange one to fit to the texts selected by the Lesson Committee. Jesus is the central person in both texts. It is manifestly improper to think and speak of him as being Christian. He is the eternal Son of God made flesh (John 1:14). A Christian is one regenerated by the Holy Spirit and joined to Jesus Christ by faith on the ground of his redemptive work. Two views of him are presented in these texts:

I. Jesus in the Home of His Mother and Joseph (Luke 2:4-52).

1. Jesus growing (v. 40). While Jesus Christ was divine, yet his deity did not interfere with his development as a human being. The processes of his physical and mental growth were the same as those of any normal human being.

a. He grew and waxed strong. It was necessary for his body to develop. His brain, nerves, and muscles must not only attain unto their proper sizes, but must become correlated.

b. "Filled with wisdom." His mother doubtless was his teacher in those early years. It is reasonable to assume that she taught him to commit Bible verses to memory, and told him the great narratives of patriots and prophets of the Old Testament.

c. "The grace of God was upon him." God's love, favor and tender care were upon him.

2. Jesus found in the Temple (vv. 41-47). At the age of twelve the Jewish child took his place as a worshiper in the temple. He was then considered a "child of the law." Being conscious of his mission, Jesus tarried behind in the temple when his mother and Joseph left Jerusalem after the Passover. When they made search for him, he was found in the temple. Observe, a. He was found sitting (v. 46). He was no passing visitor or sightseer, but at home in his father's house.

b. He was hearing the teachers of God's Word (v. 46). He was eager to learn God's will.

c. He asked questions (v. 46). His growing mind inquired after truth.

d. He answered questions (v. 47). His answers astonished those who heard him.

3. Mary's complaint (vv. 48-50). She remonstrated with him for his behavior. To this he replied in a dignified, yet tender manner. He made no apology, showing that he was more than the son of Mary. God was his father.

4. Jesus' obedience (v. 51). Though he was fully conscious of his divine being and mission, he lived a life of filial obedience, teaching us that obedience to parents is pleasing to God, and a duty which will be discharged faithfully by those who have the spirit of Christ.

II. Jesus in Martha's Home (Luke 10:38-42).

1. Jesus welcomed into Martha's home (v. 38). Though Jesus had no home of his own, into Martha's home he could come at any time. This home was his special retreat in the last days of his ministry on earth.

2. Mary sitting at Jesus' feet (v. 39). Mary had a peculiar spiritual insight which prompted her to sit at Jesus' feet and listen to his words.

3. Martha's complaint (v. 40). She desired doubtless to prepare the very best possible meal for Jesus. He prefers the love which concerns itself with himself and his message to any personal ministry. Because of her failure to see this, she was "cumbered with much serving." She not only found fault with Mary, but found fault with Jesus for allowing Mary to sit at his feet while the dinner was unfinished.

4. Jesus' reply (vv. 41-42).

a. He rebukes Martha, telling her that she is careful and troubled about many things. Those who are primarily concerned with the Master are anxious for nothing (Phil. 4:6).

The one thing that is needful for everybody is to sit at the feet of Jesus.

b. He commended Mary, saying "Mary hath chosen that good part which shall not be taken away from her."

Never Say Can't

Never tell a young person that anything cannot be done. God may have been waiting for centuries for somebody ignorant enough of the impossible to do that thing.—John Andrew Holmes.

The Golden Rule

"No philosophy has ever improved upon the Golden Rule, and the most gorgeous tapestry of trickery looks like a rag alongside the simple beauties of a square deal."

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

One of the faithful readers of this column who reads it every week and admits it, said the people of his section were getting tired of the same picture appearing every week at the head of this column.

"You oughta change your face," he remarked, and before I knew he was talking about the above picture, and not me personally, I exclaimed, "If I only could."

Last year about this time a number of apples began to grace the desk before me, all on account of an urgent request sent out for a revival of that once famous custom of sending the editor almost as much stuff as a preacher, just a little good will, if you please, although later the same editor would be asked to print an "In Memoriam," free of charge.

This year you can make it cider, apple butter, potatoes, or really most anything. The time is most opportune, ripe, mature, seasonable, convention, timely, propitious, and appropriate, if you ask me, which you probably won't, as it won't be long until house-keeping time.

And now, they say, it's a sign of no more signs somewhere along Oak street.

With the band leading us, we will all (or most all) joyfully sing together "The tune that the old cow suit died on." * * *

And here's hoping that a fate similar to the following happening will take place in the Roosevelt household, if for no other reason than placing the blame for everything on Hoover and the Republican party.

Here's what happened once to a candidate out in Arkansas:

"Lost four months and twenty days canvassing; lost 1,360 hours of sleep thinking about election; lost forty acres of corn and sweet potatoes; lost two front teeth and a lot of hair in personal combat with an opponent; donated one beef, four sheep and five pigs to barbecue; gave away five calico dresses, five dolls and thirteen baby rattlers; kissed 126 babies; kindled 26 kitchen fires, put up eight stoves; cut 174 cords of firewood; carried twenty-four buckets of water; gathered seven wagon loads of corn; pulled 475 bundles of fodder; walked 4,049 miles; shook hands 9,080 times; told 10,001 lies and talked enough to make 1,000 volumes; attended twenty-six revival meetings and was baptized four times by immersion and twice by sprinkling; contributed $50 to foreign missions; got dog bit nineteen times, and then lost the darned election."

Well, the fly season is about over, and it's a good thing. The old wire smasher on the desk here will be sent to the home for the weak, worn out and aged.

Of course the traffic light may not be bashful, but every time I approach it it seems to turn red.

I don't know why I should have to wait until a rainy day to try to get up this column. There's nothing inspiring in the rush of water down one's neck, the slopping of wet feet, the cold raincoat, and baggy trouser legs. If we had a shortage of drinking water, or if the crops needed the rain, we might wax sentimental but today, to me, it is just so much water over the dam. But the Boss editor has threatened to hold up my salary if this is not forthcoming, so what is a poor struggling columnist to do, especially when old furniture needs a rub-down, and we need more furniture?

The Boss has ordered the names of Gibby Matheney and Betty Broadwater, students at Hood, mentioned this week. Of course, being away at school, they ought to feel homesick enough to feel grateful for this bit of publicity.

For once in my life I have no alibis for West Virginia's defeat by Pitt last Saturday. But am I mortified about my alma mater?

This absolute silence in thought this week is not due to any censorship, either at home or abroad. I've always put in what I wanted. Can it be possible my wants are decreasing?

THE MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY'S CORNER

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

Language is the greatest gift of God to man. Without it civilzation would not have been possible, nor could mankind have received instruction in arts and sciences.

However, language is only a symbol of reality. As long as there is common understanding of what is meant by symbol man may communicate with each other as well in one tongue as in another. Much energy has has been expended and the controversial fires have burned with fervent heat over the question of verbal inspiration. The whole matter becomes clear when we reflect that unless we were acquainted with thought forms, vocabulary, manners and customs of the Hebrews the most perfect revelation in that language could accomplish little in revealing the will of God to our minds.

Even before we reach the questions of inspiration and revelation of divine truth, we must postulate a first cause. If our speculative system excludes from the Universe an even-living, free, supreme intelligence, the Creator and Preserver of all that is, and acknowledges nothing but unintellgent physical forces, upon whose play all things depend, we are wholly unfit to deal fairly with the Second Canon. No real Theist can consistenly deny the possibility of revelation, with its accompanying proofs, prophecies, and what we commonly call miracles, because we do not understand the laws governing them—and hence he is ever ready to listen to the evidence of the genuineness of documents that establish them. Nor will he be offended at a written revelation when he reflects that it is by means of books in the order of Providence, that mankind is instructed in all useful knowledge.

Biblical criticism, like all other branches of knowledge, is progressive. Modern scholarship has made a thorough study of Hebrew and cognate languages, of Attic Hellenistic Greek, and of the general principles of Philology. Profound investigations in the field of Ancient History, the discovery of lost works and of ancient manuscripts of the Bible; the excavations of ancient ruins and the deciphering of ancient monuments, and a more thorough knowledge of the geography, natural history and customs of Palestine derived from numerous modern Oriental travelers, have all thrown great light upon the Holy Scriptures and in many instances have remarkably confirmed them.

We should be prepared to encounter certain difficulties as we approach any study of origins: to this rule the Holy Scriptures furnish no exception. They should neither surprise nor offend us. They arise party from the nature of the subjects treated, partly from the foreign languages in which the Bible is written, and partly from the imperfectly known habits of the people to whom the various parts of Revelation were originally communicated. Indeed much of the attraction the Bible has for us is contained in the deep study and understanding it demands. The practical parts of it are always perfectly clear, while those of a more abstruse character exercise our thought, our patience and our faith. This holds true equally in the physical world. God has made plain to us what is necessary, and at the same time hidden from us, and given to mankind a large field in which to develop, through intense study, our intellectual powers, by solving the mysteries of nature and discovering her laws.

Two factors are ever present in the Bible, as indeed everywhere in the world—the Divine and the Human. It is not always an easy matter to fix the limits of each. These can no more be separated in life than our physical bodies and our intellectual natures.

Next week we shall listen to what the Church Fathers have to say about the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures.

MT. LAKE PARK

A Boys' Club in Formation

A meeting place where the youth of the community may congregate for purposes of entertainment, social intercourse and improvement, is considered by psychologists as an important cog in the wheel of cultural development at all times and in all communities. It is vastly more important in depression periods and in times of unemployment, especially in communities where places of entertainment are few. With this thought in mind, Mrs. A. A. Richards called a few of the men of the Park together at her home last Friday evening, with the result that the Boys' Club of Mountain Lake Park is now in process of organization.

Plans were discussed and a committee was appointed to secure club rooms and work out the details of the organization. We understand it is planned to have the club officered and managed entirely by the youths themselves and that it will be strictly their club.

There is already the promise of sufficient books to form the basis of a good library. We trust the plans will soon mature.

Deer Park—Mt. Lake Road

Equipment is being brought in for use in the construction of the first unit of the Mountain Lake Park-Deer Park hardsurfaced road, extending from the postoffice building in the Park toward Deer Park. We have been advised that work will begin today on the project. It is also reported that between fifty and sixty men will be employed and that preference in employment will be given married men and those with dependents. The 1.23 miles to be built this year will be completed in approximately six weeks, depending, of course, on the state of the weather.

When completed this road will be a distinct advantage, not only to the Park and Oakland, but to the Kitzmiller and Blaine community and those living beyond having business here or at the countyseat. In fact, with this and the Loch Lynn-Gormania roads completed, the Park will be on the main lanes of travel and there will be no valid reason why this section and other communities hereabouts should not come into their own and become outstanding mountain playgrounds. Nature has done her part and the State is doing its part. It is up to us to do ours.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1932.

He only is rich who understands and helps.—Robert Collyer.

THE BOY WITH THE GOLD SPOON

Of course it is expected that a lot of silly chatter and foolish indictments must creep into every national polltical campaign. The silliest thing that the Democrats have pulled in this campaign is the effort to brand Herbert Hoover as disqualified for the job because he is a rich man. If Herbert Hoover is not good presidential timber because of his personal wealth, then Franklin Roosevelt is a positive menace. He IS rich.

Hoover was born in pinching poverty in the little town of West Branch, Iowa, where every home is humble. No less than Lincoln, Hoover came from the common people, a people Franklin Roosevelt never knew. His mother never knew what it was to lend a cup of sugar to a needy neighbor. Hoover's mother did.

Franklin Roosevelt was born with a gold spoon in his mouth and he never had the gold spoon out of his mouth. Unlike his distinguished kinsman, Theodore Roosevelt, who was likewise born affluent and of the once catalouged "four hundred," Franklin Roosevelt never went west to know the plainsmen. To him the man with a hoe is a picture in the art museum.

To Franklin Roosevelt the village blacksmith is a nursery poem. But Hoover knew him. He was a breadbox filler. Hoover knows the music of the anvil, the wheeze of the bellows. He can now measure the white iron's yield to the hammer's fall. And Franklin Roosevelt knows nothing of these things.

Franklin Roosevelt was a very nice rich man's boy. Sure he was, and that was all right. He was very well dressed in his pinafores and Lord Fauntleroy velvet suits with broad starched collars, neatly ironed huffled edges. But even a rich boy may become President if he learns how to play fair and demand a square deal.

It is all fine and proper and praiseworthy for a Harvard trained youth of great wealth to seek to serve the people. But such a youth becomes a cheap little Lord Fauntleroy when, without his rebuke, his supporters condemn his opponent for having what the rich boy himself has in excess.

As a child Herbert Hoover entertained himself with sticks and tacks, strings, wires and nails and the assortment of things the village smithy leaves scattered in the shade of the spreading chestnut tree. Franklin Roosevelt played with imported toys under the tutelage and protection of a governess, or nurse, whichever is the nicer term. Poor grace to point the finger of scorn at Hoover and call him "rich."

Herbert Hoover went to the country school. They say he was a rather shy, diffident child, for even there he sensed that most of his playmates, all from humble homes, were protected by fathers who were affluent compared to the kindly uncle who guarded the orphan.

Franklin Roosevelt went where rich boys go, to Groton, the most exclusive preparatory school in America. Then he went to another rich man's school, Harvard. With his small savings Hoover got in Stanford. By laundry work and otherwise he got every nickel that took him through. He graduated with the ploneer class.

Herbert Hoover came from the plain people and he has always loved them as Lincoln did. Hoover's acceptance speech last August 12 will go down into history as one of the greatest spiritual pronouncements of any American President. It was full of human tenderness. It was not a "rich man's" utterance. It was character.

Herbert Hoover has assumed great responsibilities. He has been a great humanitarian and as President of the United States he has held fast to his firm faith that the American people are sufficient unto themselves and will triumph over any world catastrophe.

While others, like barking terriers, have been yipping and snapping with criticism but without the shadow of a creative idea, Hoover has stood like the faithful and trusted pilot that he is on the bridge of our ship of State. He has charted our course through the spray and wash of restless waters. And it is Hoover and not his critics who is now bringing us safely back into the placid waters of prosperity's port.

Let us look at these two boys, one born in the pinch of poverty and the other with a gold spoon in his mouth. One got a Bachelor of Arts degree, with his father's help, from Harvard and then an LL.B. from Columbia. The other got a Bachelor of Arts degree without even a father to help him. Then he engaged in the profession of engineering, planning, designing and promoting great wealth-producing enterprises which gave him international fame and netted him to date a personal fortune generously estimated at $750,000, but a fractional part of the fortune Franklin Roosevelt possesses, which he never made—just inherited. From his very rich mother he will inherit a lot more.

Hoover has accepted no decorations since he became President of the United States. But his achievements before brought him degrees from Brown University, the University of Pennsylvania, Harvard, Yale, Columbia, Princeton, Johns Hopkins, George Washington, Dartmouth, Rutgers, University of Alabama, Oberlin, Rensselaer, Tufts, Swarthmore, Williams and little Cornell College so near to the place of his birth in Iowa. Beside these recognitions the following European universities have decorated him with high degrees: Karlsruhe, Liege, Brussels, Warsaw, Cracow, Oxford, Manchester, Prague, Ghent and Lemberg.

All told, with the help of a wealthy father, Franklin Roosevelt has acquired, through honest and credible academic effort, two college degree decorations, while the orphan boy, Herbert Hoover, rose in life to receive degrees from eighteen American universities and ten European universities, twenty-eight academic embellishments against two. That's where Herbert Hoover's wealth is found. The wealth of creative intelligence, of human service, the wealth of intellect, the wealth of human experience and sympathy.

The fact is, Franklin Roosevelt was born in the lap of luxury. No disgrace. But something of a handicap. And the Democrats are simply dishonest who criticize Hoover for everything that he is not and for everything that Franklin Roosevelt is. Franklin Roosevelt did not make himself rich and he never made anybody else rich. Out of adject poverty Herbert Hoover built up his own economic security and he made it possible for many to honestly make money. And that is the kind of presidential stuff we need right now.

Franklin Roosevelt never knew what it was to make and maintain a pay roll. He never knew what it was to respond to the factory whistle or to say cheerily: "Hi, Bill," to a coworker in overalls. He never knew the tenderness and bond sympathy that stand by a comrade in industry in a humble home and hope for a fellow worker's stricken child.

Franklin Roosevelt came from, and he is of that social class that demands dividends by telegraph and delivers responsibility by ox cart.

Now let's measure this ridiculous statement that the Democrats are trying to bolster up with the crutches of falsehood. Let's see how avaricious is this man's mind whom Democrats tell us is interested only in money getting.

When the war was over Hoover had an opportunity to join the Guggenheimers on a contract which would have made him a million dollars a year. Such a contract was never tendered for the talents of Lord Fauntelroy Roosevelt. But Hoover did not accept this luring offer. He chose instead to stay in public service, to serve mankind, to be a humanitarian, to be a public servant without pretensions or dramatics. He is a President who is on the job. He is a worker. He never knew the taste of a gold spoon. And you Democrats can't put the gold spoon in Herbert Hoover's mouth. It won't fit.—Tulsa (Ok.) Tribune.

THE PARABLE OF THE TALENTS

The man who "went and hid his talent in the earth," and thereby became history's most familiar example of unfaithfulness and folly, must have lived in times like our own. His country, we take it, was emerging from one of those depressions which, off and on, have visited every people under the sun since business began. So fearful he was that he fell into worse trouble than that he was trying to avoid, and tragically missed his life's greatest opportunity. Entrusted with a certain amount of cash, he hoarded it instead of using it. He could have bought the best of goods at bargain prices; he could have made investments, more advantageous than any which had been or ever again would be in his day; he could have done his part toward providing jobs for hungry men, toward quickening sluggish streams of trade, toward restoring confidence and prosperity. But he was afraid and "went and hid his talent in the earth," wherefore, as a matter of economic and social justice it was taken from him, and given to those who had the courage, the loyalty and the enterprise to use it.

The old parable is now strikingly new. Its truth rings afresh in the following line from a current advertisement: "Don't say you can't help. Don't say you are too little to help cure a big national crisis. You can help. Have you hidden your money away, buried it in the ground, put it in a sock, locked it up in a safety vault? Then bring it out, if you want to help this depression. You'll help your state and your nation and your fellow man. And you'll help yourself. Every dollar you put back into use helps. It helps make a market for the things you grow. And it helps you. Your money is worth more now, in terms of what it will buy, than it's been in many, many years. There is a feast of bargains spread out before you . . Prices will go up. The value of your money in terms of what it will buy will shrink. It will shrivel, if it remains hoarded. Bring it into the sunlight. Let it sprout and grow you a new crop of dollars. Not in wild speculation, not in wildcat schemes. No need to lose it that way. The best securities, the best lands, the best investments of all kinds are waiting for you on the bargain table. Did you know that the biggest fortunes were not founded in periods of prosperity? They were founded in times of adversity like these by men who had cash and courage."

Those words are worth every man's pondering. They are words of common sense as well as common patriotism. They are approved by all ages of the past, and they will be verified by history now in the making. Who hides his talent today will find himself, at last, shamed and empty-handed; who uses it will be numbered among the fortunate, the faithful and the good.—Atlanta (Georgia) Journal.

GARNER DODGES BONUS

"I haven't made any statement on the bonus question, and I don't intend to make any."

That was the reply of the "bold," "frank," "courageous" John Nance Garner, Democratic nominee for Vice-President when asked for his position on this important issue.

And so the tail of the Democratic ticket joins the head of that ticket in refusing to tell the American people where he stands on a question that is certain to come up in the next Congress and that is of vital interest to American business.

The reason Roosevelt and Garner refuse to commit themselves on this question, of course, is because they fear they would lose votes whatever their answer would be.

Do the people want t oput at the head of their government men who openly and obviously play the demagogus on a question upon which may rest the stability of our financial system?

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

H. W. Kahl, carpenter, while at work on a dwelling which he was erecting for himself, fell from a high scaffold and was seriously injured.

Friday, September 23, Thomas Nethkin picked and brought to Oakland seven bushels of blackberries. Such a thing was never before heard of at this time of the year.

Joseph E. Harned, manager of the Mayers' drug store in Mountain Lake Park, left for Philadelphia to enter the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy for a four years' course.

There were no indictments found by the grand jury for violations of the liquor law.

Mrs. George Crook, widow of Gen. George Crook, and Mrs. Fanny D. Read, her sister, warned people by advertisement in The Republican not to trespass on their property on Crook Crest.

Knabb and Company, saw mill operators, had completed about three miles of railroad on the line from the Club House near Friendsville up the river toward Sang Run. They expected to have the work completed within three months.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

The tobacco and candy store of W. A. Gonder and the general store of Bolden, Brown and Weimer were entered and robbed. A request was made for the Fairmont bloodhounds in an attempt to run the robbers down.

Prospects for athletic teams at the Oakland high school were reported as being good.

Ray Jones entered the law offices of Fred. A. Thayer where he was preparing himself to be admitted to the Garrett County Bar.

A reunion of McNeill's Rangers was held at the home of Henry Ridder located south of Oakland. Survivors of the troop residing in Garrett county at the time were Mr. Ridder, William D. Hoye and James W. Mason.

Charles Friend, 18, Blooming Rose, died as a result of injuries received when he was struck by a train near Snowy Creek curve, between Hutton and Terra Alta. The dead man was employed as a brakesman on the B. & O. Railroad.

expanding x x x men are daily being re-employed. If we calculate the value of this year's agricultural products compared with the low points, the farmers as a whole are, despite the heart-breaking distress which still exists, a billion dollars better off. Prices have a long way to go before the farmer has an adequate return, but at least the turn is toward recovery."

"We won this great battle to protect our people at home. We held the Gibraltar of world stability. The world today has a chance. It is growing in strength. Let that man who complains that things could not be worse thank God for this victory and make reverent acknowledgement of the courage and stamina of a great democracy."

"Three of the great perils (of the depression) were invisible except to those who had the responsibility of dealing with the situation. The first, x x x the steady strangulation of credit, x x x another, federal revenues fell by nearly one-half. The third peril x x x that of being forced off the gold standard."

"I have been accorded the greatest honor which my country can bestow—that is to lead it amongst the nations of the world in the paths of peace and to serve in the stern duty of the battle against the invisible forces of a great world calamity."

"Thousands of our people in their bitter distress and losses are saying that 'things could not be worse.' No person who has any remote understanding x x x ever utters that remark. Had it not been for the immediate and unprecedented actions of our government, things would be infinitely worse today."

"Let no man tell you it could not be worse. It could be so much worse that these days now, distressing as they are, would look like veritable prosperity."

"I was born in the midst of the terrible times of the seventies x x x and only in that period has our nation had to meet a situation in any degree comparable to that with which we now contend."

"I vividly recall a Christmas upon the farm when the sole resources of joy were popcorn balls, sorghum, and hickory nuts x x x No store toys x x x no store clothes."

"x x x An economic storm which embraces the whole world x x x is the result of a terrific eruption in civilization itself."

"x x x We have fought to x x x preserve the safety, the principles, and ideals of American life. We have builded the foundations of recovery."

"x x x The congressional elections two years ago gave control of the lower House to our opponents. They were also in position to control policies of the Senate. After election, the Democrats announced to the world their party would present a program to restore prosperity. One year later, when Congress assembled, they presented no program. The administration did present a program which has saved the country from complete disaster."

"When the $300,000,000 administration economy measure had passed through the filter of the Democratic majority in the House only $50,000,000 of savings were left. I vetoed that bill."

"Recovery began the moment when it was certain that destructive measures of the Democratic controlled House were stopped. Had their program passed it would have been the end of the recovery. If it ever passes it will end the hope of recovery.

"The policies of the Republican party (for restoration of prosperity) and the unprecedented instrumentalities and measures which we have put in motion, many of which are designed directly for agriculture—x x x are winning out."

"The very basis to safety to American agriculture is the protective tariff on agriculture. We will widen the tariff where necessary to protect agriculture."

"Their (the Democrats) platform enunciates the principle of a 'competitive tariff for revenue. The competition that means is peasant labor and cheap lands."

"x x x Compare prices with foreign countries and count up this proposed destruction. There are 2,000,000 cattle in the Northern states of Mexico seeking market. The price is about $2.50 per 100 pounds, on the South bank of the Rio Grande. It is $5.50 on the North bank—and only the tariff wall between."

"Removal of reduction of the tariff on farm products means a flood of them into the United States from every direction and enther you would be forced to still further reduce your prices or your products would rot on your farms."

"Except for the guardianship of the tariff, butter could be imported for 25 per cent below your prices, pork 30 per cent; flaxseed 35 per cent; lamb and beef 30 to 50 per cent; beans 40 per cent; wool 30 per cent."

"The main thing foreign countries want is entrance for their surplus agricultural products into our markets."

"The Democratic party proposes to reduce your farm tariffs. Aside from ruin to agriculture, such an undertaking in the midst of this depression will disturb every possibility of recovery."

Cheat Bridge On Route 50 Is Closed To Heavy Loads

Cheat Bridge, the historic covered structure which spans Cheat River five miles south of Rowlesburg on Route 50, has been closed to loads exceeding three tons and but one car or truck at a time is allowed to cross the bridge.

During the past week the movement of the heavy bridge steel which is being conveyed over the old bridge for the construction of a new and modern steel and cement structure to take the place of the old landmark, so weakened the old span that the State Roads Commission of West Virginia deemed it necessary to act.

Heavy loads are being detoured over Routes 37, 7, and 26, via Red House, Oakland, Terra Alta, Kingwood, Tunnelton, and Fellowsville.

PORK RECIPES

Success in preparing pork cuts depends on regulating the heat so as to cook the meat well done to the center of the piece and at the same time to keep the ouside from becoming hard and dry. Moderate cooking temperature is best after the surface has been seared to develop rich flavor. It is neither necessary nor desirable to add water to pork during cooking. Hams, shoulders and loins have sufficient fat on the outside to baste the lean meat and so do not dry out when roasted fat side up at moderate temperature in open pans without ndded water. To prevent chops from becoming hard and dry it is necssary to cover them closely after browning and finish the cooking in moderate heat. Broiling and pan-broiling are not successful methods of cooking pork chops.

Breaded Pork Fillets

Cut two pork tenderloin strips crosswise to make six fillets 1½ to 2 inches thick. Pound each fillet down to about one-half inch in thickness. Beat one egg with a tablespoon of water. Mix three-fourths cup of dry sifted bread crumbs with three-fourths teaspoon of salt and a dash of pepper. Dip the fillets into the egg mixture, coat them with the bread crumbs and let the coating dry about thirty minutes. Brown the fillets lightly in 2 tablespoons of fat in a heavy skillet, pour off excess fat, cover the skillet closely and continue to cook at moderate heat for 20 minutes, or until the meat is tender. Serve hot with a garnish of watercress and thin slices of lemon.

Panned Pork Chops

Wipe pork chops with a damp cloth. Sprinkle them with salt and pepper and dust them lightly with flour. Place the chops in a heavy hot skillet with the fat edge down, so as to brown the fat and at the same time grease the skillet. Turn the chops and brown them lightly on both sides. Pour off the fat that has cooked out, cover the skillet closely and continue to cook at very moderate heat until the meat is tender. Turn the chops occasionally to cook them uniformly. Chops of ordinary thickness (about one-half inch thick) will require about 20 minutes to cook after they have been lightly browned.

Pork chops shrink considerably while cooking, and it is better to have them cut fairly thick. Three-quarters to one inch is not too much. Chops of this thickness will require longer cooking than thin chops, but they will be more juicy when done.

Southern Pot Roast

One small pork shoulder, 1 medium onion, sliced; two cups canned tomatoes, salt and pepper, 2 tablespoons flour. Fry out the trimmings in pan suitable for the roast. Remove cracklings and all fat, leaving but one tablespoon; add flour; brown slowly; add onion; brown slightly, then add tomatoes; season the meat and add. Cook in fireless cooker four hours.

Ham en Casserole

Wash and pare potatoes; cut into slices; place in casserole in layers, dredge each layer well with floor and seasoning with pepper. Add just enough milk to cover. Place ham slice (cut about 2 inches thick and with rind removed) on top, and place in moderate oven. Cook 1 hour uncovered and one hoor more covered. Serve in casserole.

American Hotels First to Use Bills of Fare

No bill of fare was necessary when Jacob made the mess of pottage for Esau—it was a one-course meal lacking even the simplest refinements. Neither did the early Romans follow a menu card in their choice of food, although the word "menu" itself is derived from the Latin "minutus," meaning "minute detail." (From this the deduction follows that "menu" is used to denote the particulars of the different courses of a meal.)

Indeed the term was used nmong the Romans, but the practice of entertaining both guest and traveler in the "domus" precluded the need for a written card.

Even the prevalence of inns nnd taverns in Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth century England and the American taverns of the Eighteenth and early Nineteenth centuries failed to produce the menu card. For still there was little need for it with all the travelers seated at one great table and the innkeepers' wife serving "victuals" of her own choice.

The frivolous elegant styles of the second empire in France nnd the opening of the first American hotels about the middle of the Nineteenth century brought the bill of fare. The United States hotel of Philadelphia, Foley's National hotel of Norfolk, Va., and the New York hotel of New York were the last word in fashion about 1850 with menus of long, narrow slips of poor paper, never cardboard, and the names of the dishes written in under printed headings.

Little Mention of the Dog in Jewish History

Although game was plentiful and the Jews of Biblicnl times were skillful hunters, they do not appear to have used dogs in the chase at nll. Esau, Ishmael and David we might have thought would have trnined dogs to hunt the deer or fiercer nnimals, but apparently did not. This is strange considering that both the Egyptian nnd Assyrian monuments depict the use of hunting dogs, of the hound, greyhound and mastiff type.

Perhaps the appearance of dogs in heathen mythology and sculpture, nnd also in ancient henthen literature (as readers of Homer, perhaps written about the time of Abrnham, will recnll) may help to account for the unpopularity of dogs among God's people of Israel. Some such reason would almost seem to be necessary to explain references in the Bible to the faithful companionship which from very early nges has exisied between men and dogs.

Poison Hemlock

The hemlock, favorite source of a poison used as a means of execution of criminnls in the days of the ancient Greeks, is common all over Europe and Asia, being found along roadsides and rubbish heaps. The plant has a small white flower and n flattened oval shaped fruit.

One type, known as the spotted hemlock, has been introduced into this country. It has a pnrsnip-like root and a bright green hollow stem, which rises from two to five feet. It has a use in medicine, but its principal fnme lies in its use in nncient days. The symptoms of the poisoning came on slowly with weakness, staggering pnralysis and then death. It was of this poison cup that Socrates died.

Polite Term for "Kicker"

"He is recalcitrant" we say about a man who refuses to fall in with our plans or a child who will not obey. We want to say that they nre disagreeable, contrary, contentious. And usually neither the man nor the child mind very much heing called "recalcitrant." And that, we believe, is becanse they have not looked into the origin or significance of the term. For the word comes from the "recalcitrare," to kick back. It is perhaps painting the lily to point out that "calcitrare"—to kick—is from "cnlx," meaning "heel." Hence, though it is not good language or form to call a man a "kicker," you can got srouad it with "recalcitrant."—Knnsas City Times.

Making It Unanimous

A man was presented with an account which he had good reason to believe had already been paid.

"Haven't I paid this account?" he nsked the boy who brought it to him.

"I don't know, sir," was the reply.

"Does your boss know?"

"No, sir."

"How do you know that?"

"I heard him say so."

"And after that he had the impudence to send you to see if I knew, eh?"

"Well, sir, it's like this. The boss don't know, I don't know, and you don't know. As the boss says, if you pays it again we shall all know."

Education a Mistake

"Don't talk to me about free education!" said a burly farmer of the old school. "What good has it done anyone, anyway? Makes young fellers too proud to do owt for a living but sit at a desk and wear cuffs round their necks. And the girls! Why, my missus can't get a servaat; they all want to be actresses or teachers or lady clerks! And, t'best of it is, after all the larnin', some of 'em can't even spell. There's youag Johnson at the Green Swan just put a sign over his coach honse, and this is how he spells 'cnrriage'—g a r-a-g-e! Don't talk to me about free education!"—Montreal Star.

Oakland Young Man Not Guilty of Reckless Driving Charge

Feeling that an injustice had been done him when Officer Thomas Currie of the State police had declared an accident unavoidable when Terrence Tamburini had struck one of his cows at a point several miles south of Oakland on Route 37 about two weeks ago, W. H. Smouse, of Oakland, preferred charges of reckless driving and had a warrant issued for the arrest of Mr. Tamburini. The hearing took place last Friday afternoon before Justice Gonder when a number of witnesses were examined and the Justice declared Mr. Tamburini not guilty.

Following the accident Mr. Tamburini came to Oakland and reported it to Corporal Currie and after making a thorough investigation of the matter stated that in his opinion the accident was unavoidable. Mr. Smouse was not satisfied and inserted an advertisement in The Republican giving his side of the matter. The charge of reckless driving followed and the case was heard.

Following the decision of the justice, Mr. Smouse asked for an appeal to the Circuit Court. Citing a decision of Judge Sloan in a like action a few years ago that the automobile law does not provide for an appeal by the State, the motion was not granted.

At the hearing the prosecuting witness had a stenographer present to take the testimony verbatim. Officer Currie stated that he had been informed that Mr. Smouse had written Commissioner Baughman, commissioner of motor vehicles, concerning the matter in which Mr. Smouse complained of the injustice of the officer's attitude immediately following the accident.

Kahl, service officer; Earl Selders, sergeant-at-arms; Delbert Davis, historian; Frank Pifer and Clarence Spear, color bearers; Harold M. Dawson, finance officer; Rev. Fr. W. J. McVeigh, chaplain.

Following the business session those present adjourned to Hinebaugh's restaurant where refreshments were served.

The drum and bugle corps of the legion will go to Elkins, West Va., tomorrow morning to participate in the Forest Festival parade, to be held there early in the afternoon.

Who Crashed Here in August Has Criminal Record

A warrant issued against Edwin Kenneth Reese, airplane pilot, who crashed his plane just south of town about the middle of August, on the charge of passing a worthless $50 check on a Dayton, Ohio, bank, has disclosed the fact that the man has a criminal record and has his photograph among the files of the Dayton police force.

He is now being sought by the Burns Detective Agency. He has also passed worthless checks in New York and St. Louis, and there is also a warrant for his arrest from New York authorities.

INDIAN COOKERY PIECE IS FOUND IN CASSELMAN

Time-Worn Vessel, Shaped Like Kettle, Taken from Stream

A time-worn stone vessel shaped like a kettle, hewn from solid rock, presumably by Indians, has been removed from the bed of Casselman River, in Somerset county, Pennsylvania, a few miles north of Grantsville, in this county, to the home of Harry Ogline, who owns the farm through which the stream passes.

It is carved from solid rock and will hold approximately thirty gallons. It is 24 inches deep and has an inside diameter of 27 inches. Students of Indian lore who have examined the antique say that a great deal of research would be necessary to determine what trible constructed the kettle or to determine its approximate age. It is thought the vessel was used for grinding corn.

Many other articles of Indian domesticity and tribal warfare have been located along the banks of the Casselman River. Flints and arrowheads have been found at frequent intervals by farmers and fishermen.

UNEMPLOYMENT SURVEY BEING MADE BY TEACHERS

Condition of Families of School Children To Be Investigated—Welfare Worker Here

TO ASK FOUR QUESTIONS

How many families with children in school are there in Garrett county in which the wage earners are totally unemployed? How many families with children in school are there in Garrett county in which the wage earners are employed one or two days a week? How many families with children in school are there in Garrett county in which the wage earners are employed three or four days a week? How many children are there in Garrett county out of school for lack of shoes and clothing?

These four questions are being asked of every teacher in Garrett county regarding the families of the children in their schools. In order that the Board of County Commissioners of Garrett county may determine with some degree of accuracy the extent of unemployment and underemployment in the county, so far as families having children in school are concerned, the Board of Education and the County Superintendent are cooperating with the Board of County Commissioners in securing the answers to the four questions given above, by placing in the hands of the principals and teachers a questionaire on which this information is to be recorded. The information will be returned to the office of the Board on Wednesday, October 19.

It was felt that of all persons in the county the teachers could give the most complete picture of circumstances in the school families of their communities and the principals and teachers have shown a willingness to cooperate.

It is pointed out that while the total figures will not be and cannot be, all inclusive and entirely accurate, they will nevertheless be a good index of the problem which has to be faced this winter. They will give scientific data on which the County Commissioners can plan for the months ahead. Everyone is familiar with the work done in the county last winter in the way of relieving hunger and distributing shoes and clothing.

If families with children in school are not included by any principal or teacher in the survey or investigation being made by them in this connection, they are requested to see their local teacher and have it included.

Miss Anita J. Faatz, Baltimore, State Supervisor of Social Welfare and Field Worker of the Governor's Advisory Committee on Unemployment, is in this county at the present time and is assisting by meeting the teachers in the assembling of this information. Every person interested in relieving possible distress from unemployment and relieving the problems of the unfortunate is urged to lend his or her best efforts in making this survey as complete and all-embracing as possible, which may be done directly by conferring and advising with any school principal in the county.

Miss Faatz has visited several of the towns in the county since her arrival on Monday, including Crellin, Kitzmiller, Shallmar, Vindex, Oakland, Grantsville, Swanton and will visit Jennings and other parts of the county before returning to Baltimore tomorrow.

RICHARDS RELEASED FROM CUSTODY; IS SENT HOME

Bigamy Charge is Not Preferred By Mother of Girl He Brought to Oakland and Married

LIVES IN MINNESOTA

William King Richards, 24, who was held by authorities in Morgantown, West Va., pending an investigation after he had brought an eighteen-year-old girl to Oakland and married her when it is alleged he already had a wife, was released from the Morgantown jail last Friday evening. The mother of the girl did not ask that he be held on any specific charge, although she conferred frequently with the State officers.

A telegram from Richards' mother at Mankato, Minnesota, pleaded that her son be sent home. Richards stated that he was from Akron, Ohio.

The woman who swore out a warrant for his arrest because he had failed to pay a board bill, said she was willing to withdraw the charge, and the only other charge against him, that of using an assumed name, was heard and the minimum fine of $1 and costs rendered.

When arrested last Sunday night, October 2, he told officers that he was "George B. Smith." The Monongalia county lunacy commission declared Richards sane, clearing up any doubt about his mental state.

Richards and the girl came to Oakland on Friday night, September 30, and were married on Saturday morning by a local minister. The couple then "thumbed" their way back to Morgantown, after which the girl disappeared, later turning up in Philadelphia, Pa., where she is visiting her father, a former Morgantown resident.

Fingerprints Taken

Richards was fingerprinted at the Morgantown city jail, despite threats that he would not submit to the printing except under force. None was used, however, but the prisoner attacked Chief Smith verbally with what was declared as one of the most bitter outbursts of scathing criticism ever heard in the Morgantown City building, when the ordeal ended. The prints and pictures taken of the suspect were broadcast to Federal and State police bureaus.

A money order for $40 was received at the Western Union under the name of Smith, which was being held pending the final outcome of the proceedings.

Mayor Stemple to Award Prizes at Meeting October 20

Announcement of the winners in the yard and garden contest, conducted this year under the auspices of the Oakland Civic club, will be made at a public meeting to be held next Thursday evening, October 20, in the Oakland High school auditorium.

Naylor, will be presented, members of this summer's dancing class of the Misses Bolgiano, will render a few dances, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. James Treacy, and the prizes will be awarded by Mayor Grover C. Stemple.

Two hundred eleven were entered in the contest and there will be 20 prizes awarded in addition to an honor list of approximately fifteen. The prizes are those things which can be planted in the ground to keep up the beautification work. There is no admission charges and the public is urged to attend.

Found Guilty on Charge of Auto Law Violation

At a hearing before Justice Gonder Saturday on charges growing out of the wreck several weeks ago along the Deer Park-Kitzmiller highway at a point near Altamont in which A. T. Shelton, of Clarksburg, West Va., was killed, Ernest Fitzwater, driver of one of the cars, was fined $5 and costs on the charge of passing a vehicle from the rear on a curve when the view forward was obstructed.

J. M. Gribble, Clarksburg, driver of the other car, who was charged with reckless driving, was found not gullty and discharged.

TABLELAND CONSTITUTION ADOPTED AT ANNUAL MEET

Evening Conference Is Held at Grantsville on Tuesday—Governing Board Is Elected

REPORTS ARE SUBMITTED

Adoption of a new constitution for the Allegheny Tableland association, the election of a governing board, and the admission of twelve community units into membership, were three of the features of the annual meeting of the organization held at Grantsville on Tuesday evening, at which more than eighty attended.

Dinner was arranged and served by the Civic club of Grantsville. Twelve community units reported with delegates and submitted their applications for membership in the association. The proposed constitution which was read at the Pittsburgh-Tableland meeting at Mt. Lake Park the latter part of August, and later discussed throughout the eight Tableland counties in meetings of community organizations, was adopted Tuesday evening by those present.

The new constitution provides for membership by community units and the following filed applications: Morgantown, Frostburg, Keyser, Confluence, Parsons, Mt. Lake Park, Oakland, Grantsville, Mt. Storm, Masontown, Terra Alta, and Kingwood.

Those elected to the governing board of the Tableland association, one from each county and one at large, included John S. Miller, Somerset; Paul C. Rouzer, Mineral; Bushrod Grimes, Monongalia; C. N. McIntire, Garrett; W. F. Lipscomb, Tucker; F. J. Reed, Preston; J. B. Watson, Confluence, at large. Fayette and Grant counties will elect representatives later.

A meeting for organizing the governing board will be held Friday afternoon, November 18, in the office of the Mt. Lake Institute, when officers for the ensuing year will be elected.

Joseph T. Miller, of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, was present at the Tuesday evening session and urged a large attendance at the exhibit in Pittsburgh this week.

Reports were submitted by J. B. Watson, last year's president of the Tableland association; Miss Sara B. Huff, music director of Mt. Lake Institute; and Rev. I. S. Middaugh, director, which showed that an extensive program had been carried on throughout the entire area during the summer. More than one hundred thousand people had gathered in audiences of the Tableland program, and over thirty-seven thousand had attended programs in Garrett county, the report stated.

ADD NEW ITEMS TO LIST IN SAVE-A-LIFE CAMPAIGN

Tires, Glass, Muffler and Operating License Are Also to be Checked This Year

STARTS ON OCTOBER 15TH

Four new items—tires, glass in windshield and windows, muffler and operating license—have been added to the list of motor vehicle factors to be inspected this year during the Save-a-Life Campaign, which will be conducted from October 15 to November 30, E. Austin Baughman, commissioner of Motor Vehicles, announced yesterday.

Heretofore, the state has required only brakes, lights, horns, steering mechanism, windshield wipers, and rear-view mirrors to be in good shape, but extending the inspection it is hoped to insure greater safety.

Much-worn tires, especially those with the fabric showing are extremely dangerous, and cracked glass windshield or window is also dangerous. Fragments of it may be dislocated by a jar or a strong wind, and injure occupants of the machine.

"The muffler is not very important as a safety factor, but when it is noisy it can be extremely annoying. The law requires an adequate, that is, a silent muffler.

"A check of all driving licenses will be made to prevent those whose permits have expired, or have been suspended or revoked, from operating."

There will be several authorized stations in Oakland and throughout the county.

Bruised and Cut When Crowded Off The Highway

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Smith and Mrs. Robert Smith, all of Baltimore, were cut and bruised when the automobile in which they were riding was crowded off the road at the State Line service station along route 50, Tuesday afternoon, and crashed into some fence posts. Mrs. Arnold Smith was cut about the forehead and knees, while Mrs. Robert Smith had a severe contusion on her head. Arnold Smith had a gash cut in his upper lip. The husband of Mrs. Robert Smith was uninjured.

All were brought to Oakland by Mr. Seawell, of Clarksburg, a newspaper salesman, where their wounds were dressed by Dr. H. W. McComas. They later returned to Baltimore in a bus, as the automobile was badly wrecked.

Forty Examined at Orthopedic Clinic on Saturday

At the orthopedic clinic held Saturday, October 8, in the office of the health department, Court House, Oakland, forty cases were examined by Dr. George Bennett, of Baltimore.

Some of the cases which have been corrected as far as possible, were dismissed, and several were recommended for further treatment at the Children's hospital school, Baltimore. A few new cases were examined, according to Dr. George E. Clarke, health officer.

Dr. Bennett commended Miss Grace Jones highly for her work with the crippled children's clinics which have been held here within the past several years.

MANY ENTER EXHIBITS IN FAIR OF THE TABLELANDS

Garrett County Products Gathered Tuesday and Taken To Gimbels' Department Store

COUNTY HAS TWO BOOTHS

Daily telephone communication with various parts of the Allegheny Tableland indicates that the Tableland fair, which the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring in Gimbel Brothers' Store today, tomorrow and Saturday, will be a complete success.

Many exhibits were gathered on Tuesday afternoon at the two Garrett county stations, Oakland Hardware and Furniture Company, Oakland, and the building of Dr. T. O. Broadwater, Grantsville, and carried to Pittsburgh in trucks, and it was stated that a similar number was collected at the stations in other counties of the Tableland.

There will be a booth of Garrett county products and a special booth showing the advantages of Deep Creek Lake as a summer resort, and Route 37 as the scenic highway of the Tableland. Several thousand folders are to be distributed during the three-day fair. These folders are illustrated and depict many scenes of interest. An exhibit of stuffed wild animals of this section is included in the booth.

The Garrett County's Commercial Club of Oakland has been responsible for arranging the special booth.

The Secretary of the Allegheny Tableland Council of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce asks that every visitor report immediately at the Chamber of Commerce to register. At the registration desk each Tableland visitor will be given credentials which will entitle him or her to free parking on city property, which is granted through the courtesy of the City Council.

The Pittsburgh Traffic Bureau will permit visitors to park cars beside the Chamber of Commerce while they register, and police protection for parked cars will be provided.

Auto Wrecked Near Gortner

George Breuninger had a narrow escape from serious injury and possible death on Thursday of last week when at the brow of a rise in the Oakland-Gortner road, he met an automobile and a large moving van approaching him from the south, the vehicles being abreast and with insufficient room for Mr. Breuninger to pass. He turned his car to the right up a rather steep embankment, but before he could get out of harm's way the rear of his car was caught by the truck and overturned with the result that the automobile was amost completely demolished. Mr. Breuninger escaped with a slight cut on his arm.

An investigation of the circumstances surrounding the cause of the accident is being made by officers.

Lesson for November 13

MAKING A LIVING

Deuteronomy 24:14, 15; Amos 5:6-15; Mark 6:34; Luke 12:15-21; Luke 19:1-26; II Thessalonians 3:6-13; I Timothy 6:5-16.

GOLDEN TEXT—I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. Romans 12:1.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Idea of Being Rich.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Right Way to Make Money.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Right Ways of Earning Money.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Christian Spirit in Business.

I. Treatment of Hired Servants (Deut. 24:14, 15).

1. Oppression forbidden (v. 14). The man who hires out is usually poor. The employer should not take advantage of his condition.

2. Foreigners to have the same treatment as fellow countrymen (v.14). Those who fear God will accord the same treatment to foreigners as to their own countrymen.

3. Servants to be promptly paid (v. 15). The laborer was to be paid at the end of the day. The credit system in these times is greatly to be deplored.

II. Ill-Gotten Wealth (Amos 5:11-13).

1. By oppression of the poor (v. 11). The rich built magnificent houses of the proceeds extorted from the poor. They took the bread out of the mouths of the poor by high rents and taxes—a picture of the conditions of our own day. The prophet assured them that God would interpose saying that they built houses and planted vineyards, but they would not be privileged to live in them nor to drink of the wine thereof.

2. By affliction of the just (v. 12). This they did by taking bribes. Many are today living in luxury from the proceeds derived from bribes.

3. By turning aside the poor in the gates (vv. 12, 13). Because the poor had no money to hire advocates, they were turned aside. It is difficult today for the poor to get justice in the courts.

III. Jesus, the Carpenter (Mark 6:3).

While Joseph lived, doubtless Jesus assisted him in the carpenter trade. He is therefore known as the carpenter.

IV. The Rich Fool (Luke 12:13-21).

Many today are seeking gold and forgetting God. Those who are concerned with getting riches while neglecting God are displaying utter folly. Observe,

1. His increase in goods (v. 16). His riches were rightly obtained, for the ground brought forth plentifully. It is not sinful to be rich. The sin is sometimes in the use made of riches.

2. His perplexities (v. 17). His land was producing more than his barns would hold. He did not know what to do about it. Had he personally held right views of life and a sense of stewardship to God, he would have seen that his barns held enough for himself and a surplus for the poor.

3. His fatal choice (vv. 18, 19). He chose to enlarge his barns and to give up his life to ease and luxury.

4. The awful indictment (vv. 20, 21). God called him a fool. Riches furnish neither contentment in this life nor a guarantee of continuance of life. It is not only foolishness, but madness to forget God while heaping up riches.

V. Reward for Laborer (Luke 10:16-23).

When Christ ascended on high, he gave gifts to men (Eph. 4:7-12). At His return to the earth, He will summon his servants to give an account of their stewardship. He will give rewards for faithfulness (vv. 16-19) and will impose judgment and condemnation upon the faithless.

VI. The Man Who Will Not Work Should Not Eat (II Thess. 3:10).

Growing out of Paul's teaching concerning the coming of the Lord, a tendency to idleness developed at Thessalonica. Earnest attention to present duties is the Scriptural attitude toward the Second Coming of Christ. Those who will not work should not eat. This is the right principle governing all charitable work.

VII. Peril of Working for Money (I Tim. 6:6-11).

Those who are working for money fall into temptation and a snare, and are exposed to many foolish and hurtful lusts. The obligation is to flee these things and follow after righteousness.

No Comfort There

"When a sinner is dying, he finds no comfort in counting the hypocrites in the church."

True Happiness

Happy are they who have learned the art of abiding within the inviolable protection of the eternal God, the shield on which all arrows are hunted, all swords turned aside, all sparks of malice extinguished.

Fountain of Blessing

Change of circumstances should not affect a Christian's joy. He should be independent of life's sorrows and losses. Then he becomes also a fountain of blessing in the world.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

That Garrett county exhibit of stuffed wild animals at the fair in Pittsburgh, is all right, but what inducement is there in showing off our famous "mountain pussies?"

My first fan mail letter in months arrived yesterday morning from Steyer. If you can give any good reason why I am publishing it, you're a better man than I am, Gunga Din. Here' tis:

"Hey, Scoop: I wanna know. A girl married an Irishman—she didn't know any better. Every evening when Pat comes home he shoves open the door, strides straight up to his wife and busts her in the nose. Could she get a divorce on grounds of income-Pat-ability? Huh?

"Well, then a windstorm broke nearly all the limbs off the trees in a farmer's apple orchard. Now he is patiently trying to graft the limbs back. Would it be safe to call that a tremendous task? Huh?"

"Anybody that marries one of those dumb Irish," Jim Kerins stated, "deserves every lick she gets. The only way she could get a divorce would be through mental incapacity."

Answer No. 2. "I'd call that outrageous. Anytime something on a farm breaks a limb, they always shoot it. And anyhow, grafting should be left to the political parties.

Now, speaking of politics, a lot of people who are shouting for a change wouldn't be so well satisfied if they got a change for the worse. It's an elephant's job, with no time for donkey business.

We Don't Like Money,—But

A merchant in Somerset county made a purchase from Fred Groff, of Berlin, and promised to pay upon presentation of the bill. A statement was sent but there was no acknowledgment. Several months passed, and as a gentle reminder Groff again sent a statement with the following postscript: "We don't care anything about money, but the people we owe are crazy about it."

The merchant replied with a check and the following notation: "The people who owe me aren't a darn bit crazy about paying."

Democarts Hold a Rally

While the band played "How Dry I Am," the candidates for re-election poured glasses of liquid from the pitcher on the table. If anything had been mentioned of the Democratic wet plank, I would have had my suspicions.

In Chairman Willie Offutt's flowery introductory address he let it slip that the "World owes every man a living." Good old world, and thanks for the information. I'll just sit back and wait for mine. He forgot to mention, though, who I was to see for my share.

"Bad" Tydings brought charges about the past, but no offer of any changes was introduced. Everything destructive, with no constructive views or definite action. Tydings said he was certain of the result in November unless an awful earthquake struck this continent. If that happened, the Democrats would probably blame that on Hoover too.

TAKING STEPS TO STOP SPREAD OF PARROT FEVER

U. S. Interstate Quarantine Regulations Put Into Effect

Because of a flare-up in different parts of the country of psittacosis, parrot fever, to give the disease its more common name, government authorities are taking steps to prevent the spread of the disease. U. S. Interstate Quarantine Regulations, adopted recenly, on the recommedation of the United States Public Health Service, require every interstate shipments of parrots, parrakeets, love birds or other birds of the parrot family, to be accompanied by a certificate from the proper health authorities to the effect that the bird or birds in the shipment have come from breeding centers or other distributing establishments that are free from infection. The regulation was adopted September 28 and became effective immediately.

Warnings of the danger of contracting the disease from infected birds have been issued by the Public Health Service through Dr. Hugh S. Cummings, Surgeon General of the Service, and the cooperation of the State Health officers has been requested in the enforcement of the Interstate regulations. In directing attention to the warnings, Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the Maryland State Department of Health, said: "The U. S. Public Health Service advises all persons to avoid contact with recently shipped or acquired birds. Several cases of parrot fever have been reported recently to the service, five from Minneapolis, with one death; and one from Idaho. Twelve cases, with six deaths, were reported from California between December 1 and February 10 of this year. Cases have also been reported from New York and Oregon.

"Marylanders will recall the outbreak of parrot fever during the winter of 1929-1930. The earliest cases and many of the other cases recognized at that time occurred in Maryland. There were also several cases in Maryland, as well as in other parts of the country, among laboratory workers engaged in discovering the sources of the disease and in finding means of combating it. Dr. William Royal Stokes, Chief of the Bureau of Bacteriology of the Baltimore City Department of Health, was among the martyrs of science who lost their lives in this way.

"The outbreak of 1929-1930 was wide-spread. Cases were reported from fifteen states and the District of Columbia, a total of 163 cases with 33 deaths. Of the total cases, 36 occurred in Maryland, 24 in Baltimore City and 12 in the counties. All of the cases that winter were traced to infected birds brought in mainly from South American ports and sold through pet shops in different parts of the country.

"As a result of a special study made recently at the invitation of the California State Department of Health, by a medical officer of the U. S. Public Health Service, the infection was found to be present in some of the breeding aviaries in the southern part of that State. It is believed that parrots and parrakeets from this source have probably been one of the important means of spreading the disease to other States."

A MESSAGE TO ALL EX-SERVICE MEN FROM THE DEPARTMENT COMMANDER

I have the very highest regard for Dr. John M. T. Finney and Major Redmond C. Stewart, leaders of the National Economy League in Maryland and I believe with them we should effect reasonable economy in the Fedcral Budget. However, I am thoroughly out of accord with the present program of the National Economy League, which program singles out one item in the Federal Budget to the exclusion of all others. I think it the height of importance that such men as Archie Roosevelt, Admiral Byrd, Former-Governor Smith, General Harbord, Admiral Simms and others should actively support the present plan of the Economy League, which plan aims its dart solely at those men who, in a national emergency, went to the defense of our country.

As the prescnt leader of the service men in Maryland, I stand four-square for economy in government, both national and state, and I include in the above the administration of the Veterans Bureau. I believe the expenditures in the Veterans Bureau should be materially reduced just as I believe many other Federal expenditures should be reduced. It is my opinion, however, the gentlemen who are leading the fight for the National Economy League should sweep before their own doors before they presume to come into Maryland and castigate the ex-service man. When their effort is aimed at a scientific reduction of the Federal Budget, I shall be glad to be associated with them but when they select, as they have done, for their immediate objective the elimination of the sum of $450,000,000, appropriated to the Veterans Bureau, to the exclusion of all other items, I unhesitatingly say that I am opposed to any such program.

It may be only a coincidence, but it is nevertheless a fact, that every leader of the National Economy League is identified with Big Business or banking interests. For years they have received large compensation, and I think it is with poor grace that they should wish to effect economies at the expense only of the ex-service man. If you will investigate the facts you will find the gentlemen whose names appear as national leaders in this economy program are contributing nothing to the program themselves.

Mr. Archibald Roosevelt might have suggested the reduction or the elimination of the mail subsidy which his steamship company enjoys.

We find Ex-Governor Alfred E. Smith receiving a pension from the State of New York which he will continue to receive during his life, of approximately $6,000 per year.

Major General Harbord also receives retired pay at the rate of $6,000 per year and has for a number of years past been identified with one of the largest business enterprises in this country.

Admiral Simms, who recently purported to withdraw from the American Legion, is drawing from the Federal Treasury $6,000 per year for the remainder of his life.

And Admiral Byrd, who seems to be most active in this matter of Federal Economy aimed only at the Ex-Scrvice man, is, in my opinion, open to most severe criticism as he, too, is a retired admiral drawing approximately $5,500 annually from the Federal Treasury. Here is an Admiral of our Navy who was not even in the World War but who is drawing the retired pay of an admiral and at the same time clamoring for reduction at the expense of thousands of former enlisted men who actually fought upon the battlefields of France. Compare, if you will, the payment now being received by these men of the National Economy League with the pay of the average enlisted men who entered the service and fought through the World War. These men received from the Federal Government $33 a month. Of this amount, if the man had dependents, $15 was taken out by the government as a compulsory allotment, $6.50 per month was taken for his War Risk Insurance, and in most cases $6 per month was the average price for laundry and other incidentals, leaving a balance to the soldier himself of $5.50 per month. The average time spent in the army during the World War by the enlisted man was two years and a private soldier, therefore, actually received for his two years' servlce approximately $132 plus a $60 bonus when discharged, making a total of $190.

Study carefully the proposal made and where do these leaders in Economy suggest that economies be made—only by taking from the other fellow, the ex-service man.

Does Archie Roosevelt suggest that the enormous subsidies to his steamships be reduced? Does Byrd suggest that his retirement pay be cut? Do we find Al Smith, General Harbord and Admiral Simms urging that their retired pay be taken from them? No.

No explanation is given as to why these exponents of economy overlooked the terrific waste in other departments of our federal government. Will they dare say that savings cannot be made in the Department of Agriculture, the Department of the Interior and of Commerce and in the Post Office Department and even in the Treasury Department and the Department of Justice?

Have we heard any cry from these leaders in economy when the country beheld the F. F. C. hand the great House of Morgan, through a defunct western railroad, millions of dollars of the people's money? Did they say anything in protest when the government reached into the pockets of the people and handed General Dawes' bank seventy millions of dollars? No. As long as assistance is given Big Business it seems perfectly satisfactory to these misguided proponents of economy. They are not out in the interest of economy in government, they are out to get the ex-service man. Otherwise, how do they explain that they overlooked all other items in the Budget? Why do they not fight Paternalism in all its ramifications?

I favor economy in the Veterans' Bureau, as well as all other Bureaus, and I believe economies can be effected. But if the National Economy League, led hy people who have always received salaries from the Federal Government are going to make their fight solely against the ex-service man, I shall stand with and defend the ex-service man. Material reductions in the Federal Budget should be effected and if the National Economy League wishes to do a service to the country it will modify its program and approach the problem in a scientific manner.

NOTHING TO OFFER—

With nothing to offer except a destructive critisism, the Democratic nominees spoke Monday night in the Maryland Theatre for two hours and one-half, and when the time was up they hadn't offered a single solution of any national problem. Their time had been spent in charging President Hoover with failing to live up to any promises made in 1928, with the responsibility for the failure of 5,000 banks and the cause of unemeployment and condition of the farmer and business men of today. That is only food for weak-minded people.

Mr. Tydings really spoke the truth in the beginning of his address when he said that the things involved were bigger than either party, and that no politics could make prosperity. But he later tried to point out that President Hoover and the Republicans had caused every ill in the country since 1928.

Mr. Tydings wants the country's budget balanced. Well, who doesn't? But did Mr. Tydings say how this was to be done? Did he offer any solution? He also wants a common-sense tariff. Did he state what a common-sense tariff might look like?

He also charged—but there is no need to go further. His whole speech was a charge account, and he never offered any assurance that in changing the heads of the U. S. and Company the account would not be continued in the same manner in which he accused the Republican party of doing the past four years.

A change may be all right sometimes, but be sure that it's not a change for the worse.

THE MEDICINE MAN

Franklin D. Roosevelt, advocate of the League of Nations, while playing a minor part as the Democrat candidate for Vice-President in 1920, now appears in the leading role of Chief Medicine Man, peddling internationalism as a cure-all to the American people.

Swinging about the country, exactly like the old time peddler of quack medicines, Governor Roosevelt offers a mysterious panacea, a new palm of life, which he claims is a cure for all the economic ills of the American farmer. Like the medicine man of old, however, the Democratic candidate talks a great deal, but has nothing of any value to offer to those who listen to him.

The Democratic medicine man hides the fact that his preparation, called "International Tariffs" has been analyzed by experts and pronounced as a nostrum which, if swallowed, would bring ruination to those taking it. Contrast this plea of the Medicine Man with the statement of a specialist. President Hoover says: "The removal of or reduction of the tariff on farm products means a flood of them into the United States. * * * * There are at this minute 2,000,000 cattle in the northern states of Mexico seeking a market. The price is about $2.50 for 100 pounds on the south bank of the Rio Grande. It is $4.50 on the north bank—and only the tariff wall between."

Governor Roosevelt, although posing as a farmer, has no farm policy. The record shows that, Mr. Roosevelt has done nothing to help the farmers of New York State. He opposed the elimination of a State tax of $13,500,000, which largely falls on farmers, but insisted on lowered income taxes, which benefits those who are more fortunate. Since he has been Governor of the State of New York, the state budget has been increased to $328,140,894.91 as against only $133,159,710.24 under Governor Nathan L. Miller in 1922.

The acid test exposes a deliberate fraud in the Roosevelt farm record. This is the Commission Merchant's Bond Act that the Governor claims as his own. This measure was introduced in the New York State Legislature, when Mr. Roosevelt, as a State Senator, was Chairman of the Senate committee on Agriculture. For one year Mr. Roosevelt refused to report this bill from his committee. Finally, upon the demand of the farmers, he did let the bill be reported. At no time did he speak in behalf of this law or help its enactment.

This is no time to listen to honeyed words from medicine men. It is no time for internationalism, as advocated by Governor Roosevelt, or for free trade, as sponsored by his running mate, John N. Garner.

WHY PRESIDENT HOOVER SHOULD BE RE-ELECTED

If ever a President of the United States deserved re-election on his record, President Hoover deserves re-election; and if ever our country needed the continued services of a President, the United States needs the continued services of President Hoover.

Confronted with greater difficulties than any other President has had to meet in times of peace, if not indeed in times of either war or peace, he has been the outstanding leader in preventing disaster and promoting recovery. From the first blast of the depression to the present hour, in every succeeding crisis, he has been more resourceful in suggestion, more prompt in initiative, and more effective in action than any other man or official, or all others put together.

He closed the door to foreign immigration. He was the leading factor in maintaining wages for eighteen months, thus softening the first blow of the panic. He promoted public and private construction running into hundreds of millions of dollars and employing hundreds of thousands of men. He secured prompt and effectual relief of the drought-stricken states of 1930. Almost entirely upon his recommendation, Congress appropriated nearly one billion dollars for the relief of agriculture. He proposed and carried through the moratorium which probably saved Europe from complete collapse and our own country from untold disaster. In the face of general skepticism he instituted a surprisingly successful campaign against the hoarding panic of 1931. He organized the National Credit Corporation to allay the epidemic of bank failures and to support the banking credit of the nation.

Thus, one by one, he dealt with each new crisis. But the measure of his statesmanship was not yet taken. In December, 1931, he laid before the Congress a program of reconstruction and relief so complex, vast and far-reaching, and in its implications so beneficial to all our people, that it must rank among the greatest achievments of any of our Presidents. Most of this program the President, with unequalled firmness and persistence, pushed through Congress, stamping out meanwhile dangerous proposals that beset the way. Notwithstanding assertions to the contrary, this program was fundamentally for the relief of the common people—the victims of misfortune in country, town and city. Out of it came the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Home Loan Bank System, emergency releif through help to states and cities, enlarged relief to agriculture, the balancing of the budget, the ending of the outward flow of gold, the maintenance of the gold standard, and the return of confidence in our financial situation to our own people and to the world.

President Hoover has grown in stature with these years until, in the words of the independent Democratic New York Times, he is "every inch a President." He is a stronger President than ever before. His experience is invaluable. He has not only achieved great good, but he has prevented great evil. He has stood like a rock against proposals that would have imperilled, if not wrecked, the financial structure of the government; and repeatedly, during the whole course of his administration, he has had to supply the courage which Congress woefully lacked.

And now, largely through the wisdom, the courage and the statesmenship of the President, the country seems to have touched the verge of recovery. To change to untried leadership would be to risk reversal or dangerous modification of policies and processes just now coming into action and to invest the immediate future with an uncertainty peculiarly deplorable at this critical time.—Winning essay by A. C. Scott, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

According to The Republican's files the beginning of the fifteenth week of the drought was Sunday.

The Oakland flour mill, on Water street, was standing idle, due to the fact that the machinery was in bad repair and farmers were seriously inconvenienced thereby.

Forty-six cottages were still being occupied at Mountain Lake Park by summer residents.

The Oakland, Deer Park and all the hotels at Mountain Lake Park with one exception had been closed. A few visitors remained at the Glades Hotel which was scheduled to remain open during the winter.

Police Justice A. B. Gonder had another busy day, the fines collected amounting to $12.

Stockmen in Garrett county were engaged in shipping to Eastern markets. Andrew Shartzer shipped 341 sheep to the Philadelphia market.

New postal cards were ready for the public (double cards with one of them as a return card). The device was wholly new in the United States although it had been in use in Europe for a considerable time.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Joseph Tyler and his wife, Marie, of New York, were captured at Keyser and brought to Oakland where a charge of burglarizing the store of Bolden, Brown & Weimer was lodged against them. The woman, seen wearing a coat similar to one stolen, by W. R. Browning, was the cause of the arrest of the parties. The stolen goods were found in their possession.

The O. H. S. Literary Society elected officers as follows: Bernard Faherty, president; Edward Chance, vice-president; Rose Browning, recording secretary; Edwana Peddicord, treasurer; Percy Thayer, editor of Star; Frederick Thayer, corresponding secretary.

The work of paving Green street from the alley to Second street, was completed.

Potatoes—How Shall We Use Them?

In careless preparation and cooking of the potato as high as 30 per cent of its food value may be wasted.

1. Peeling and slicing the potato, allowing it to stand a long time in water before cooking is wasteful.

2. Placing the pecled potato, without previous soaking, in cold water and bringing the water quickly to the boiling point, is wasteful.

3. Placing the peeled potato at once in salted boiling water and boiling the water rapidly will waste less of the food matter.

4. Baking or steaming the potato with the skin on wastes none of the food matter. If roughage is needed in the diet, the baked potato should be eaten with the skins on.

5. Cooking the unpecled potato without water in a heavy covered vessel over the direct heat destroys none of the food matter. The rule should be to boil or steam the potato and remove the skin after it is cooked. Then the potato may be cut into the form appropriate to any one of the fifty or more ways in which it can be served.

Potato Hash—Two cups chopped potato, 2 cups chopped meat, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 3 tablespoons fat, ½ cup boiling water. Melt the fat in the frying pan; add the potato and meat, mixture, pour over the top the water and cook slowly without stirring until the under surface is a rich brown. Fold as an omelet and serve hot on a platter.

Potato and Lima Bean Loaf—1½ cups cooked lima beans (sieved), 2 tablespoons fat, ¼ cup milk, 1 teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon sage, 2 cups riced potato, ¼ cup milk, ½ teaspoon fat, ½ teaspoon fat for brushing. Mix first five ingredients and place in bottom of an oiled dish. Whip together the hot potato and the remaining ingredients. Place this mixture on top. Bake in quick oven. Serve with tomato sauce.

Meat Loaf—One pound ground beef, ¼ lb. ground pork, ⅓ cup mashed potatoes, ¼ cup milk, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ½ teaspoon minced onion if desired. Mix all ingredients together and form into a loaf. Bake in a hot oven from 45 minutes to one hour. Potato takes the place of egg as a binder.

Potato and Carrot Pudding—¼ cup fat, 1 cup grated raw carrot, 1 cup grated raw potato, 1 cup brown sugar, 1½ cups seeded raisins, 1 cup nuts, 1½ cups flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 eggs, 3 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon cloves, ½ teaspoon nutmeg. Cream butter, add sugar, beat, add eggs, beat. Add vegetables; mix and sift baking powder and seasoning with flour, and beat; then add fruit dredget with small part of the flour. Steam 3 hours.

The Price of Success Isn't So Much—After All

IN clothes, for example, the price of costume perfection isn't so much—after all. True, you must know how to shop . . . you must be able to recognize good taste from the whims of fashion . . . you must be able to discern quality and so make every dollar count. But when you shop at this store where all of these things are planned for you in advance—you can't go wrong. Success is assured.

How Chemical Research Has Helped the World

There is no single "cure-all" drug for every ill that flesh is heir to; even the "same" disease in different men does not always yield to the same drug. The chemist dare not generalize in drug research for the needs of a human mechine which recent discoveries have proved to be so delicate that the absence of five-millionths of a gramme of a vitamin appreciably shortens the life of man.

Specialized research has placed so much at the disposal of the modern doctor that such a common disease as rickets can be cured by giving the patient food containing vitamin D, a product of peculiar value in strengthening weakness in the bones. Vitamin D can he made in the laboratory. Two grammes of it are equivalent to about one ton of cod liver oil in its power of curing or preventing rickets.

Besides prolonging life, chemical research has done a multitude of things to make life possible as we live it. The prodnctivity of land and factory enables enough to be grown and manufactured to meet the needs of the greatly increased population of the world. Research is primarily responsible for this. Were it otherwise, we should he faced with the terror of world shortage piled on an economic crisis.

Always Keen Desire to Peer Into the Future

Writers note a big growth of popularity in fortune telling. Palmists, phrenologists, crystal gazers, astrologists, spiritualists, soothsayers, numerologists and other "lsts," presumably even voodooists, are doing big business. Even governors and cabinet officers, it has been averred, visit these intriguing professors of occult powers. There is a wide urge to try to look through the murky present and a persistent hope of seeing light ahead. It is the old principle of supply and demand, the seeking of guides to fortune, or better times. There is no wonder that gropers and hopers apply to the only class that profess to be able to see ahead. Klag Saul, it may be remembered, was pretty rough on "those that had familiar spirits" in the days of his prosperity, but when dark days came on he sought out the Witch of Endor to get a little dope on the future. There is no doubt that the fortune tellers now are seeing good things—the customers themselves.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Rodney's Claim to Fame

Caesar Rodney was one of the delegates from Delaware to the Continental congress held in Indepeadence hall, Philadelphia. This congress was to vote on the adoption of independence. By agreement, unless the majority of delegates of each individual colony was in favor of adoption of the declaration, the same would not be done. One of Delaware's delegates was favorable, one was opposed. Caesar Rodney was held at his home in Dover due to illness. Word was sent to him by carrier that his vote was needed. He arose from his sick bed nnd rode without stopping from Dover to Wilmington to Philadelphia and arrived just in time as his name was called on the roll to say, "Delaware casts her vote for independence." History claims that Caesar Rodney's ride was more important, though not as much publicized, as that of Paul Revere. It was because of his ride that the Declaration of Independence was adopted.

Expected Fruits of Reform

With the endlag of the Napoleonic wars in 1815, the cry for reform throngh legislntion became heard in Britain, much as it is today. A notable satirist, Sydney Smith, anent a certain bill then pending in parliament, uttered these delightful words: "All young ladies expect that as soon as this bill is carried they will be instantly married; schoolboys believe that gerunds and supines will be abolished; and that currant tarts must ultimately come down in price; the corporal and sergeant are sure of double pay; bad poets expect a demand for epics, and fools will he disappointed as they always are."

Where Cow Is Worshipad

The cow still is venerated in parts of the Orient, notably in India. Each holy cow has a keeper, who leads it about from place to place, sometimes pausing in one location for an hour or so while passers-by stop to pay their tribute. They believe that a special blessing is derived from touching the tail of the animal. Animals of various kinds always have held prominent positions in Asiatic religions. The worship of the bull was widespread at one time, and some races have deified the elephant. In general, however, the cow is the most popular of the animal gods.

New England Accorded High Place in History

After the terrible drubbing she has taken in the last few years at the hands of authors, traveling salesmen and economists, there is a laurel wreath for New England in an article in Harper's Magazine by Bernard de Voto.

"New England is a finished place," declares the writer. "Its destiny is that of Florence, of Vealce, not Milan, while the American empire careens onward toward its unpredicted end.

"It is the first American section to be finished, to achieve stability in the conditions of its life. It is the first old civilization, the first permaneat civilization in America.

"If the world indeed faces into darkness, New Eagland has the resources of the Yankee nature. They are not only the will to tighten one's belt and hang on. They contain the wisdom of three centuries whose teaching was, finally, defeat.

"The Yankee has experienced nothing but what he was tanght to expect. Out of this wisdom, in his frigid climate, ngainst the resistance of his granite fields, he built his commonwealth. It was a superb equipment for his past; it may not be a futile one for our future."

Norse Custom Kept Up by Shetland Islanders

The nncient Norse fire festival of Up-Helly-aa, which means the last of the holy yule days, is annually celebrated in Lerwick, Shetland islands. In the last celebration three hundred "Guizers," carrying six-foot torches, took part in the torchlight procession, wearing brilliantly-colored costumes. They were led by stalwart "vikings." The leader of the Guizers, the Guizer Jarl, a commandiag figure, wore a purple and oraage cloak, aluminum coat of mail, and silver helmet surmounted by outspread ravens' wings. The Guizers fell in behind the full-size Norse war galley "Frithr," meaning friendship, with its towering dragon head and fish-like tail. The "Jarl" stood a solitary figure firmly grasping the starboard steering oar of the ship. A bugle call gave the signal to light up the torches, and then, accompanied by the singing of martial airs and band and pipe music, the procession moved through the streets of the town. Finally the torches are thrown into the valley, which is thus consigned to Valhalla. This ccremony recalls to Shetlanlers the Norse cnstom of placing a dead warrior in his galley, setting it alight, and launching it on the sea.

Watt's Laurels Disputed

The laurels resting upon the head of James Watt, the reputed inventor of the steam engine, are in danger, for the director of the Technical museum in Stockholm has recently announced that he has discovered that a steam engine was built in Sweden in 1728, eight years before the birth of James Watt. The constructor was Maaron Triewald, a Swedish professor of astronomy, and it was in active service for seven years at the Dennemora mines in that country nntil the engine was completely destroyed by lightning. The engine was never rebnilt, but Triewald left some drawings and a description of it and with the aid of his matcrial a working model has been made and it is now on view at the Technical museum.

"Amarica, I Love You"

America that is the United States of America and it is very interesting was throughout the Nineteenth century beginning living that is to say they were beginning living being made ont of the Eighteenth century that is in all the Nineteenth century they were beginning living beglaning and living in the Twentieth century. And now what are they to do. Having done something they must be. Looking backward. That is. Natural enough.

And how do you look backward? By looking forward. And what do you see? As they look forward. They see what they bad to do before they could look backward. And there we have it all,—(Gertrude Stein in Creative Art).

Great Penal Institute

Sing Sing, the famous New York state prison, is located at Ossining, a town on the Hudson river about 30 miles north of New York city.

The town itself was originally also called Sing Sing, supposedly from the Sing Sing or Sintsink Indians who once lived in thnt vicinity. But in 1901 the name of the town was officially changed to Ossining. The inhabitants objected to the name Sing Sing because of its popular association with the penitentiary. Ossining is merely another form of Sing Sing, both words being corruptions of the Delaware Indian word assinesink, meaning, literally, "at the small stone."

THE MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY'S CORNER

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

The ancient Church believed that the prophets and apostles taught under the influence of the Holy Spirit, and this belief was founded in the testimony of Scripture itself. Justin Martyr, speaking of the wonderful teachings of the Old Testament, remarks: "The divine plectrum itself descending from Heaven, makes use of holy men, as harp or tyre, to reveal to us the knowledge of divino and heavenly things."

Clement of Alexandria, speaking of the law and the prophets, remarks: "Justly could we call the apostles, prophets and righteous men, since one and the same Holy Spirit works in all of them."

Theophilus, bishop of Antioch, observes: "Respecting the righteousness which the law teaches, both the prophets and the gospels are found to agree, because they all (all writers) spoke inspired by the one Spirit of God."

Origin, who ranks as the most illustrious scholar of the early post-apostolic Church, remarks: "Certainly, the Holy Spirit inspired each one of those holy men, whether they were prophets or apostles; and that there was not one spirit in the ancients and another in those who were inspired at the coming of Christ, is most clearly proclaimed in the Churches."

Chrysostom, commenting on the Gospel of John, says: "Let us no longer listen to the fisherman, or to the son of Zebedee, but to the Spirit that knows the deep things of God, and strikes the apostles as a lyre. For he will tell us nothing that is human but will speak to us of spiritual depths." Yet, when commenting on Matthew, he observes: "The evangelists are shown to disagree in many places; but this circumstance itself is the greatest proof of their truth. For if they had accurately agreed in all things respecting times and places, and in their very words, none of our enemies would have believed that they had not been written from human concert. For they would not have supposed that so much harmony grew out of the simple truth. But, as it is, the apparent disagreement in small things frees them from all suspicion, and clearly vindicates the character of the writers."

Augustine, Jerome, Luther, Melancthon, Calvin, and Wesley join in this universal acclaim of the Scriptures as the Word of God. As in all other mundane matters, the Bible is the product of divine and human cooperation. However, the writing was done on the tablets of stone on Mt. Sinai, in the long ago, a man was the messenger to his fellowmen; but the message we recognize as having existed since before the worlds were, and as having authority when—

"The stars are old
And the sun is cold
And the books of the Judgment-day unfold."

Your store is open for business as usual, but "Out of sight; out of mind!" To keep in step with the progress of your community; to get your share of business, you must advertise regularly. MT. LAKE PARK

The death of Dr. Reed recalls to mind many of the past glories of the Park, when Dr. Davidson, DeWitt Talmage and a goodly number of other Chautauqua celebrities returned annually to grace the platforms. He was superintendent of the Park in its peak of popularity. One by one the persons linking us with the past are slipping away.

Work has begun on the new Deer Park-Mt. Lake road and the right-of way is being cleared. Some disappointment is being expressed at the delay in getting started as it will curtail the amount of work to be done this fall with consequent curtailment of employment.

While we know that reminders get monotonous, yet we believe the warning that the time will soon be here to remove fallen leaves and thus reduce the fire hazard. Two or three days' work at the proper time may save disastrous loss. Leaves should be removed and the weeds cut from vacant lots this fall rather than to wait for spring.

Looking Far Into the Future of Human Race

We who live today will be regarded by our descendants of a million years hence as creatures who groped about in the darkness before dawn, in the misty gloom of the morning of understanding, when ignorance, superstition and animal instinct combated attempts to understand nature's truths.

In a number of years we shall have the new 200-inch telescope. This telescope will carry us three times further into the depths of space than human investigations have penetrated. A celestial domain thirty times the volume of what we know today will be opened to us.

Supplemented by the work of our mathematicians, the observations that will be made will advance our knowledge of cosmic geography more than Columbus advanced our knowledge of terrestrial geography by his discovery of America in 1492.—Hiram Percy Maxim in the Scientific American.

Currency Standard

The Kansas City convention of July 4, 1900, which nominated William Jennings Bryan, adopted a platform containing what was labeled "the silver declaration." It called for the immediate free coinage of silver at 16 to 1. Thereafter Democratic party platforms were silent on the issue, but in 1904 the Republican convention declared that the gold standard must be upheld and could not safely be trusted to Democrats. Again, in 1908, the Republican platform contained a plank insisting that "every dollar must be based upon and as good as gold." Since then no reference has been made in either party platform, the gold standard being assumed as a matter of course.—Washington Star.

Australia Is Ancient

A discovery made by gold prospectors recently affords further proof of Australia's great age. After boring through 200 feet of basalt they struck an old river bed, and brought up water-polished stones which, according to experts, had not been exposed to sunlight for over a million years. And there are geological formations in the island continent which are estimated to be at least 20,000,000 years old. Australia, too, has preserved living links with its remote past. Some of its animals and plants are definitely prehistoric species, such as have survived nowhere else. The duck-billed platypus, for instance, is the oldest existing type of mammal.

Secret Inks Easy to Make

Invisible ink has been used for many centuries by spies and others, who want to keep their letters secret. A list of invisible inks is given by Practical Mechanics Magazine. The substance is dissolved in water which is then used for writing. Writing made from silver nitrate ink will appear when exposed to sunlight; cobalt chloride ink will show up when heat, as a flatiron, is applied; lead acetate ink is developed by hydrogen sulphide; starch (or linen) ink is developed by iodine fumes, and dilute copper sulphate ink appears in writing when coming in contact with strong ammonia fumes.

Cannel Coal

One of the peculiar features of cannel coal is the resemblance of the flame to that of an ordinary candle. The name was derived from this appearance, it is said. This coal is rich in hydro carbons and is often used to enrich illuminating gas. The coal is so inflammable that little effort is necessary to ignite it. One of the most frequent uses at the present time is for open fireplaces. In olden days it was used in the horse-drawn fire engines of Boston. Cannel coal has low heating power and burns with a smoky flame. It breaks with a smooth fracture.

That's Not News

Archeologists have discovered there were tax dodgers 2,000 years ago. And some of the newspaper boys, forgetting the Sunday school lessons of their childhood, have featured the announcement as though it were news. The most hated men of the early Roman empire were the publicans, the tax gatherers. Matthew speaks of them in his Gospel: "Publicans and sinners." Matthew was a tax collector himself, before he was converted, hence his knowledge.—Detroit News.

THOUSANDSATTRACTED TO EXHIBITS AT PITTSBURGH

Fourteen of Sixty-Nine Awards Are Won by Garrett County Entrants; Nine First Places

600 PRESENT AT BANQUET

Fourteen of the sixty-nine prizes awarded for farm and household products entered in 25 classes of displays at the Allegheny Tableland Fair in Gimbel Brothers' store, Pittsburgh, last Thursday, Friday and Saturday, were won by Garrett county entrants. Nine of these were first place winners.

The fair was held under the auspices of the Allegheny Tableland Council of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce and was participated in by many leading Pittsburgh business houses. The elegance of a modern department store and the age-old attraction of a rural fair blended in a colorful spectacle that drew thousands to view the display. Two hundred or more men and women from Garrett county attended.

Complete cooperation between the people and business men of Pittsburgh and of the Allegheny Tablelands was predicted by leaders as a result of the three-day fair which closed Saturday night.

R. C. McComas, president of the Garrett County Commercial Club of Oakland, in a telegram to Thomas A. Dunn, president of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commeree, expressed the appreciation of the Tableland communities for the observanee.

The telegram stated in part: "That cooperation between Pittsburgh and the Tableland area is no longer a myth, and that the potential possibilities of sueh cooperation are in evidence so overwhelming that even the most skeptieal sees, and seeing, believes, has been the result of this fair. No one event or act in the Tableland movement has so convincingly proved that Pittsburgh is our neighbor, our friend, and our helper, and that joined hands will mean mueh to both Pittsburgh and the Tableland.

"To you who conceived this Tableland fair, made your dreams real, and through your great efforts the wonderful success it was, we extend our great appreciation. That busy men take time for these things transforms your city from massive piles of steel and stone to a group of human hearts working and striving, as we

SAVE-A-LIFE CAMPAIGN BEGINS; TO END NOV. 30

New Features Will Not Prevent Car From Passing Inspection

Motorists who have bad tires or craeked windshield or window glass will pass the Save-A-Life inspection, provided their brakes, lights, steering meehanism, horn, windshield wipers, rear-view mirrors and license tags are in satisfactory condition, E. Austin Baughman, eommission of Motor Vehicles, said yesterday.

This year drivers will not be required to replace unsafe tires and cracked glass in windshield and window, in order to receive a sticker, because it is felt that the motorists will correct this condition themselves when they are warned that it is dangerous.

Machines having bad tires or cracked glass will be reported to the office of the commissioner of Motor Vehicles and if such vehicles cause accidents by these defects, their owners will probably have to face the evidenee of unsafe mechanical condition when it is stressed in court.

The official stickers and posters for stations have been printed and are now being distributed.

Arrangements have been made for police offieers to pay particular attention to defective equipment during the eampaign.

Oakland inspeetion stations include Auto Electric Service, Treacy's Garage, and Sharps Motor company, and possibly others. The campaign will be eonduеted to November 30.

PLANNED OWN FUNERAL; IS FOUND DEAD NEAR HUTTON

Body of Jefferson Turner Lohr Discovered Friday Morning by E. Cooper on Skipnish Road

UNDERTAKER HAD NOTE

Having left a note with Emroy Bolden, local undertaker, early this summer, directing in detail his own funeral arrangements, the body of Jefferson Turner Lohr, formerly of near Sunnyside, south of Oakland, was found Friday morning on the right-of-way of the abandoned Skipnish railroad, north of Hutton. The body was found by Elwood Cooper, of the Hutton community, who had been hunting foxes in the area.

Coming to Oakland, Mr. Cooper notified the State officers and an investigation was made by State's Attorney Walter W. Dawson, Deputy Sheriff Spear and Justice of the Peace W. A. Gonder, who deemed that a corner's inquest was unneeessary as evidence was apparent that the man had taken his own life, presumably by poisoning, and that he had been dead upwards of three weeks, as about that time he had been at the home of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Young Lohr, where he had spent two days.

For the past several years ha made his home first at a point in Ohio, later with a married daughter residing in Clarksburg, West Va.

His wife and three of their four children reside with Mrs. Lohr's mother, Mrs. Breuninger, near Sunnyside, this county. The deceased often left his plaee of abode and his absence created no alarm.

The note, left with Undertaker Bolden, written by Lohr, eontained the following instructions relative to the disposal of his remains and funeral arrangements:

"Lay on side in some sort of night clothes; no serviees of any kind; may open casket at grave if wish to; grave digging paid for; get Oliver Beachy if possible. No relations to act as pallbearers. Don't notify anyone except Wade; no flowers."

"Wade" is a brother who resides at Swanton.

Lohr was entirely deaf and was looked upon by those who knew him as erratic in many ways.

He is survived by his widow and four children. Funeral services were conducted Friday evening at Bittinger with Rev. D. C. Trimble, pastor of St. Matthew's Episcopal church, Oakland, officiating, the interment being made in the family plot where his father, the late Peter P. Lohr, and his mother, the late Mrs. Mary C. Lohr, are buried.

RESIDENTIAL SANITATION EXPLAINED IN PAMPHLET

State Department Sends out Circular on Health Problems

In response to requests from every section of the State for advice or assistance in overcoming difficulties in rural sanitation, Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the Maryland State Department of Health, announces that the Department has issued a pamphlet on residential sanitation containing practical suggestions for solving the more important sanitary problems that affect the welfare of those living in rural homes.

The chief requisites of residential sanitation are shown to be a supply of pure water and means for the safe disposal of sewage and other wastes. Attention is directed to precuations that should be observed in developing a rural water supply and means are suggested for the satisfactory disposal of sewage and garbage. The subjects are discussed in sufficient detail to meet general conditions. Those interested in following the recommendations are advised, however, that plans for each residence must be considered in relation to location and to the slope of the ground, and that expert advice is necessary when the proximity of water supplies to possible sources of contamniation, unfavorable slope of the ground or other conditions present special difficulties.

In the section on water supplies, streams, springs, and wells, as sources of supply are discussed; the need for the protection of water supplies from contamination is emphasized; the construction of dug and metal cased wells is described; and the possibility of contracting disease through polluted water is pointed out. The essential requirements of sewage disposal, by means of chemical toilets, water carried sewage, various types of treatment plants, outfall sewers and disposal by ground absorption are described in detail.

Advice is also given in regard to the construction of incinerators and to other methods of garbage disposal.

A copy of the pamphlet, which contains a number of illustrations showing methods of construction, may be obtained by writing to the Bureau of Sanitary Engineering, State Department of Health, 2411 North Charles Street, Baltimore City.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

Again the firemen are giving a treat
And Hallowe'en prizes that can't be beat (muc!\
They'll rope on the street and give you a chance
To shake a mean leg at the round or square dance.
The mayor will keep order so don't get too gay (says you)
Just have a rip snortin' general good time. And say
Get out your costumes and don't be afraid
To join in the department's Hallowe-'en pee-rade.

I really intended to write more last week but old man time slipped around to Thursday morning before I realized it and Archibaldson locked the forms before I got a chance.

It has been so short for the past few weeks, at least short of any sense, that it might look to the readers like it was being censored. And far be it from me to give that impression.

And if you think some of this rambling doesn't make much sense, kindly read what you see below, copied from last week's Democrat:

"The building is modern in every respect and a large farm is located on the property with a herd of prize cattle, fertile soil where erops are raised and fruit."

Along the same line, but of a different thought, how would this sound? The man's head was well proportioned in every way and two large ears are located on the property, with a lot of grey matter, fertile top soil where hair is raised and dandruff.

Boy Goes to City

LOST—Somewhere in Pittsburgh, by Di-Di Jim, the office devil, one pair of pants. (It was an extra pair.)

Suddenly faced with the problem of using an umbrella last Sunday afternoon, I was at a loss as to the etiquet of the proceedings. If I held the thing just high enough to keep the rain from my companion, it knocked my hat awry. If I held it down to keep the driving rain from our faces, I'd invariably run into difficulties. If I held it high enough for myself, I'd be reminded that I had a partner. I finally solved the problem. I held the whole thing over her and took my ducking like a man from both sides, from the honest to goodness rain on one side, and the drip from several of the ribs, on the other. What do I care for a little water here and there? But the next time we go out in the rain, we take both raincoat and umbrella.

The Lost Squadron, the story of which had its beginning at the close of the war, which was shown last Saturday at the Maryland theatre, became realistic for me. For all during the show the war wasn't over as far as I was concerned. Somebody had pushed their feet under my seat and it was just a poison gas attack, impure and simple. Just when the show was finished I got used to the odor. Making my exit to the outside world, I remarked on another peculiar odor striking my nostrils. "Nothing but fresh air," I was told, and I finally found out that it was.

Sitting here and thinking (believe it or not, by special permission of the copyright owner) how to get revenge on the person who sticks such feet under my seat again, and also how to get enough words to finish this column, I have conceived the idea you see below.

First, catch the fellow with the feet. With feet that heavy, he won't be able to run. Remove socks and stand them in corner. Take offender to specially constructed sweat box, shown in picture. Place him in position gently. Light lamp. Close door and clamp collar around neck; leave small outlet for aroma, under nose. Heat for 20 minutes and stir constantly. If he faints from escaping aroma, release patient, as he is probably cured, having smelled his own feet.

If it doesn't affect him in the least and he appears to be immune, simply tighten collar around neck to save hanging expenses and turn him over to Emroy Bolden, for he is incurable. (Note: in making illustration, lady was used simply to demonstrate how it worked. And anyhow, it wasn't a lady's feet.) Col. Bell has applied for patent on this contraption and orders will be taken by him at any time. Not that he promises delivery.

Cross Section of Interior

Thus far there have been on apples, potatoes, onions or gourds brought in to my desk. Is there a shortage of crops or am I losing my power over the Boss Editor's subscribers? I'll have to subsist on memories of the apple donations last year, not forgetting that box full of "punkins" and worm-eaten dwarf apples.

THE MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY'S CORNER

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

The canon, or church rule, by which the sixty-six books of the Bible have been selected, is not easily determined. Respecting the kind and amount of inspiration in the canonical books, we must consider what the nature of each book requires. In writing the history of the world before his time, Moses needed inspiration for his narrative in the Pentateuch. Even if he had written documents lying before him, or possessed merely the traditions of his ancestors, there was still this need of divine guidance to enable him to distinguish true history. The account of creation must have come to Moses or to some one of his ancestors by divine revelation. To become the founder of a religious system, for the most part new, and as a prophet, he required immediate divine guidance.

Yet there were some less crucial points, in which Moses followed his own judgment or the advice offriends. Certainly we have record of one occasion when Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, was making him a visit, that Jethro, observing how the young judge was wearing out his life by hearing small cases as well as large ones, gave him this advice: "The thing that thou doest is not good. Thou shalt surely wear away, both thou and this people that is with thee, for this thing is too heavy for thee: thou art not able to perform it thyself alone." Then he gave the sage advice to appoint judges for the decision of small controversies, while the most important cases shoul be brought to Moses himself. This advice Moses followed.

It is apparent that the books of Joshua, Judges, Ruth, Samuel, Kings, Chronicles, Ezra, Nehemiah and Esther, being merely historical in character, would require at most in their authors only the divine guidance to enable them to give a correct narrative of events. A well informed man could write the annals of a people with sufficient accuracy without the kind of inspiration demanded by prophetic writings, or the devotional and Messionic literature of the Psalms.

The Major and Minor Prophets demand the highest degree of inspiration, as their authors are not only teachers of great moral truths, but boldly predict the future, which none but the Omnicient God can clearly foresee. The conception of a prophet includes the idea of speaking not his own thought, but what he received from God. He was the ambassador and interpreter of God. As an example of this we have in Exodus 7:1: "And the Lord said unto Moses, 'See, I have made thee a God to Pharoah; and Aaron thy brother shall be thy prophet.'" Here it is clear that Aaron was to utter faithfully the words of Moses.

The inspirtion of the Bible is evident from its subliime doctrines concerning God, the purity of its moral precepts, and the wonderful fulfillment of its prophecies. Perhaps no greater evidence could be adduced than the persistence unto this day of the great Hebrew race. From the call of Abraham until the present hour history has revealed a progressive fulfillment of the Abrahamic promise: "I will bless them that bless thee, and curse them that curseth thee, and in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

There is a plan running through the entire sixty-six books of the sacred canon. The Bible is Christocentric. The New Testament is the fruitage of the Old Testament. In both the reverent reader can trace the finger of God, pointing the way of life.

BALTIMORE WONDERS—

Baltimore has started to wonder about Garrett county and perhaps to take a little more interest than just to regard it as a wilderness and State forest reserve.

Carroll Dulaney, who writes a column "Day by Day," in the Baltimore News, calls to the attention of the people that Pittsburghers have annexed Garrett county by holding a Tableland fair where products of the county were exhibited and welcoming visitors from all parts of the area.

Mr. Dulaney quotes a paragraph from a Pittsburgh paper which states, "The people of the Tableland who formerly dealt principally with Baltimore, Philadelphia and Washington, now wish to be considered a part of the Pittsburgh shopping district. Through the Chamber of Commerce this proposition naturally has been accepted gladly by Pittsburgh and a program is being developed for closer business and social relationship."

Mr. Dulaney also recalls the convention at Mountain Lake Park this summer and the fact that a number of Pittsburghers have established summer residences amid the peaks of Garrett.

And, in conclusion, he wonders what the Baltimore Association of Commerce is doing about this.

Maybe they can persuade Mr. Hyde, who rambled around here several weeks ago, to make a casual study of the county, its people and its products.

ROOSEVELT BUNK MEANS NATIONAL DISASTER

Branding the farm policy of Franklin D. Roosevelt as pure buncombe, Charles W. Burkett, former editor of The American Agriculturist and former director of the Kansas Experiment Station, declared that the Democratic candidate offered nothing to American agriculture. Mr. Burkett said:

"Fifty-six years ago Herbert Hoover, then two years old, was living in a blacksmith's shop. That year the Democratic campaign slogan was: 'Reform is necessary, the wolf is at the door.' History answers this slogan. Hayes was elected President and a period of prosperity began that continued unabated until the election of Cleveland. Soon after this the Wilson competitive tariff bill became a law. Wool was put on the free list, all the farmers' products were placed on a free trade basis and the products of non-agricultural industries were placed on a competitive basis. Cleveland said: 'the tariff is a tax'; but the removal, by a Democratic Congress, of that kind of a tax plunged us into the historic Democratic Slough of Depression of the early 90's. We had country-wide strikes, riots in hundreds of cities, bloodshed in thousands of places, bread lines the country over, the stopping of railroad trains, and the lowest prices for all products and for all kinds of labor this country had known in a century. Even in two years of this world wide depression, our country has experienced nothing compared with the misery and hardships that the American people endured in Cleveland's day. Then, the spectre of depression was not world-wide but confined within our own borders. Fortunately for us came McKinley's election which brought the enactment of a protective tariff. This ushered in a period of prosperity that continued, despite one slight drop in 1908, which was immediately remedied by the enactment of the Payne-Aldrich protective tariff law of 1909, until Wilson's election in 1912. Then another Democratic tariff—this time the Underwood Act—brought its period of depression. In those early Wilson days you couldn't sell wool. All over the land were campaigns to 'buy a bale of cotton,' or 'buy a hundred bushels of wheat,' or some other 'buy' movement to save our agricultural industry. The World War saved us from more Democratic misery and despair. After the War the flood of foreign products began anew. Today, Franklin D. Roosevelt harps back to the same old fallacies of a competitive tariff. He offers, in addition 'international tariffs with reciprocal agreements with our foreign competitors.' He wants foreign peoples to tell us what kind of a tariff law we shall have and how we are to adjust our tariff duties. To that the American people will never agree. They will repudiate it, just as they repudiated his plea of 1920, that we join the League of Nations, when, as a Democratic vice-presidential candidate, he was defeated by 7,000,000 votes."

WHAT ROOSEVELT TARIFF POLICIES MEAN

Franklin D. Roosevelt, in asking the farmers of the United States to vote for him, said that only through his policy of international tariffs and on tariffs on some products, could the farmer hope to obtain better prices. This, the Democratic candidate said, was due to the prices the farmer could receive in foreign markets.

The fact of the matter is that upwards to over 99 percent of all that our farmers raise is consumed right here in our home markets. Furthermore, the prices paid in these markets are much higher than they are in other countries. Look these figures over. These are the market quotations on some leading farm products. On October 10, 1932, wheat was quoted at a top price of 46 cents a bushel in Buenes Aires and was bringing 69½ cents a bushel at New York. Corn was selling at 31½ cents a bushel at Buenes Aires, for 36¾ cents a bushel at Rotterdam, and 41⅝ cents a bushel in New York. Oates were selling at a little over 20 cents a bushel at Buenes Aires and were bringing anywhere from 25½ cents to 31 cents a bushel, according to grade of the product, at New York. Flaxseed was quoted at a top price of 63⅛ cents a bushel at Buenes Aires and was selling at from $1.06 to $1.12 in Duluth and Minneapolis.

Governor Roosevelt, in suggesting that we place agricultural products on the free list so that we can sell in foreign markets, must mean that we should sell our products for less than we are getting right here at home today. If he does not mean this, he must admit that he knows nothing of prices in foreign markets. In either event a vote to support the Roosevelt policy is a vote to destroy the American farmer.

FINE GREETINGS TO TABLELAND

The Pittsburghers who toured the Allegheny Tableland last June under the auspices of the Tableland Council of the Chamber of Commerce in the interest of the trade and cultural relationship between that region and this city brought back the most enthusiastic account of their reception. Everyone of them had a particular story to tell of the hospitality of the Tablelanders and of the remarkable scenery of the mountain region. The mutual business possibilities were stressed on both sides. Later a regional conference, attended by a large delegation of representatives of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, was held at Mountain Lake Park, Maryland.

Last week Pittsburgh was host to the Tablelanders, with the amenities centering in a fair, exhibiting the products of the Tableland, in Gimbels store. The stores, industries and the newspapers of the city cooperated with the Chamber of Commerce in the entertainment of the visitors and in showing what Pittsburgh has to offer the people of the Tableland in trade and in social and cultural opportunities. It is estimated that more than 1,000 representatives of the eight counties of the Tableland area, Somerset and Fayetts, of Pennsylvania, Garrett of Maryland, and Grant, Mineral, Monongalia, Preston and Tucker of West Virginia, came to the city to participate in the three-day program, and that upwards of 25,000 Pittsburghers visited the fair.

The fair itself was a revelation to Pittsburghers both of the variety and high quality of the agricultural and other products of the Tableland. In particular did the displays of potatoes, declared the finest ever seen in this city, attract attention, and attendants were kept busy recording orders for supplies. But the displays of fruit, maple syrup, grains, vegetables and household arts also received due attention.

All the visitors from the Tableland declared themselves deeply impressed by the reception they received in Pittsburgh. They as well as the spokesmen for the Chamber of Commerce emphasized the fact that the relationship between the city and the plateau region has been securely established and that henceforth it is just a matter of developing its full possibilities.—Monday's Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

A musical organization from Accident, which was known as the Accident Cornet band, was in Oakland during the week and played some excellent selections.

A substantial improvement was made on Second street near the Garrett County Bank building by the erection of a new platform and guard-rail over the "branch"—Wilson creek.

Water was being hauled in tank cars from Oakland to Terra Alta to supply the Baltimore and Ohio water station with water for the company's locomotives. It was said that nearly all sources of water supply between Piedmont and Grafton were dry.

Fire destroyed adjoining stables and a lot of hay in the buildings belonging to David Little and John Compton located in the East end of town.

A story copied from the Baltimore Sun stated that efforts were being made to extend the Oakland electric light system to Mountain Lake Park and also talk of establishing an electric car line from Oakland to the Park.

A man driving a four-horse team through Mountain Lake Park stopped at a house which was being built for Miss Sallie Harris and loaded on his wagon six hundred brick which were to have been used in the building. A person in an adjoining house saw the operation but supposed that the brick had been sold. Search for the man was made without success.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Isaac Blocher was killed, his granddaughter Emma Blocher and C. L. Long were severly injured in an automobile accident on Little Savage Mountain in Garrett county.

An eighteen-pound head of cabbage and a turnip which measured 39 in. around and weighed 12 pounds, were raised by Mrs. Noah Warnick in New Germany.

Baltimore and Ohio disbursed in Oakland between $6,000 and $8,000, and a number who celebrated were taken care of by Policeman Nethkin.

A fire of unknown origin in the express room of the B. and O. station, was extinguished with slight damage. The Rest, Miss Nell Turley's boarding house, had been painted and a cement walk laid; Joseph E. Harned was having his residence on Second street raised to the street level and the new dwellings of G. Semmes Hamill and Stuart F. Hamill were nearing completion.

William Crowe, of near Merrill, was found dead in his bed.

A proposition was made by several business men of Oakland to lease Mountain Lake Park property for one year was rejected at a meeting of the Board of Directors, the price stipulated in the proposition being considered too small.

Teacher Training Course To Begin At Grantsville

Miss Kate Bannatyne, supervisor of schools in Garrett county will teach this course. Miss Bannatyne is not only qualified to teach but is interested in the matter of religious education and the necessity for training teachers in the church school as well as teachers for day school work.

Rev. A. C. Bell is the chairman of publicity, George Diefenbach is registrar and treasurer, and Harry Yommer will be book salesman.

DIED.

FRANKLIN PIERCE ARNOLD

Franklin Pierce Arnold, 79 years old, died at his home in Mountain Lake Park on Saturday, October 15, 1932. Funeral services were held from his late residence with Rev. I. S. Middaugh, pastor of the Park M. E. church, officiating, assisted by the Rev. Gregory Bleakly. Interment was made in the Oakland cemetery.

Mr. Arnold had been in failing health for some time and his illness was considered serious by his immediate family and close friends, yet the announcement of his death came as a distinct shock to the people of the community. For 65 years, even before its formation, Mr. Arnold was a resident of Garrett county, coming here with his parents while yet a youth. For nearly fifty years he was a resident of Mountain Lake Park. He was born at Frederick, Md., on March 22, 1853, and was the son of James Arnold, whose death occurred here a great many years ago.

During his long residence in the county Mr. Arnold became widely known and highly respected. He was tax collector for the Community of Mountain Lake Park for many years. He was a member of the Methodist church and the Odd Fellows lodge. By trade he was a plasterer. His passing marks the second of the older residents of the Park to be taken in a few weeks' time.

The deceased is survived by his widow, one son Harrison M. Arnold, and a granddaughter, of Sewickley, Pa., and also by one stepdaughter, Mrs. James G. Jarboe, of Jacksonville, Florida.

Six Hurt In Motor Mishaps On National Highway

Mrs. Frances M. Brown, 60 years old, Pittsburgh, suffered multiple lacerations about the head at 3:30 p. m. Sunday when a car operated by her husband, Harry D. Brown, skidded and upset on the National Highway three miles east of Grantsville. She is a patient at the Miners' Hospital, Frostburg. Her husband and two daughters, Frances A., 19, and Mary J., 18, suffered minor cuts and bruises.

Maynard Rogers, 22, of Frostburg, and Miss Margaret Reiber, 18, Meyersdale, were cut about the head and face at 8 o'clock Sunday night when a car operated by Gerald M. Wilhelm, of Frostburg, crashed into the rear of a truck owned by the Corona Orchard Company of Hancock, on Big Savage Mountain, west of Frostburg. They were attended at Miners' Hospital.

PROBLEMS OF THE MODERN HOME

Joshua 24:14, 15; Mark 10:2-12; Ephesians 6:1-9.

GOLDEN TEXT—And if it seem evil unto you to serve the Lord, choose you this day whom ye will serve; whether the gods which your fathers served that were on the other side of the flood, or the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell: but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord. Joshua 24:15.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Pleasing God in My Home.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Rules to Live By at Home.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—My Home Problems.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Problems of the Modern Home.

I. A United Home to Serve the Lord (Josh. 24:14, 15).

Joshua had succeeded Moses as Israel's leader. He was conscious of his belag taken away soon in death from the people (Josh. 23:1), and of their liability to lapse into idolatry. He reviewed before them the history of God's goodness to them, aad appealed to them for a rational consideration of their responsibility, and the exercise of sober judgment (v. 14). He wnated their choices of God as over against the false gods to be a balanced judgment. He followed this appeal with his own example (v. 15). He told them that his mind was already made up. He associated his household with himself. His decision was not a hasty one. It had been talked over at home, therefore, he uttered the united sentiment of his family.

II. The Father and Mother in the Home (Mark 10:2-12).

God constituted the race male and female. His purpose was that they should be united for life in holy wedlock, with love as the bond of union between them.

1. Marriage should not be degraded by divorce (vv. 2-5). God ordained the marriage relation, and intended it to be indissoluble. God, through Moses, suffered, limited, and regulated divorce, because of the hardness of the hearts of the people.

2. Marriage is God's primal law (vv. 6-8). The ideal law of life for the subjects of Christ's kingdom is marriage. This is proven by the fundamental fact of sex, "God made them male and female" (v. 6).

3. Marriage has God's sanction (v. 9). God declared to Adam that man should leave father and mother and cleave unto his wife.

4. Marriage of the divorcer forbidden (vv. 4-12). The marriage relation should be broken only by death, or by sin. The party responsible for divorce, who marries again, is guilty of adultery.

III. Members of the Household (Eph. 6:1-9).

In the home are found father, mother, children, and sometimes servants. Each member has rights and privileges which must be respected.

1. Children (vv. 1-3).

a. They should obey their parents (v. 1). The ground for this obedience is the fact that the parents stand in the place of God with the children.

b. The children should honor their parents (v. 2). Obedience to parents is limited to the period of immaturity. When children take their place in the establishing of new units in society, they are no longer under obligation to obey their parents. Honor means to have in reverence.

2. Parents (v. 4). Doubtless the word "fathers" is intended to be inclusive of the mothers.

a. Provoke not your children to wrath. Parents should not irritate or aggravate their children.

b. To bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. Nurture doubtless means to educate, and admonition to discipline.

3. Servants and masters (vv. 5-9).

a. Servants are to obey their masters (vv. 5-8). This obedience should be (1) Servants should have proper respect for their masters, and an earnest desire to please them. (2) Servants should perform their tasks as though they were doing them for Christ's sake. (3) The servant's aim should not be merely to please the eyes of the master, but to render honest and acceptable service. (4) With good will. It should aot be primarily for approval or pay. Christian servants will perform their duties to their masters with the same fidelity as they would unto Christ. (5) Rewarded by the Lord (v. 8). The Lord takes account of our service in the common ways of life, and will some day reward us accordingly.

b. Masters to be considerate (v. 9). Just as servants are to give wholehearted consideration for their masters, so masters are to look after the best interests of their servants.

Go With God

God is always ready to go before us. Indeed, we never can go anywhere victoriously unless he does lead us. To go without him into any of life's experience—struggles, dangers, or duties—is to fail.

Reveals Character

Did we get everything we craved for in the hour of asking it. I think it would be a long farewell to manhood. Work reveals character, but so does waiting.—George H. Morrison.

The Valentine Company of Frederick, set up its amiesite plant last week and is now engaged in completing the surfacing of the roadway, starting at Keyser's Ridge and working eastward. This stretch of highway, when completed, will probably be the best constructed and smoothest section along the old road.

Structural steel for the new bridge spanning the Casselman River at Little Crossings has not yet arrived at this place. The contract for laying the floor of the bridge, which will be of concrete, has been awarded to Geo. F. Hazelwood, of Cumberland.

Allegheny Tableland Association

The annual meeting of the Allegheny Tableland Association was held at the Lutheran church social room on Tuesday evening, October 11, when a banquet was served by the Lutheran Missionary Society and which was attended by about one hundred persons.

The various communities of the Tableland were well represented and reports were presented by various officers. The revised constitution was read, discussed and adopted.

The enthusiasm displayed indicates that affairs in the Tableland will go forward in a most satisfactory manner. Mr. J. T. Miller, chairman of the Tableland Council of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce was present and told of Pittsburgh's interest in the Tableland.

The women of the Missionary Society served a delicious banquet and the rooms were beautifully decorated with autumn leaves and flowers. The favors were water color sketches of the old stone bridge at Little Crossings.

At this meeting Grantsville received its recognition as a unit and its representatives took a part in the business meeting.

MT. LAKE PARK

Fire Plugs For The Park

At last, and probably as soon as could be expected under the circumstances, the Town Council has arranged for a test of the water supply of the Park, looking to the installation of fire plugs.

At a meeting last Saturday night the question was thoroughly discussed with a representative of a manufacturer and Chief Kerins of the Oakland Fire Department, with the result that two test plugs will be placed at designated points.

It was the opinion of Chief Kerins and members of Council familiar with the water situation, that by hooking onto the four-inch mains, with the 25,000 tank on Wheeling Avenue as a reserve, the supply will be ample. At least, when installed, a test will be made by the Oakland department.

It is understood that one of the hydrants will be placed near the Tabernacle and the other in the vicinity of the Methodist church. In the event the test proves satisfactory, other hydrants will be placed as the finances of the town will permit.

The Town Council cannot be too highly commended for its action. When we consider that in the history of the Park four lives have been lost and more than $225,000 in property destroyed by fire, which, in all probability could have been saved had fire plugs been installed years ago, it will be readily seen that this action of Council is a forward-looking, although belated, step in the direction of Park improvement. The fire hazard will be greatly reduced with consequent reduction in insurance rates.

In this connection, better take care of the fallen leaves at the proper time. Get acquainted with the ordinance in this matter by communicating with Bailiff Wiley.

We are of the opinion that Darwin Martin, Town Clerk, has made a record. He has collected between 94 and 95 per cent of the 1931 Park taxes. We doubt if that record can be equaled in Garrett county. He does not take all the credit, however, as he says he has had fine cooperation of the taxpayers, for which he thus publicly returns his thanks.

The records of the town for 1931 are in the hands of auditors. As soon as the audit is completed the result will be published. The Council believes it is the right of the people to know what money has been collected and how it has been spent.

Mrs. Cole's Resignation As a Public Health Nurse Regretted

To the Editor of The Republican.

With much regret we learn through the press of Mrs. Samuel Cole's resignation as public health nurse of Garrett county.

We realize the loss of her services will be felt throughout the districts where she endeared herself to those about her in ministering to the sick, bringing comfort to the needy and in training and graduating over a hundred of our county women in home nygiene and care of the sick—a course she taught during the past months.

Mrs. Cole was sent by the State Department of Health in 1927 to Garrett county. She established a health center at Kitzmiller and with the assistance of the people of the community conducted pre-school, infants', eye and dental and tuberculosis clinics, each year holding a "health day" celebration, which was visited by many physicians from sections of the State, among them being Drs. Rlley, Knox, Leonard, Sharretts and Franklin, of Baltimore and Cumberland.

She also conducted examinations of the children in small communities and did it satisfactorily.

At one time when children's eyes were being examined by Mrs. Cole and little or no money was forthcoming to supply needed glasses for them a generous friend came to her help and supplied sufficient funds for fifty pairs of glasses. Over two hundred were treated by dentists.

Mrs. Cole has been and is still busy assisting in the many cases of typhoid fever at Vindex and I am informed will have charge of the Red Cross work.

A FRIEND.

Historic Nut Trees To Be Planted For 1932 Babies

In furtherance of the tree planting program in honor of 1932 babies of Garrett county and the Bicentennial celebration, nuts from historic nut trees will be presented to the parents of those babies, through the Oakland Civic club, to be planted in their honor. Along with the historic nuts will be a spoonful of historic soil over which Washington has trod, and a nut planting certificate in the baby's name.

The Civic club urged several weeks ago that trees be planted in honor of the 1932 babies, but this additional offer is being made by the club in order to lend a little more historic significance to the occasion.

The nuts have been gathered from walnut, hickory and other nut trees, on George Washington's former estates and historic spots, and are all of this year's crop, according to Miss Lottie Loar, club president.

The soil which will be presented with each nut to be planted comes from the following places: Wakefield, Va., Washington's birthplace and early childhood home; from around the famous cherry tree and his surveyor's office on Ferry Farm, near his boyhod home, near Fredericksburg; from the garden of his mother's town house in Fredericksburg where her son bade her farewell before being made first president; from Cambridge Common, Mass., where, as new commander-in-chief, he took command of the first American Army, July 3, 1775; from the grounds of Independence square, Phila.; from the State House grounds, Annapolis, where in 1783 Washington resigned as Commander; from Mount Vernon, home and final resting place of George and Martha Washington.

These historic nuts, the historic soil, and the nut planting certificate will be furnished through the Civic club to any parents of 1932 babies who request them, and providing there are any left, they will be given out to others who desire them.

MOTORISTS SLOW TO GET SAFETY STICKERS ON CAR

Only 500 Have Been Inspected Since Beginning of Campaign

State motorists are slow in having their automobiles taken to the inspection stations in the "Save-a-Life Campaign" which began in Maryland on October 15, according to a check-up both in Oakland and at the office of the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, Baltimore.

The majority of the cars already inspected by Oakland stations, however, are in good shape, it was stated by the garage men, having mostly minor defects. "If motorists continue to delay having their automobiles inspected," the commissioner of motor vehicles said, "it will be necessary to order the State police to take all cars not displaying a sticker of approval to the nearest official inspection station for an examination."

To date 332,140 motor vehicles are registered in Maryland and about 500 have had their cars approved. This will mean a last minute rush to comply with the law which will inconvenience both motorists and garagemen whose places of business have been designated as official stations. The campaign ends November 30th.

Fire Department Committee and Basketball Team Holds Meeting

The color of the uniforms to be worn by the basketball team representing the Oakland Fire department this year was decided upon at a meeting of a joint committee on Tuesday evening. The jerseys are to be gold with a blue monogram, and the pants will be a dark blue. The monogram was designed by Ralph Thayer, with a large "O" and inside the letters F. V. D. the V (for volunteer) being larger than the letters F and D, (fire department).

It was decided to try and get the Lonaconing fire department team here on Thanksgiving night for the opening game. John I. Collins, former referee here, has promised to be in charge of the opening game.

Emroy Bolden was elected coach at the meeting Tuesday night, Edwin Elias, business manager; Grover C. Stemple, treasurer, and George H. Hanst, secretary. Uniforms will be ordered immediately and practice sessions will begin early in November, when any aspirant may try out for the team. Those present Tuesday evening included Percy Frantz, Emroy Bolden, Grover Stemple, Alva Gortner, Ralph Thayer, of the fire department; and Henry W. GOLDSBOROUGH SPEAKS AT MEETING OF REPUBLICANS

Tariff Question Discussed Freely by Republican Candidates Williams and Smith

OVER 600 ATTEND RALLY

United States Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough Monday night in the Maryland theatre, Oakland, told a Republican rally the protective tariff was for the purpose of protecting the farm industry the same as that afforded other industries and for bringing the standard of living of the farm people to a higher plane.

Goldsborough's speech was the first of a state-wide campaign tour he has planned for the remaining two weeks before election, in behalf of the Republican National and state candidates. The party leaders estimated 600 attended the gathering.

Citing a number of bills proposed by President Hoover as being devoted to the farmer, Senator Goldsborough criticized the Democratic opponents for "attempting to cover" the facts of farm relief, asserting the Democrats were dealing only in generalities.

"Are we to believe that those who talk only of the woes of the country without offering a constructive measure are competent to run this government of ours?" he asked. "Only once every four years has the Democratic party become interested in the farmer."

He branded the reforestation program suggested by Governor Roosevelt as an absolute absurdity. At the same time in Atlanta, Ga., Roosevelt, the Democratic nominee, was expanding his program of reforestation.

Goldsborough stated that it was not enough to elect President Hoover but also elect Republican senators and representatives so that legislation favorable to farmer and return of prosperity as proposed by the president, can be passed.

"We want a constructive man like Hoover kept in the White House, and not a showman like Roosevelt," he declared. Senator Goldsborough compared the president with Washington and Lincoln, showing whereas Washington was the founder of the country, and Lincoln the preserver, so Herbert Hoover was the builder of the country.

Wallace Williams, Republican candidate for the United States Senate, and Harold C. Smith, of Rockville, candidate for Congress from the Western Maryland district, also spoke that the tariff as supported by the Republican party has saved that which the American people still have.

Smith cited the stand of the Democrats on an economic program and pointed out the deficit in New York state and the bill introduced in Congress by John N. Garner, the Democratic vice-president nominee for an expenditure of $2,000,000,000 for construction of postoffices, many of which were to be erected in Texas, his home state.

State Senator H. W. McComas, of Garrett county, presided. On the platform besides the speakers were E. R. Jones and Neil C. Fraley, state central committeemen. and Glenn Beall, of Allegany county.

The meeting closed a day's tour which included stops at McHenry, Friendsville, Grantsville, Bittinger, Deer Park, Kitzmiller and Accident.

Hon. Wallace Williams and Hon. Howard C. Smith were the speakers. Other meetings were held at Sang Run on Tuesday evening, and Avilton on Wednesday evening. Tonight the county leaders will hold a meeting at Swanton, Friday at Ryan's Glade, and Saturday at Jennings.

Further meetings will be conducted next week.

Republican mass meetings will be held at the following points on the dates named, at 7:30 o'clock p. m., beginning tomorrow:

Friday, October 28, Ryan's Glade Grange Hall; Saturday, October 29, Jennings school house; Monday, October 31, Finzel school house; Tuesday, November 1, Bittinger; Wednesday, November 2, Fearer, Bray School House; Thursday, November 3, Kempton, Grantsville; Saturday, November 5, Crellin; Monday, November 7, Accident.

Mrs. J. E. Ross, of Cairo, West Va., is visiting relatives in and about Oakland and the community of Gortner and Aurora.

THE CHRISTIAN AND LAW OBSERVANCE

(World's Temperance Sunday)

Romans 13:1-7; I Corinthians 9:19-27; Galatians 6:1-10; I Peter 2:11-17.

GOLDEN TEXT—Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. Galatians 6:7.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Laws for Me to Keep.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Why We Have Laws.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Observing the Law for the Sake of Others.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Church and Law Observance.

I. The Christian Obligation to the State (Romans 13:1-7).

The believer is a citizen as well as a Christian. The instructed Christian will be loyal to the state as well as to the church.

1. Obedience to rulers (v. 1-4). This obligation is upon all Christians. The civil government is ordained of God and rulers are his representatives.

2. The spirit in which the Christian renders obedience to rulers (v. 5). He should regard it as his obligation, not only because it serves a good purpose but because it is morally right.

3. Method of expressing this obedience (vv. 6, 7).

a. In payment of taxes. The citizen who enjoys its benefits is morally bound to support the government.

b. Payment of duty upon merchandise, and license fees. The business exchange between nations must be regulated, and for this the citizen should pay.

c. Veneration to magistrates, "fear to whom fear." Those who have the fear of God in their hearts will venerate their rulers and representatives.

d. "Honor to whom honor" is due. Civil officers should be honored because of the ministry they perform.

II. The Christian's Self-Control (I Cor. 9:19-27).

The true way to get people to be free from intemperance is to help them gain self-control.

1. Paul's own life and example (vv. 19-23). Though free from all men, he made himself servant unto all.

2. The Isthmian games (vv. 24-27). Paul uses these popular games to illustrate the need of self-control.

a. Life is a race (vv. 24-25). In order to win a prize there must he self-denial and definite exertion. The Christian obtains life by contact with Jesus Christ through faith (John 3:16; 3:36; 5:24). This he must possess before he can begin the race.

b. It is a fight (vv. 26, 27). The Christian has a real antagonist—his carnal nature.

III. The Christian Life and Walk in the Spirit (Gal. 6:1-10).

Those who are freely justified in Christ will live and walk as follows:

1. Restore the sinning brother (v. 1). "Restore" is a surgical term which means the placing back of a dislocated member to its place. We are members of the body of Christ and the sinning of a brother ought as really to give us pain as the dislocation of a member of our body.

2. Bear one another's burdens.

3. Bear our own burdens (v. 5).

4. Support teachers of God's Word (vv. 6-8). It is incumbent upon those who are taught in the Word of God to give of their means for the support of the teacher (I Cor. 9:14).

5. Be not weary in well doing (v. 9). Some fail of the reward because they quit even when the goal is near.

6. Work for the good of all men.

IV. The Christian's Behavior as a Sojourner and Citizen (I Peter 2:11-17).

1. As a sojourner or pilgrim (vv. 11, 12). Christians are pilgrims on the earth. They are journeying to their eternal home in the heavens. Such citizenship demands

a. That they abstain from fleshly lusts (v. 11).

b. Behave so as to glorify God before the world (v. 12). The word "conversation" means behavior.

2. Behavior as citizens (vv. 13-17). He has a responsibility as a citizen on the earth. As such he should

a. Obey all requirements of civil rulers (v. 13). His duties as a citizen he performs as the Lord's free man, not through servile fear.

b. Honor all men (v. 17). We should see in every man the image of God, and in that sense give honor to him.

c. Love the brotherhood (v. 17). The brotherhood is composed of those who are children of God by faith in Jesus Christ.

d. Fear God (v. 17).

e. Honor the King (v. 17). This has a peculiar significance because in all probability the wicked Nero was then reigning as emperor.

GEMS OF THOUGHT

Many a man lives as though he thought God was afar off.

You may understand love, but you cannot overestimate it.

For the faithful man the way to heaven is right straight ahead.

When Faith goes fishing it takes a frying pan. Doubt carries a box of sardines.

IT'S AN ELEPHANT'S JOB -

NO TIME FOR 'DONKEY-BUSINESS'!

He Made Good on His Promises

Four years ago Herbert Hoover promised to work for agricultural relief and provide a farm cooperative marketing organization that would enable the farmers to market their own production.

That promise was kept and today there are thousands of farm cooperatives functioning successfully, and from which the farmer is profiting and will continue to profit much more in the future.

He promised tariff protection for farm products and kept that promise and the farmer is receiving from eight to eighteen cents a bushel more for wheat of the same grade than are the neighboring farmers across the Canadian border. That applies also to corn, to live stock and other farm products. While American prices are too low they are higher than the prices on the same products in any other exporting country.

He promised protection for American industry and American wage-earners, and he kept that promise when he secured the passage of reasonable tariff schedules that are not exorbitant but prevent the dumping of merchandise made by cheap labor in impoverished European countries.

He promised reduction in the general operating costs of government. While extraordinary conditions have called for extraordinary expenditures to meet them, the regular operating costs have been reduced by half a billion dollars a year. He did that despite the continued opposition of a Democratic House of Representatives led by Democratic Vice-Presidential Candidate Garner.

He has continuously requested the Congress for authority to work out a reorganization of governmental departments, the elimination of those not essential to the welfare of the people, or that duplicate the work of other departments. A Democratic House of Representatives, led by Democratic Vice-Presidential Candidate Garner, has persistently refused such authority.

President Hoover has kept every promise he made the American people when he received their votes four years ago, and—

In addition to keeping his promises he has supplied a superb leadership for the nation during the most serious finacial and industrial depression since the close of the Civil war; has met the situation squarely; has planned boldly but wisely for national recovery, and has set us again on a safe road to better conditions.

Knowing the re-election of Herbert Hoover means better prices for farm products, more jobs for the unemployed, less cost of government, quicker financial and industrial recovery, we urge the people of this community to cast their votes for a proven leader—

PRESIDENT HERBERT HOOVER

OPEN LETTER WRITTEN TO STATE'S BOYS AND GIRLS

Health Alphabet of 40 Years Ago Accompanies Note

In an open letter to girls and boys throughout Maryland, Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health says:

"All of you who have daily health drills will be interested, I am sure, in seeing the accompanying copy of a 'Health Alphabet' that was published in the annual report of the State Board of Health, over forty years ago. You will miss some of the rules that we regard as necessary today, especially those that call for some play out of doors every day; eating the right sort of food; plenty of sleep with the windows open; the generous use of water, inside and out—and in that connection, I always want to add, 'Don't forget to wash your hands or to brush your teeth.' Here is the 'alphabet':

"'As soon as you are up, shake
Better do without shoes, than sit with wet feet;
Children, if healthy, are active, not still;
Damp beds and damp clothes will both make you ill.

"'Eat slowly, and always chew your food well;
Freshen the air in the house where you dwell;
Garments must never be made to be tight;
Homes will be healthy if airy and light;

"'If you wish to be well, as you do,
Just open the windows before you go out;
Keep your rooms always tidy and clean,
Let dust on the furniture never be seen.

"'Much illness is caused by the want of pure air,
Now to open your windows be ever your care.
Old rags and old rubbish should never be kept;
People should see that their floors are well swept.

"'Quick movements in children are healthy and right;
Remember the young cannot thrive without light.
See that the cistern is clean to the brim;
Take care that your dress is all tidy and trim.

"'Use your nose to find out if there be a bad drain,
Very sad are the fevers that come in its train.
Walk as much as you can without feeling fatigue;
Xerxes could walk for full many a league.

"'Your health is your wealth, which your wisdom must keep, Zeal will help a good cause, and the good you will reap.'"

"Because of changes that have been brought about in the protection of our water supplies, there are fewer bad drains and fewer fevers that come in their train. The rest of the rules are as worth while as they were nearly a half century ago."

JUST A DEMAGOGUE

Franklin D. Roosevelt, judging from his so-called farm speeches, has well earned the designation as a "demagogue" that has been used to characterize him by former Governor Alfred E. Smith.

Candidate Roosevelt has not hesitated to use the name he bears to mislead people into believing that he is very closely related to the late Theodore Roosevelt. He has, by the use of "weasel words," sought to convey the idea that he is a Republican who has turned Democrat. Neither of these poses of Candidate Roosevelt is based on fact. He is a fifth cousin of the late Col. Roosevelt. He has never been a Republican. He is an internationalist, a staunch advocate of the League of Nations, when a Democratic candidate for vice-president, and a free trader. In other words, he is the direct opposite to the late Theodore Roosevelt.

Candidate Roosevelt, while always talking about what he has done to aid the farmers of New York, has neglected to take into account the fact that he has done nothing whatever to help them. He claims credit for the Commission Merchant's Bonding Act for which he did nothing to help advance. He refused to accept the suggestion that the State tax of $13,500,000, that is largely borne by farmers, be removed. However, he countered with a proposal to reduce income taxes, which largely helped the wealthy. He vetoed a bill, passed to relieve taxpayers in rural districts of the burden of paying for the right of way for the rebuilding of State highways. With the dairymen of the State of New York in dire distress, he refused to do anything. He did not suggest any move that might assist them in solving their problems.

Up to the present time Candidate Roosevelt's sole suggestion to help American farmers has been a plan for reforestation. He says this policy would not only turn much waste land into productive use, but that it would give employment to a million men. Those who know about reforestation report a million men working one day could plant a billion trees. This is more than five times as many trees as there are in all the nurseries, public or privately owned, of the United States.

As if these suggestions were not enough to brand Candidate Roosevelt with the name "demagogue," he completed the picture by telling the farmers of the nation that he lived on a farm at Hyde Park, New York. This imaginary farm actually consists of a mansion of 25 rooms, a stable of eight riding horses, an eight car garage, modern and elaborate flower gardens and a cultivated woodland. No farm crops are raised for any market on this vast estate.

Certainly, in view of the record, no one can place the slightest faith in Candidate Roosevelt's promises to American farmers or anyone else.

IN 1896 AND 1932

Depression was extensively capitalized in the campaign of 1896, but not by the Republicans. It was taken over by William J. Bryan, who espoused the free coinage of silver as the paramount issue and offered it as the cure for the hard times. The issue of free silver smashed party lines. There were silver Republicans and gold Democrats. The gold Democrats had a ticket of their own. The silver Republicans went along with Bryan. So uncompromising were the sound money Democrats that in the convention that nominated Bryan, 162 delegates refused to vote, because of the platform declaration on money, and they sat unrecorded through the five ballots necessary to nominate.

Bryan, through his impassioned appeals to the unemployed, to all who had suffered from business reverses, and his specious arguments in favor of bimetallism, gave the sober-thinking people of the country one of the greatest scares of our history. For weeks before election it was predicted that he would sweep the country with the exception of a negligible number of Eastern States. He did make a formidable showing, receiving 176 electoral votes to McKinley's 271, and he carried 22 of the 45 states.

It was the scare of 1896, together with remembrances of financial chaos following the Civil War, that brought about the prevailing custom in this country of writing long-term obligations payable in gold. In most countries such obligations are payable in currency.

A repetition of that scare would be disastrous to business. Its fulfillment would mean a run on banks that would produce a Nation-wide panic.

Nobody is advocating that this country go off gold. Few advocated such a deliberate policy in the European countries that went through the terrific distress of inflation after the war. The danger is more insidious.

It comes from proposals, such as went through the last Democratic House, to print paper money to meet hugh obligations like the bonus, or to pay for extravagant expenditures on public works.

The dollar became suspect in Europe last spring when the Democratic House began running wild. Europe had seen the outcome of such recklessness too often in its own experience in the last decade.

The country is assured now President Hoover would meet such emergencies not merely by his words, but by the way he has successfully met them in the past. It can not know how Gov. Roosevelt would stand up under such a strain; and it does know the dangerous record of his party in Congress.

The question put up to the voters in the election is whether they can afford to take the risk of a change from certainty to uncertainty in so vital a matter at this time.

POINTS IN THE CAMPAIGN

On points the Republicans have the best of it so far in the national political campaign. President Hoover stands for certain concrete things in governmental policies, while his opponents has failed to make a positive statement upon any national issue, except prohibition.

President Hoover's few addresses have been far meatier than Roosevelt's many. President Hoover's accomplishments in office are far more important comparatively, than the accomplishments of Governor Roosevelt in office.

President Hoover's conception of the practicabilities of the job are away beyond those of Roosevelt's. The president's deliberate effort to avoid anything like false promises, or vote catching phrases must strike those people informed on the subject of world depression as being more full of promise than Roosevelt's generalities.

Former President Coolidge has spoken more ably than any spokesman for Roosevelt. Secretary of the Treasury Mills has given his audience a truer picture of affairs than has emanated from the Democratic camp.

The President has stood by his guns, has taken responsibility for his errors and has presented himself to the people for what he is. Roosevelt, the man who in three years ran up New York State's expenses $100,000,000, has tried to spread the implication that he is fitted to effect economics in government.

Hoover has refused to compromise himself or his principles by tacitly allying himself with contradictory elements. Roosevelt has actively sought the support of two such antipodal classes as those represented by Al Smith and William McAdoo.

Of the two, Hoover has been by far the most consistent and the most solid. Roosevelt has tried being all things to all people.

And Hoover, despite the fact that many may not agree with his position on various questions, has at least taken a position, and that, after all, puts him ahead and shoulders above his opponent, who has taken none.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

Michael Maroney, Quality Hill liveryman, has sold a large number of horses, carriages and harness for the purpose of reducing stock during the winter.

At a Republican meeting in Selbysport the tariff and wild cat banking business were discussed. Jonas Frazee was elected president of the organization there and Edward Stuck secretary.

The addition to Mt. Lake hotel, of forty-seven rooms, is progressing, which will double the capacity.

Typhoid fever is prevailing in Deer Park. Physicians attribute it to dry weather and low condition of the waters.

David Welling has built a residence for himself near "The Rest," on Quality Hill.

Ninety-six were in attendance at the Teachers Institute. Psychology was introduced by Prof. A. S. Teats and discussed by Profs. Sanner and Browning. Among those to attend were N. R. Selby, Mamie Weber, C. A. Ashby, J. S. Gnagey, Martha E. Hinebaugh, H. V. Leighton, Mollie Hamill, J. L. Englehart, Henry Kahl, and others.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

C. H. Bill, Grantsville, who had charge of the shoe department of Miller and Collins' store, Meyersdale, during the absence of Mr. Collins, returned to his home.

A little son was left at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Gonder.

Admission to the play, "Graustark," were 25 and 35 cents in the afternoon with children 15 cents; and at night, 35, 50, 75 and $1, with children 25 cents.

Daniel Smouse, the enterprising grocer, furnished the score by innings of the baseball series between Boston and New York. Quite a crowd congregated around his bulletin board every afternoon.

The Standard Oil company is erecting oil and gasoline tanks at the Bradley crossroads.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Garrett, Deer Park, sailed for their native country, Old Ireland, for a visit of three months.

At Oakland High school Taft and Wilson clubs were active in obtaining political literature and mailing it throughout the county.

At a meeting of the literary society of the High school Fred Peddicord was asked to give his opinion of high school girls. He said that he could not find words with which to express his opinion.

Revival In Progress

A revival has been in progress at the Sand Flat tabernacle for the past two weeks. The meetings have been well attended, with Evangelist J. R. Ashcroft, recently ordained minister of the Assemblies, in charge. Gaddiel Benson, of Philadelphia, is the coworker. The tabernacle was well filled last Sunday evening when the evangelist spoke on eternal damnation. The young men are also musicians and they are planning special programs for the coming meetings.

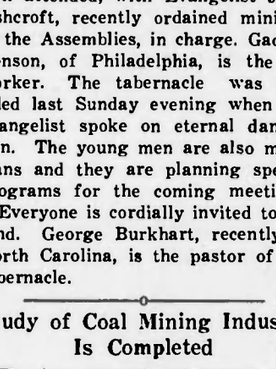
Everyone is cordially invited to attend. George Burkhart, recently of North Carolina, is the pastor of the tabernacle.

Study of Coal Mining Industry Is Completed

The first comprehensive study ever made of the coal mining industry of Maryland has just been completed and presented in publshed form by the Maryland Development Section of the Baltimore Association of Commerce. The survey report contains over 275 pages of data on coal mining in Maryland and is copiously illustrated by charts and graphs, showing significant trends and developments in the industry.

For the year 1929, the survey reveals that Maryland's entire semi-bituminous coal production of 2,648,980 tons was approximately one-half million tons less than the total consumption of this class of coal in the State. In other words Maryland, in 1929, consumed 3,237,744 tons of semi-bituminous coal, or 588,764 tons more than was actually mined in the State in that year.

SCOOP'S COLUMN



By Scoop Himself

The odor of burning leaves pervades the air
Its fragrance hits the nostrils everywhere
The cold wind blows
And so does our nose
For we must remember
It's almost November.
And—
Says Ikey Sincell, our chief mourner,
Winter's just around the corner.

But what do we care? Garrett county's the place. Skating, skiing, hunting, freezing, bowling, basketball, home and a fireplace.

If you don't believe the last, just run out the State road and look at them working on it.

If you ever see me wearing a speckled shirt from now on, don't blame me entirely. But it all started this way. The old Ford needed greasing before a trip could be taken, and it being Sunday morning I had on my church pants and a clean shirt. Kirk Cosner went to work on it, but it seemed that somebody had neglected the operation for so long that several places were stuck. This necessitated a pressure grease gun, acetylene torch, and of course I wanted to see it all, and from a grandstand seat.

Grandstand seats are all right sometimes, but not when a grease gun lets go. Two more degrees south by southeast and it would have caught me square in the eye. As it was I am now contemplating wearing a new style shirt, called in the latest catalogue, "The Speckled Beauty."

It's perfectly all right to get a sack of Red Cross flour if the larder is low, with no work in sight, and a family that is hungry, but sending in ones kids and gathering up seven sacks or more when the family is not destitute, is using up a lot of crust, believe me. That was done at Oakland Saturday. There ought to be a law against people who take advantage of charity and the sympathy of other people.

Archibaldson is now a politician. He made his first political speech on Tuesday night at Sang Run. I can now point him out to strangers with pride. It isn't often one has such a celebrated brother-in-law. He stated confidentially that he didn't have to kiss any babies.

It would be just too bad about 9 or 10 years from now, if they would nickname babies of town, who had trees planted in their honor, "historic nuts."

Here it is Thursday, and not an idea for the Hallowe'en parade on Monday night. And for that matter, not an idea with which finish this column; which may seem funny to you but not to me. I'm always short of ideas, it seems.

Give Al Smith and Roosevelt the chance to make several more speeches and it will be another landslide for the Republicans. They seem to have a knack of saying the wrong thing at the right time.

Presidential Gardener

The President's garden goes back to the days when John Quincy Adams of Massachusetts lived at the White House, says an article in a Boston paper. It was said that President Adams had the tastes of an English squire. In his diary he mentions that he delighted to work in the garden in the dew of the morning.

"In this small garden," he wrote, "of not less than two acres there are forest and fruit trees, shrubs, hedges, esculents, vegetables, kitchen and medicinal herbs, hot-house plants, flowers and weeds to the amount I conjecture of at least 1,000. Ouseley, the gardener, knows them all by their botanical names."

Old Jewish Burial Customs

The ancient Jews of Palestine buried their dead by placing the corpse either in the earth or in caves hewn out of the rock. Sometimes the sepulcher was dug in the ground in the neighborhood of the family dwelling. More frequently, however, rocks were excavated so as to form compartments or galleries with as many vaults as desired. These vaults were known as "koklm." The burial place was often in a garden situated at least 50 cubits distant from the city. The site was usually marked by a whitewashed stone.

Ancient Water Organ

One of the strangest musical instruments, and which, by the way, plays an important part in the history of music, is the ancient water organ or hydraulic. The water organ was the musical instrument of ancient Alexandria and Rome. One of these old organs was discovered in making excavations for a new electric plant in the suburbs of Budapest, Hungary. Despite the fact that it had been buried for centuries it was in a good state of preservation.

Beautiful Old Cathedral

The cathedral at Rouen, France, which is of the Thirteenth century period, is one of the most impressive in existence. It once possessed the heart of Richard Coeur de Lion, which is now in a museum. It is 447 feet long, the nave is 92 feet high, and a tower, built to replace an old one struck by lightning, is of iron, 500 feet high. The front varies from Romanesque to the Flamboyant. The fine rose windows and the sculpture about the rich gabled portals are noteworthy.

Mankind Yet May Find Use for Desert Wastes

Whoever finds a cheap way to separate water and salt will change the face of the world. Deserts, according to the late Prof. Percival Lowell, are the beginning of the end of life upon the earth, and they are widening. Lower California and the west coast of Mexico, Central and South America down to Cape Horn are arid most of the year. Australia is ringed around with water and vast stretches of barren beaches. The Sahara and Arabia are bone-dry all year. Yet here are the seas, covering more than three-fourths of the earth, used by us merely to sail on and fish in.

In every 100 pounds of sea water there are only three and one-half pounds of salty materials, three-fourths of the salts being sodium chloride, or common salt. If we knew how to separate the salt and water economically, we could drive back the deserts from every shore.

Nature knows one way; she evaporates the water, leaving the salt behind, then condenses the vapor into rain. On ships at sea, man makes use of the same process, but this evaporation process is too expensive for use ashore. Unless willing to let nature take its course, multiplying man will in time have to tackle the water problem in a new way.—Los Angeles Times.

Warning About Neglect Credited to Franklin

The authorship of the old saying about "for want of a nail a kingdom was lost," is attributed to Benjamin Franklin. In the preface of his "Poor Richard's Almanack for 1758," Richard Saunders, the name Franklin assumed in the writing, quotes a man named Father Abraham as saying: "And again, he Richard adviseth to circumspection and care, even in the smallest matters, because sometimes a little neglect may breed great mischief, adding, for want of a nail, the shoe was lost; for want of a shoe the horse was lost; and for want of a horse the rider was lost, being overtaken and slain by the enemy, all for want of care about a horseshoe nail." No historical incident of this nature is known, and it is believed that Franklin invented the story. In old school readers, Franklin's precept is given as follows: "For the want of a nail the shoe was lost; for the want of a shoe the horse was lost; for the want of a horse the rider was lost; for the want of a rider the battle was lost; for the want of a battle the kingdom was lost—and all for the want of a horseshoe nail."

Mankind's Average Height

It is estimated by the United States public health service that the average height of a man in this country is about 5 feet 8 inches and the average height of a woman about 5 feet 4 inches. Whitaker's almanac gives the average heights of natives of the British isles as follows: Scotsmen, 5 feet 8¾ inches; Irishmen, 5 feet 8 inches; Englishmen, 5 feet 7¼ inches; Welshmen, 5 feet 6½ inches. Books dealing with anthropology, such as that by E. B. Tylor in the Popular Science library, give average heights of other races. Thus 5 feet 4 inches is given for the Chinese laborer, 5 feet 7 inches for the Swede, 5 feet for the Lapp, 5 feet 11 inches for the Patagonia of South America, 4 feet 6 inches for the Bushmen and other South African tribes.

Longevity of Elephants

No accurate information is obtainable as to the extreme age an elephant reaches in the wild state. Nor is there any positive evidence available that one ever lived to be more than seventy-five years old either in captivity or the wild state, although it is supposed that one may occasionally live to be ninety-five or one hundred years old. The director of the New York Zoological part states that the extreme life span of animals may be estimated with a fair degree of accuracy by multiplying by four or five the number of years which the young of the species requires to reach maturity. Elephants reach maturity at about twenty-five and begin to get old at sixty or sixty-five.

Knew His Host

He was well known to his friends for his weakness for extravagant living and a distinct aversion to paying anybody when he could possibly avoid it; and the other day, having taken and furnished a somewhat sumptuous flat, he invited some of his friends to dinner.

"Don't you think," he asked, proudly, as he was showing them round the place, "that it's rather nicely furnished? Don't you consider I deserve great credit for it?"

"You do," remarked one of the party, dryly, "and I should imagine you've got it, too."

Americans Use Most Power

Some years ago a farm power survey showed that each farm worker in the United States produced more than six times as much farm products as the average Italian farm worker, and used 2.05 horse power as compared to 19 horse power for the Italian worker. Now the average Nebraska farmer with more than 5 horse power available is able to produce 18 times as much as the average Italian. This difference in productive capacity accounts largely for the difference in their scale of living.—Wisconsin Agriculturist.

THE MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY'S CORNER

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

As early as the second century of the Christian era we find the phraseology "Old" and "New Testament" employed to designate the Jewish and the Christian revelations. Its application to the books of the Old and the New Covenant was first clearly seen by Melito, Bishop of Sardis, in the last half of the seeond century. Melito, at least, heeded the admonition of the Spirit to "be watchful and strengthen the things which remain."

The word canon as applied to the sacred writings of the Old and the New Testaments did not come into use until near the middle of the fourth century. The principal definition of this Greek work "kanon," given by Liddell and Scott, are the following: 1—A straight rod or bar; 2—A rule or line used by carpenters or masons. Metaphorically: 1—A rule in a moral sense. In the Alexandrian Grammarians collections of the old Greek authors were called Kanones, as models of excellence; classics. The church adopted this term in its anglocised form, canon, to indicate the scriptures accepted and received as the rule of faith and practice for all believers in divine revelation.

Melito prepared the first known catalogue of the books of the Old Testament. In a letter to Onesimus the good Bishop of Sardis declares that he had made diligent inquiry to learn accurately the number and the order of the ancient books. He traveled in the East as far as the place where the various events recorded in the Scriptures took place, and where the messages of the prophets and of Jesus were delivered, and having ascertained what books were commonly accepted by the ancient church as canonical, sent a list of them to Onesimus. The list was as follows: Five Books of Moses—Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy; Joshua, Nave, Judges, Ruth; Four Books of Kings, Two Books of Chronicles, Psalms of David, Proverbs of Solomon (which is also called wisdom), Ecclesiastes, Song of Songs, Job; of the prophets, Isaiah, Jeremiah; of the Twelve Prophets in one Book—Daniel, Ezekiel, Ezra. We miss in this catalogue the Book of Esther. In Ezra, Nehemiah is no doubt included, as Jerome informs us that these two books were included in one volume, which is called Ezra.

The Onesimus to whom Melito wrote was doubtless the slave of Philemon, whom Paul converted to Christianity, and who was commended to Philemon with the urgent request that he be received not as a runaway slave, or servant, but as a brother beloved. Paul goes so far in urging clemency on the part of Philemon that he stands ready to assume any debts incurred by Onesimus, saying: "If he hath wronged thee, or oweth thee ought, put that to mine account."

The several catalogues of Origin, in the first half of the third century, Gregory Nazianzen, about 390 A. D., and Jerome, who is considered the greatest Hebrew scholar among the Fathers of the early church, includes the 39 books now universally accepted as canonical.

An Appeal To Maryland Women Voters, and More Especially To The Women of Garrett County.

To the Women of Garrett County:

I appeal to you as one who has come to realize the importance attached to the great issues at stake in this campaign. Due to the economic distress our country has gone through, more or less of our people have become embittered and wish to blame some one for their trouble and suffering. How natural to blame President Hoover and the Republican administration, especially since our Democratic opponents never miss an opportunity to capitalize on this situation by all kinds of misrepresentations and false accusations and by the use of such propaganda as will excite radicalism, foster discontent and embitter our people until they lose all sense of their proper attitude towards our great issues, which is of such vast import and magnitude as has never before confronted us in the history of our great nation.

Let us look into this important matter before us and see if President Hoover is to blame for all our distress and suffering.

In 1916 William Gibbs McAdoo, Secretary of the U. S. Treasury under President Woodrow Wilson, loaned to foreign countries over $10,000,000,000 of our money without any security, not even a paper to show they got it. Mr. Wilson set a precedent in America by twice leaving the country to take care of itself, going abroad to chase after some of his dreams and ideals. The result of this was the League of Nations, which he was never able to force on the American people, altho he had spent millions of dollars.

Coupled with this, then, was the excitement of the vast loan from Mr. McAdoo. Privat ecitizens, encouraged by the administration, begun to loan vast amounts to foreign countries also, with the result of great loss to this country. At the expiration of Mr. Wilson's term of office the almost fabulous wealth of America had dwindled to a great extent and this was the primary cause and start of our depression. But this did not save foreign countries and one after the other collapsed and went off the gold standard. Their moneytary system was wrecked, unemployment became of vast proportions. In America the aftermath and backwash, which has followed every destructive war in history with its devastating effects began to be felt, and we too were on the downward trend. By the time President Hoover was inaugurated this country was in a bad state of affairs and I can readily see why when the job of engineering our ship of state was again offered to President Coolidge it brought forth this reply: "I do not choose to run."

President Hoover was not a little astonished and dismayed at the state of affairs he had inherited, but facing an almost superhuman task, he took steps to cushion the shocks of the Wall street debacle, to prevent drop, which would plunge the country into the abyss. Without dramatics he met each onslaught as they came and voluntarily and determinedly assumed a leadership which has made him the one outstanding figure, not alone in our country, but in the world.

Some of the far-reaching and more perplexing problems taken in sequence or occurrence, are:

1 World-wide business depression sweeping to American shores;

2. The most serious stock market collapse in history;

3. Social revolutions and disorders in eighteen countries;

4. Going off the gold standard by Great Britain and more than a score of other countries;

5. Unparalleled depression in agriculture;

6. The most violent, prolonged, extensive process of deflation in our industrial and economic history;

7. The most extensive unemployment in history.

The forces which caused this upheaval were beyond the control of any man or set of men to stay. The President has assumed each additional burden, waging a tremendous contest against adversity, formulating and promulgating an extraordinary series of plans that have lightened the burden of the people on one shock after another came to the nation. Although the pressure upon his time and energies has been terrific day and night, he has been everlastingly at the job, seeking solutions of problems far-reaching in consequence. An official lacking his power of mind, his tenacity of purpose and his superb physical endurance might well have broken under the tremendous strain, but President Hoover has kept physically fit to carry on the mighty job entrusted to him. Cares have engraved lines upon his face and turned his hair gray, but they have neither dimmed his spirit nor slackened the will with which he assumed the leadership in this crisis.

Taking the initiative when the collapse came, here are a few of the things he did—in brief:

Called conference of labor and industrial leaders which resulted in maintaining wage levels until after living costs had dropped;

Caused the number of strikes to decline thirty-two per cent to aid employment;

Obtained cooperation of railroads, utilities and industry in expension of construction activities;

Urged shorter work week and staggering employment in shifts;

Accelerated and with cooperation of Congress, expanded existing Federal building program;

Enlisted cooperation of governors in enlarging state and municipal construction plans;

Set up employment committees to cooperate with existing agencies for finding jobs and financing relief;

Reorganized and enlarged Federal employment service to bring jobs and jobless together;

Restricted immigration so jobs would not be taken from American citizens;

Took prompt action for drought relief, making Federal appropriations available to farmers in thirty-one States;

Sponsored Red Cross campaign for relief;

Saved the financial structure of the world by bringing about one year's moratorium of international war debts and reparations;

Suggested the National Credit Association organized by bankers to place $500,000,000 at the disposal of banks threatened with disaster;

Authorized railroads to form a credit pool under direction of Inter-State Commerce Commission to aid weaker roads;

Created the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to halt bank failures that were tying up depositors' funds: to aid industry and agriculture to make loans for self-liquidating public and private works that would give employment; to enlarge the credit available for home financing through the Home Loan Banks;

Created the Home Loan Banks for home mortgages and building;

Made available additional capital for the Federal Land Bank system to extend farm mortgages;

Developed more adequate credit system with enlargement under safeguards of rediscount facilities of the Federal Reserve Banks;

Reorganized in the interest of economy and efficiency the Federal Power Commission;

Consolidated Veteran and Pension Bureaus;

Transferred Prohibiton Enforcement from the Treasury Department to the Department of Justice;

Insisted that the National budget be balanced by curtailing Federal expenditures and distributing increased taxation to cause the least hardship;

Inaugurated the Federal Marketing Act;

Set up the Federal Farm Board to aid farmers and agriculture and industry;

Expanded the Merchant Marine to second place in the world;

Inaugurated a nation-wide movement for child welfare through the conference on child health and protection;

Called a confrence on Home Building and Home Ownership, which resulted in the Home Loan Bank system to aid home financing;

Effected extensive reforms in Federal prisons;

Ordered conservation of oil and other natural resources;

Aided the development of inland waterways and negotiated a treaty with Canada for the construction of the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence Seaway;

Effected consolidation of Eastern railways for economy in operation, a forward movement which had been discussed for twelve years;

Promoted the peace of the world and goodwill toward the United States through touring Latin American countries prior to inauguration; through conferences to limit ship building competition; through proclaiming the Kellogg-Briand Pact to renounce war.

The Democratic nominee for Vice-President and Speaker of the House of Representatives: The latter half of Congress found its members acting up like a lot of school children. Their leader, John N. Garner, had lost all control. They were running in circles with no semblance of regime, no adequate measures taken care of. The program submitted by the President was so mutilated as to be unrecognizable. The sales tax bill, the most adequate and equitable way to balance the budget, was rent in twain and kicked out "toot sweet." The economy bill met the same fate. All this time the President insisting that they balance the budget and pass measures to give him power to adjust certain tariffs to stop the foreign countries' run on our gold and U. S. banks. Instead they passed the bonus bill, the Garner pork barrel bill, requiring $3,000,000,000 to pay them, knowing there was not a dollar in the Treasury to meet this situation. Then they advocated a Federal bond issue, next fiat or printing press money which would have forced us off the gold standard in almost overnight time.

Now here are facts I heard over the air: a speech by a Democratic Congressman, in which he said: "We have given the president but very little power and we expect to take most of that away from him."

A member of the Federal Reserve Board, which issues Government bonds, in an address to Congress told them plainly just so long as the budget was not balanced the government had no credit and he could not issue any bonds for any purpose. Then came Secretary Mills of the Treasury, exhorting them to quit quibbling and balance the budget; that they had always jeopardized the credit of the nation and threatened it with ruin. Then the crisis. Secretary Mills advised the President that something must be done swiftly to save the nation from utter ruin. The President then called his cabinet, the Federal Reserve Board and leaders of the Senate in conference, and at dawn came to a decision to lay matters before Congress in no uncertain terms, and here are some quotations from his message I heard:

He charged them with failure to perform their duty in office and by their failure to balance the budget they had ruined the credit of our nation and made every country on the face of the globe think our government was in ruin. They had started a run on our United States banks, with the result that we were about to be forced off the gold standard; our monetary system endangered; in fact our whole government structure was threatened with destruction. He charged them with playing politics with human misery and at the expense and ruin of our country. He also said, "If you do not balance the budget on your shoulders must rest the responsibility to the nation for its downfall." Then and only then did Mr. Garner try to gain control of the House and balance the budget after "a fashion."

But his antics on the last day of Congress made life so hectic his own party was ashamed and disgusted with him and said their party would never get any place until they muzzled him. Mr. Garner's ability for deliberate misrepresentation of himself, the Republican administration and Congress leaves nothing to be desired. The most fitting comparison I have heard of him is that he is like a "chameleon on plaid," and this is the man we have reason to believe may be President of the United States in the next three years in the event of a Democratic victory on November 8.

Franklin D. Roosevelt was born with a silver spoon in his mouth; was brought up with no responsibility other than the ownership of two puppies and a pony. His luxurious environment totally unfits him to cope with the great economic problems of our country today. He would seem to be entirely ignorant of the international policies of which President Herbert Hoover has shown sueh intelligent mastery. He has procured all the help he could get to formulate his speeches, has traveled from coast to coast making them and in all of them he has not offered a single constructive plan for economic recovery, unless planting a few trees and keeping a brass rod in the closet to whip the Federal government when it does not perform to suit him, can be called one. He refuses to face the situation and is silent on all issues of import. True enough he has said some things should be done, but does not offer any plan to put them into effect. He is shallow, insincere, evasive; the flattery he handed out to his radical progressive friends is all the more sickening because we know how little it really means. His competitive tariff and free trade ideas are ruinous. A sample we have had is Japan dumping shipload after shipload of silk on us at a much less price than we can manufacture it, with the result that every factory in America has had to close down.

As Governor of New York, Franklin D. Roosevelt's record shows inefficiency, extravaganee and lack of economy. This is the man who aspires to President Hoover's job and of whom "Teddy" Roosevelt warned us against in 1916. Now his wife and daughter are saying if he was a Republican they could still not vote for him and the "only thing in common between us is his surname."

With the speeches of the Governor mixed up like a dog's breakfast, one can get but little out of them. They are so different from the clear, concise statements of the President, who writes his own. The "new deal" the Governor talks about and of which no one has any conception of its meaning, might well be "anything." Of two things we are sure: First, it is experimental; second, with Huey Long, Hiram Johnson, Norris, Cutting, Wheeler, Harrison, Blanton, Patman, Lafollette and many other radicals in the House and Senate, and with John J. Rascob, Al Smith and Mrs. Harriman in the cabinet the picture does not look very promising.

For once I can agree with the Baltimore Sun, which says, "Albert C. Ritchie is best qualified to advocate the wet platform." He certainly is from every standpoint. Neither do I blame Secretary Wilbur for being a stickler for high standards, but however this may be, the question of most importance to us now is do we want to change the President whose rare breadth of view and unequaled grasp of the titanic forces which have beset America and the world and who is so eminently fitted to pilot our nation on along the same road he has brought us out on, the road to Prosperity and Happiness. For doubt, uncertainty, experimenting and lack of knowledge and understanding of our national and international problems of today, the only change I favor is is to send every Republican Senator and Congressman to Washington to back up President Hoover in his great task of reconstruction that is possible.

Again I appeal to you to remain steadfast to our party and its principles. Each one of us has an equal responsibility in the welfare of our homes, our people and our nation, and we can best discharge this responsibility by coming out to vote with high minded interest in helping our President to solve the problems of today and thus perform a genuine service to our community and to our country alike.

We are justified in feeling a great pride in the engineer of our ship of state, for by his indomitable courage, his integrity and tenacity of purpose he has fought aside the issues that struck at the very citadel of our homes, country and nation. With farseeing vision, brilliant and unquenchable ability he has held fast to all that the country has cherished through the years and landed us safely on the road to prosperity and he deserves not only Republican votes but that of every right thinking citizen.

I have always maintained that no great achievement was ever attained without the help of God. Our President was reared in a Christian home by a mother, who was a minister and he always promises with the help of God he will bring us safely through this crisis, and my faith is supreme in this golden thread of promise that it means victory, I have no doubt.

The Record Speaks For The Man

LEWIS' RECENT WORK IS MARKED BY ENERGETIC PUBLIC SERVICES

Congressman Devoted Time to Unemployment and Coal; Helped to Draft Tax Bill

Five major subjects—taxation, coal, unemployment, tariff and a four-year term for members—marked the legislative course of David J. Lewis in the House of Representatives during the past session of Congress.

On Congressman Lewis' work, Senator Costigan, of Colorado, said:

"The legislative record of David J. Lewis the past session is worthy of his warm heart, his original and constructive mind and his deserved national reputation." * *

Unemployment Big Effort

Mr. Lewis' unemployment bill, which he terms "The Right to Work," is an original and probably his greatest legislative effort.

The measure opens with this notable declaration by Congress: "It is hereby declared as a principle of social justice that the citizen possesses a legal right to work and is entitled * * to an equal share of the employment available * * *"

The bill also calls for life and disability insurance, workmen's pensions, unemployment insurance and stabilization of production.

James M. Cox, former governor of Ohio, and Democratic nominee for President in 1920, praised the bill * *

Introduces Coal Bill

As the author of a 42-page bill on the subject, Congressman Lewis seeks to stabilize the coal mining industry * *

Representative Lewis testified in behalf of his coal measure before a Senate committee the past session, declaring at the time:

"My district has a vital interest in the subject in the five billion tons of coal left undug in Allegany and Garrett counties, and in the rectification of the unnatural Maryland freight rates which discriminate against Maryland coal."

Of the legislation proposed a majority of the committee favored the Lewis bill, Senator Hayden of Arizona filing a report endorsing it.

Mr. Lewis has said that some of the stabilization features of his coal bill could be applied to agriculture.

Passes Tariff Amendment

Eight years on the Tariff Commission gave Congressman Lewis unique qualifications for duty on the House Ways and Means Committee, to which he was elected with seven others from a field of twenty-eight candidates, standing second in the election.

With this background Mr. Lewis was successful in having the House pass an amendment to the tariff act of 1930. * *

The amendment was based on the Representatives own experience with the subject.

In 1924 the Tariff Commission reported to President Coolidge reductions in sugar tariffs. Mr. Lewis joined in the report. Shortly afterward Mr. Lewis came up for reappointment to the Commission, at which time Coolidge asked Mr. Lewis to sign an undated letter of resignation for use at his pleasure in return for the reappointment credentials he was ready to sign for Mr. Lewis.

Mr. Lewis told Coolidge to tear up the credentials.

Did Much Tax Work

As a member of the Ways and Means Committee Congressman Lewis spent three months of the past session helping to draft the much discussed tax bill * * *

After eight years of experience as a member, and much research work on the subject, Mr. Lewis sought to extend members' terms to four years. * *

Splendid Record

In addition, he sponsored the Costigan relief bill on the floor of the House. * *

At the close of the past session Mr. Lewis was appointed a member of a special sub-committee of the Committee on Ways and Means to investigate the relations of Federal and State taxes. * *

—Cumberland, Md., Sunday Times.

Lewis' Bill On Right To A Job

David J. Lewis * * has introduced in Congress one of the strangest measures ever before that body * * beginning with this remarkable declaration:

> It is hereby declared as a principle of social justice that the citizen possesses a right to work and is entitled to * * * an equal share of the employment available * * *

* * * When Jefferson wrote the great Declaration on which our idea of individual rights largely rest it was deemed sufficient to assure the common man the "certain inalienable rights" of "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." In those days this seemed enough. * * The age of aggregated machines * * had not yet come.

In recent years we have been sadly reminded of the change which has come. * * * The machines work so fast that not all workers are needed * * So now we have eight million men fallen outside our economic breastworks * *

So now comes Congressman Lewis with his amendment to the Declaration. Men are entitled to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness"—and a job * *

* * * What man among us is ready, even now, to stand up in his place and while denying, as all right-minded men do, that his country owes any able-bodied man a living, deny also that his country owes its citizens a job—a chance to earn a living?

—Editorial by James M. Cox, Dayton, Ohio, Daily News.

A Tribute To A Champion

* * * A priceless purpose has been embodied in a man (Lewis) who stands for the people, whose mind is unstained by any thought of personal gain, whose character is unblemished by stooping to little things, and whose clear and capable intellect has been placed at the disposal of the people to fight in their cause.

A Country of the Needy should recognize no frontiers of party prejudice when such a man champions their common hurt, and in a similar manner should not besmirch themselves by an exaggerated loyalty to a man or cause that is not as clean as their own motives.

David J. Lewis justly was termed a statesman and not a politician —The Little Giant of a Mighty Cause.

—Hagerstown, Md., Daily Mail.

DAVID J. LEWIS

Average Up With Lewis, Kent Says

* * Probably the most notable and important new House member of the next session (first session, 72nd Congress) is David J. Lewis of Maryland. Mr. Lewis beat * * Zihlman in a heavily Republican district, and his return to the House after an absence of ten years is quite an event. He is the father of the parcel-post law. * * The other new House members will have to turn out badly indeed to keep the average from going up with David Lewis again a member.

—Frank R. Kent The New Republic.

MR. LEWIS

* * The State should be proud of Mr. Lewis' career, his clear vision, his habits of industry and his high integrity. Few men in Congress stand higher in the general esteem of members of the House, and there are few whose defeat would be viewed as so serious a loss to the public service. For this reason there is a State-wide interest in the Sixth District contest.

* * * Failure to reelect Mr. Lewis would gravely lower our prestige in the House and reflect to the serious disadvantage of the people of Maryland. Integrity, intelligence and high purpose were never more needed in public life than today. The Sixth district has a rare opportunity to promote its own, the State's and the national welfare by keeping in the House a man who possesses these qualifications in distinguished measure.

—Editorial, Baltimore, Md., Sunday Sun.

THE WISDOM OF DAVID J. LEWIS

When the United States tardily got around to the creation of a parcel post * * * David J. Lewis, of Maryland, did a piece of work for which some day we will build monuments to him. He got up as a new member of the House and discussed the subject with such complete understanding, such all-including grasp, that before he was done the House recognized him as the master of the subject. It took his advice, and the whole country acknowledged his leadership.

DAVID J. LEWIS TERMED TALLEST INTELLECT OF MARYLAND MEMBERS

Representative Seen as Rare Combination of Theorist and Practical Statesman

By Walker Stone, Staff correspondent for the Baltimore Post at Washington

David John Lewis, "the Little Giant of the Alleghenies," five feet 2 inches tall, towers in intellectual stature above other members of the Maryland delegation in Congress.

To say that is not to belittle the two Maryland Senators or the other five Maryland representatives. Indeed, few men in this nation have the brain power possessed by "Davey" Lewis. Fewer still have the responsive and intelligent social conscience that has illumined his 30 years in and out of public life. * *

Listen to this little Welshman tell of his plans. * *

Practical Theorist

Then, you realize he is that rare combination, a theorist and a practical man. Then, you recall it was he, who, thirty years ago, in the Maryland State Senate, gave to the country its first workmen's compensation law. You remember that 15 years ago he engineered through Congress the parcel post law, revolutioned commerce by providing urban and rural home delivery of mail orders at a minimum cost.

The old heads of Congress will tell you how when Lewis first started work on his parcel post plan the railroad and railway express company barons laughed up their sleeves, and how, before he finished, they frantically and vainly fought him with all the power of their vast wealth and influence.

Would Protect Jobs

What does he now plan? Your guess is wrong if you think his is some quack scheme to end depressions. * *

What he plans is practical, but just as revolutionary. After months of study and research, he is now completing final draft of a bill which, if adopted, will write into the law of the land the fundamental principle that every man is entitled to work. It would throw about a man's job the same protection that the Constitution gives to a man's right to own property. * *

His bill would give to each man of proved competency an equal share with other men of the employment available in his chosen trade. It would compel the employer * * to * * * pay to just compensation to any workman unjustly denied an equal share.

Starts Coal Study

With his employment bill nearing completion he has * * started a study of the coal industry. It is quite natural that his mind should turn to coal channels. He started working in the coal mines of Pennsylvania and Western Maryland at the age of nine and labored in them until he was 23.

He and his confcrees hope to reorganize the coal industry along the lines of the British system. * *

What does Lewis think about the imminent problem of Congress—taxation?

"It is absolutely and immediately necessary," he says, "for Congress to balance the federal budget. * *"

Wants Own Salary Cut

Incidentally, Lewis is one of the few congressmen who thinks salaries of Representatives and Senators should be drastically reduced. * *

Relative to Prohibition, Lewis, a one-time dry, now advocates modification to permit the sale of beer and light wines.

—Baltimore, Md., Post.

Cong. Lewis On The Right Track

To all intent and purpose, Representative David J. Lewis' bill to extend the term of a Congressman from two to four years is a necessary piece of legislation if the people expect their representatives to be actually useful in Washington.

* * A representative cannot get fairly started on his way to accomplish something if he is so minded, in the short period of two years.

This applies particularly to representatives who go to Congress for the purpose of doing something worth while for their constituents and the country and not merely to draw their salaries and play politics. We have had painful examples of this class of so-called representation.

No one can accuse Mr. Lewis of having a selfish motive in introducing his amendment * * The fact is there are too few men of the type of Lewis in Congress, men who have conscience and are motivated by the highest principles and purpose to be of service, men whose past achievements have won for them the confidence and esteem of the people because they are honest, fearless, capable and conscientious in the performance of their duties. What a Lewis could do in four years in Congress would be worth more than what another less qualified and of smaller mental stature could do in a lifetime. * *

—Editorial, Hagerstown, Md., Daily Mail.

LEWIS' COAL MEASURE

The bill introduced in Congress * * by Representative David J. Lewis * * to stabilize the coal industry, which has languished of late, will undoubtedly receive more than ordinary attention.

Mr. Lewis, in addition to representing a coal mining district, was once a worker in the mines. * *

Moreover, Mr. Lewis is a serious student of the problems he attacks, which was shown in his successful efforts in behalf of the parcel post.

The coal industry needs a doctor, and whether or not Mr. Lewis succeeds in finding a cure, he will certainly throw light upon the nature of its ailment.

MT. LAKE PARK

Crystal Spring

Town Clerk Martin has received a letter from Mr. W. D. Grimes, pertinent portions of which we are privileged to print. After stating that he is interested very largely in the progress of the Park Mr. Grimes says: "I refere to Crystal Spring and its surroundings. While I appreciate this property, the small lake, spring, and pool, are the property of the Mt. Lake Park Association, I am satisfied that the Association would permit the municipality to make some improvements about the spring, and perhaps take it over for care and use.

* * * The spring is now discharging water underneath the spout, the pool is being wrecked, rubbish is being thrown into it, no fence or other protection is about the place, the small shed is being wrecked and torn apart, and it would seem to me to be of much advantage to the Park if this were repaired and put in first class condition, together with the road leading to the spring around the lake. The cost of doing this would certainly be very small. I am satisfied there is not a tax payer in Mt. Lake Park who would object to a small assessment for this particular purpose."

We wish we had space to reproduce this letter in full. As we stood on the old Loch Lynn hotel grounds yesterday with a friend from Fairmont, he remarked that the lake, spring, and surroundings could be made one of the beauty spots of the community. Especially, as the new road is being completed to Deer Park, which, in all probability, will mean that the highway through the Park will become one of the main lines of travel to the east by way of Deer Park and Kitzmiller, Crystal Spring should be put in first class sanitary condition and its surroundings beautified and made attractive.

Commendatory comment is being heard on all sides about the progressive act of the Town Council in contracting for the installation of two fire plugs for the purpose of testing the efficiency of the water system of the Park for fire protection. If the test is successful other plugs will be placed, as finances will permit.

It is reported that some of the main roads in the Park will be improved by screenings. We trust the report is correct, for the main road leading from the state road along the Auditorium grounds to the Gibson corner is getting exceedingly rough and bumpy.

Fire protection, good roads, and a well lighted town in the winter months will go far in increasing the number of winter residents. Each person whose stay is prolonged means that the capital assets of the community is increased just that much.

While the Park was founded as a Summer Resort, conditions have changed, people have purchased property as a permanent place in which to live and are entitled to some consideration. We believe the presenty Mayor and Council, all of whom are permanent residents, will do their best to further this suggestion. Fairly well lighted streets promotes social intercourse, a vital part of community life and progress, and as many winter lights as the town's finances will possibly permit, should be maintained.

Notice will appear in this issue of the sale of the store operated for a number of years by Weeks & Weeks, in Loch Lynn. Mr. H. B. Gibson is the new proprietor, who has taken possession.

FARMERS, WORKERS, PEOPLE, EVERYBODY!

Wake Up! Use Your Heads!

It is a commonplace remark that this country is the richest land the world ever saw. With approximately 8 percent of the world's population this country can produce:

Sixty-five percent of the world's oil; 60% of the cotton; 50% of the corn; 20% of the wheat.

We have more live stock, that is meat supply, than any other countries, except India and Russia. We have 42% of the unmined iron ore of the world and 45% of the coal. We even produce 9% of the world's production of wool, and 9% of the sugar.

As to the machinery necessary to the utilization of this vast abundance, the processes of converting our ample raw material into useful commodities, this is also available. The industrial plant already set up and in working order is capable of producing six times as many iron and steel products as are now being produced; three times as many automobiles as were ever made annually; three times as many shoes; and the highest peak of textile manufacture ever attained in a year's time could be doubled or tripled without any additions to the already existing machinery of production.

Our transportation system (we have 32% of the world's railway mileage and 330,000 miles of hard surfaced roads) could move three times the volume of traffic as is at present being handled.

In general it may be admitted that our resources are amply sufficient to provide every man willing to work to help produce the things that we all need with an abundance.

We have an industrial plant that is capable of providing every useful member of our society with all of the material resources that he needs, in peace, plenty, comfort, and security.

Why, then, do we not make use of these wonderful resources and machinery to provide comfort and plenty for all?

Oh yeah! you say. I'll bite. Why?

Well, Mr. Farmer, Mr. Worker, come to the meeting of Socialists at the Maryland Theatre, 5 p. m., Sunday, November 6, and find out why.

Mr. Farmer, hring your sons and daughters who are quartered on you, back from the industrial cities where they were formerly employed. Tell them that reputable economists estimate that due to the development of labor saving machinery, 50% of them will never again find employment if our present social organization is continued.

Mr. Worker, the mechinery is taking your place in industry!! just one example: One man working with modern machinery, say an all purpose tractor with gang plows and harrows, and combination reaper, binder and thresher, can now produce as much wheat in one season as a farm lahorer in the time of the Pharoahs of Egypt could in a lifetime!

Our social organization is geared to the productive powers of a century ago. Our marvelous machinery, which has so enormously increased man's productive power must either be made our servant to minister to our comfort and happiness or it will destroy us.

Which do you want?

Well, suppose you come to the meeting at the Maryland Theatre at 3 p. m., Sunday, November 6, and let us talk these matters over.

Remember! Things just cannot keep on going along as they are going. If they do we are sunk! All of us!

Do not forget the date, 3 p. m., Sunday, November 6.

Tableland Governing Board to Meet November 18

The first meeting of the Governing Board of the Allegheny Tableland association will be held in the Mt. Lake Institute office on Friday afternoon, November 18, at 2 o'clock. The nine members of the board, one from each county of the Tableland and one at large, will elect officers for the year. C. N. McIntire, Oakland, represents Garrett county.

Following the organization of the board, a meeting will be held with a similar board from the Tableland Council of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce to organize the joint board of promotion and control, to carry out the program for next year.

Prospects Are Bright For Next Summer at Mt. Lake Park

With several organizations already working toward conferences at Mt. Lake Park next summer, prospects for Mt. Lake Institute for 1933 are beginning to seem brighter, I. S. Middaugh, director, announced.

Director Middaugh was in conference with Bishop A. W. Leonard, at Pittsburgh, where plans were laid for a rural young people's conference at Mt. Lake for a week next summer, to be attended by approximately 400.

The Summer School of Theology is to be greatly increased in numbers due to legislation of the last general conference of the M. E. church which requires all supply preachers to take the summer school course if they are to be appointed to churches. This will require the attendance of 65 supply preachers from the West Virginia conference and a slightly smaller number from the Pittsburgh and Erie conferences.

The Camp Meeting association is planning for 1933 and Bishop Adna W. Leonard will be present.

ANNUAL RED CROSS ROLL CALL BEGINS ON NOV. 11

Membership Drive to Continue Until Thanksgiving; Community Chairmen Are Named

COUNTY'S QUOTA IS $600

The annual drive for membership in the American Red Cross will begin on Armistice Day, November 11, and continue until Thanksgiving Day, November 24, when an attempt will be made to raise $600, the quota set by National headquarters.

Along with the announcement comes an urgent appeal for those who are able to contribute, and give heart and soul in the work of relief to the increased number who will need it this winter.

Practically the entire quota was raised last year, and it is the purpose of Mrs. Samuel Cole, county chairman, to thoroughly organize the county so that a complete canvass may be made.

District chairmen who have been appointed thus far: Miss Dessie Rodeheaver, Mt. Lake Park; Loch Lynn, Mrs. H. V. Leighton; Deer Park, Mrs. Lulu Hinebaugh; Grantsville, Miss C. Winterberg; Accident, Miss Nina Peck; Crellin, Mrs. Lester Yutzy; Kitzmiller and Shallmar, Mrs. William Pew; Oakland, Mrs. S. D. Whipkey, Mrs. Ernest Shirer, Mrs. Arthur Naylor, Mrs. Paul Naylor, Mrs. Ernest Liller, Mrs. Delbert Davis, and Mrs. Harold Harned. Kempton and Friendsville chairmen have not been named.

There is a greater demand for relief in the county, according to Mrs. Cole, and as the funds from the drive are divided with the local chapter and National headquarters, a contribution will help both divisions. Those who contribute will be given a button, a receipt and a Red Cross sign for their window.

AN EDITORIAL

For the sake of experimenting with a change in the administration of national affairs—

CAN WE AFFORD TO WASTE A YEAR?

The news of the outcome in Maine immediately resulted in a loss through lowered commodity prices of $100,000,000 to the farmers of the United States. A similar reaction on the stock exchange cost the security owners of the country $500,000,000. That is only symptomatic of what would happen if on November 8 the country determined to change political leaders at a time when the economic depression had spent itself and unmistakable signs of recovery were on the horizon.

Governor Roosevelt has declared that the present protective tariff is a GHASTLY fraud. It he means what he says, his statement can only foreshadow prompt revision of the tariff. It does not require a long memory to recall what ALWAYS has happened to business and to employment when revision of the tariff was undertaken. It is INEVITABLE that under such conditions every form of business affected in any way by the policy of protection should curtail to the utmost until it knows definitely what the future tariff policy is going to be. No human reaction could be predicted with greater assurance than this.

With the money panic phase of the depression past and more banks reopening than are closing, with the evil of money-hoarding stopped, the outflow of gold transformed to an inflow of the precious metal, with bank deposits going up instead of down, with the price of all sound securities increasing and commodity prices on a slow upward trend, there remain two chief objectives to be attained in the struggle back to prosperity. The first of these is reemployment of the idle by industry, and the second is the restoration of prosperity on the farms. Although the latter is immediately and tremendously affected by the accomplishment of the first of these two purposes, the farm problem is less directly affected by tariff revision than are industry and the men and women employed by industry.

Shall the millions of men and women now out of work and suffering acute privations because of lack of income be compelled to wait another twelve months while the country experiments with a new leader who thus far has shown neither an adequate understanding of the magnitude of the problems to be met nor anything that remotely approaches a program for meeting them?

That is the question which both the leaders in industry and business and those employed, or seeking employment by business and industry, must ask themselves. The policies of the Hoover administration d signed to meet the present crisis are known. Most of them have been given effect in legislation, and are now in operation. There is not the slightest vestige of doubt in the mind of any man or woman as to what the Hoover administration, if retained in power, will do with regard to commerce and industry. No man can safely predict what the opposition will do if given power. We do know, although the election is only a few weeks off, that Governor Roosevelt has not yet enunciated a program of economic recovery.

We do know that under the leadership of Garner there was proposed the enactment of a bonus bill which would have cost in immediate cash $2,300,000,000. We do know that Garner tried to put over a huge pork-barrel bill, also requiring billions of dollars of additional taxes. We do know that every fantastic project which attempted inflation of the currency and cheapening of the dollar had the support of a majority of Garner's followers in that branch of Congress which in the last session was controlled by Mr. Garner.

Under such circumstances how can any thoughtful man or woman fail to recognize that a change in the political and economic leadership this fall would mean not less than a year's postponement of the return to normal conditions of business and employment?

Decrease Noted in Fatal Auto Accidents During October

There is an impressive decrease in fatal automobile accidents this month as compared to the same period last year, according to E. Austin Baughman, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles for Maryland.

During October, 1931, fifty-seven persons lost their lives in automobile accidents in Maryland, but for October of this year but twenty-nine fatalities had been reported.

Inspection of cars is going forward steadily in Oakland and Garrett county, but not as rapidly as in former years. The save-a-life campaign in the State of Maryland began on October 15, and will continue until November 30. During that time all motor vehicles in the State must be inspetced for brakes, lights and other mechanical features or be stopped by State policemen at the conclusion of the campaign.

To date only 50,000 owners have had their cars inspected.

Painfully Burned

Anxious to see how he would look on Hallowe'en, William Glotfelty, II, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Glotfelty, Second street, put on his false whiskers on Saturday night. Then he leaned over a pumpkin in which was a lighted candle.

His whiskers became ignited and before they could be unfastened his face was painfully burned. Medical attention was given by Dr. H. W. McComas.

HOOVER HAILED BY 3,000 DURING STOP AT OAKLAND

Train Bearing President From Indianapolis Saturday Stops Here For Two Minutes

GREAT CROWD GATHERS

The train bearing President Herbert Hoover to Washington after a speech at Indianapolis paused in Oakland Saturday morning at 11:21.

The President came to the rear platform and expressed his appreciation for the greeting of the crowd and for their confidence in his re-election. It was estimated that approximately 3,000 were present.

The Girl Scouts presented Mrs. Hoover with a bouquet of chyrsanthemums and Mrs. Winchell, of the Park, also handed Mrs. Hoover a very handsome cluster of like flowers.

The Boy Scouts were called into service in holding back the crowd. Both the Crellin Band and Gilbert-Brown Boys' Band of Oakland were present and entertained the crowd with a number of selections prior to the arrival of the train.

Yesterday the Girl Scouts received the following card from Mrs. Hoover: "Such lovely autumn colored chrysanthemums. Thank you for coming down to give them to me." (signed) Lou Henry Hoover.

REPUBLICANS AT FINZEL RALLY TO PRES. HOOVER

Charles Layman Presides at Meeting—Farmers Favor Hoover

An enthusiastic Republican Rally was held at Finzel, this county, Monday evening under auspices of the Republican State Central committee, of Garrett county. The meeting was attended by men and women representing District No. 9.

Charles Layman, a prominent farmer who resides on the National Highway west of Frostburg presided. Addresses were delivered by Neil Fraley, of Oakland; State Senator J. Glenn Beall, of Allegany county; Mayor G. A. Shuckhart, of Frostburg, and Rudolph Nichol, a former member of the Maryland Legislature.

Following the meeting each voter was supplied with campaign literature and plans were made for getting out the voters on election day.

Party workers reported to Mr. Fraley of the Republican State Central committee that Hoover sentiment was strong among the residents of Garrett county and the same enthusiasm was being expressed for Wallace Williams, candidate for U. S. Senate, and Harold Smith, candidate for the House of Representatives.

Pea Growers to Assist in Acreage Control

Dr. E. N. Cory, head of the entymology department, University of Maryland, will be in the county soon to follow up the spray work done in cooperation with the Mt. Airy Canning, by studying the carry over of aphis (plant lice). In the spring Dr. Cory will assist the company in the spray program in effort to control the disease. O. T. Graser has been assisting Howard Reinhardt, manager of the canning company plant in contracting for next year's pea acreage.

LARGE VOTE IS EXPECTED AT ELECTION ON TUESDAY

Eight Thousand Four Hundred Twenty-seven Qualified to Vote in Garrett County

SHOULD REELECT HOOVER

Eight thousand four hundred twenty seven persons have qualified to vote in Garrett county at next Tuesday's general election when a President, Vice-President, United States Senator and Congressman will be voted for, in addition to making a decision on a proposed Constitutional Amendment and a bond issue of $150,000 for public school purposes.

While there are five political parties reperesented on the ballot for President and Vice-President, it is a foregone conclusion that only the Republican or Democratic candidates for these offices have any show of being chosen by the voters of the nation. The Republican ticket includes Herbert Hoover for President; Chas. Curtis for Vice-President; Wallace Williams for U. S. Senator, and Harold C. Smith for Congressman from the Sixth Congressional District.

Forty-seven million persons have qualified to vote in the United States as a whole, which exceeds by four and a half million the record-shattering registration of 1928. The unprecedented determination of voters of both sexes to take part in next week's ballot march is indicated in virtually every state.

President Hoover leaves Washington today for a final campaign dash which will carry him to the Pacific coast. The chief executive dislosed his final campaign plans in a political address last night during which he renewed his attack upon democratic tariff policies and asserted that if that party is placed in power agricultural "products will rot on the farm." Under a democratic "regime," he said, the country "would go back to conditions of depression worse than that through which we have passed."

In local communities Republican rallies and mass meetings have been held upholding the present administration and urging the re-election of the President and the election of Mr. Williams and Mr. Smith.

COMMISSIONERS MEET TO DISCUSS TAX REDUCTION

Western Maryland Counties Represented at Frederick Friday

Discussion of county tax relief from the state was discussed at a meeting of representatives of the commissioners of Montgomery, Carroll, Washington, Anne Arundel, St. Mary's, Howard, Garrett and Frederick counties, held at Frederick last Friday. Commissioners George D. Browning, James A. Fitzwater, and George W. Harvey; William W. Frazee, clerk; and H. L. Bittner represented the county.

Invitation was extended by the commissioners of the eight Western Maryland counties to the Eastern Shore Commissioners' Association to meet in Annapolis in November for discussion of county tax relief from the state.

The meeting in Annapolis will be for the purpose of proposing the measures for the general assembly in January so state laws can be changed to aid the counties in caring for their roads and relieving the burden of taxes especially on the farmers.

After a two-hour discussion the commissioners passed two resolutions to which there was a small opposition. The resolutions were similar to two of the five adopted by the Eastern Shore Commissioners' Association, at a meeting in Cambridge, October 17.

They requested changes in the gasoline tax and motor vehicle license fund so that revenues derived by the state from these sources may be applied to county roads under the supervision of the county commissioners, and legislation so that no county will be required to levy more than 30 cents on the $100 in order to share in the equalization fund. Discussion was led by Mills H. Fairbanks, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland Farm Bureau Federation.

Mr. L. H. Glotfelty, of near Swanton, was a caller at The Republican office yesterday.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

The number of pumpkin heads on Tuesday morning must have been quite numerous, and when I say pumpkin heads, I don't mean exactly pumpkin heads.

For the uninformed, a pumpkin head is a head caused by various phases of Hallowe'en. A very, very mild form of pumpkin head is caused simply by taking part in the parade and dance and not getting enough sleep. From the mild form, the ascent is gradual until we have the pumpkin head which feels like a barrel, the thumping head, and the whirling head. Then there is still a larger head, but the person having this kind, rarely knows it. In fact he doesn't know anything else either, until he comes to, several hours later.

In former years, the pumpkin heads did not begin to appear until about intermission. This year they appeared quite early, and swelled quickly, and long before intermission the type five head was general.

And let it be understood that I do not expect to wear a long mustache again—ever; especially the wavy kind. Two delicious, oily, black hairs got wrapped around my palate or tonsils or something during the parade, and the cough which followed loosened my liver and appendix—at least.

I purposely postponed writing a column or so until after the parade, knowing that parades and Hallowe'en dances are mothers of ideas. But the same idea of getting drunk seems to prevail, and there's nothing new in that. Pity the poor fellow who thinks a stimulant is needed for his brain in order to have a good time. Nice brains! Other than giving one a false sense of importance and a splitting head, what have you?

But here I go getting all sentimental again, when maybe a lot of you like your brew. Personally, it tastes like soap to me, and I never could get much enjoyment out of eating soap, even the perfumed kind, or lifebuoy.

After watching some scenes at the dance, I have invented an idea which will prevent people from hanging around ones neck, especially when said neck is not in the clutches of [illegible]nes partner. Ask Archibaldson, et [illegible]l.

Anyway, place woman who has grabbed your neck in contraption pictured below. Have assistant close door and light fire, being sure that she is on inside and you on outside. Soon she will either become drowsy from heat, or excited. If it's the former, hands will unlax and the defendant is saved. If she becomes excited, however, fingers will tighten on ones neck, and then see where you are by heck. But it's worth trying. This way there's one of two chances you will get free, and there's no escape the other way. They hang on until they drop, and for the old seasoned warriors it takes a long, long time to drop.

Neck Snatcher Cure

Due to crowded conditions this week (thank heavens) I can't write anymore or the boss editor threatens to cut my stuff out and run the ballot in its place. So I'll have to put my tripewriter away for another week.

To the Voters of Garrett County, Md.

I propose to discuss briefly Mr. Hoover's administration during his term of office as President of the United States and contrast it with the administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt as Governor of New York during the same period.

Let us go back to the time of Woodrow Wilson. The war changed completely the economic status of the United States. From the beginning of our national life we had been a debtor nation. Our railroads were built, our resources developed and our factories erected by the aid of money borrowed from foreign investors. During the war period we paid up these debts amounting to billions of dollars and loaned other billions abroad.

Let me say here that I will not take the time or space to answer the accusation made against Mr. McAdoo in last week's paper regarding the loan "without a paper to show for it." Any American boy or girls who has reached the age of twenty-one and could be persuaded to believe such a ridiculous thing is not in normal mind and there are too few in number to waste time and space on at this particular time.

We ceased to be a debtor nation and became a creditor nation almost over night. Now a creditor nation must get it's pay either in gold or in goods. We held already, when the war ended most of the world's gold. Our only hope of permanent prosperity was to help the nations of Europe to regain their productivity by the purchase of their products. Under Harding and Coolidge we did nothing in this direction, but with the coming of Mr. Hoover Americans were expecting a new kind of leadership. Instead of that we got the Hawley-Smoot tariff.

Even under Coolidge this tariff would have been a crime. Mr. Coolidge might have been forgiven on the ground of limited experience and lack of understanding. Mr. Hoover cannot claim the same allowance. He had no such limitations. No man knew better the problem of reparations and war debts. There was the golden opportunity for him to have spoken the word of leadership, which would have put us in the forefront of the economic life of the world. His signing of the Hawley-Smoot tariff turned the whole world's thinking backward. Nearly a hundred leading economists joined in a public appeal against it and his closest friends beseeched him not to sign it.

The Hawley-Smoot bill was an awful blunder. The next President must undo it before we have any noticeable economic recovery. Mr. Hoover, even now, refuses to acknowledge that it was in error.

The trade of the world is bound and gagged. No nation can be prosperous until the gags and bonds are removed.

Then in the long list of accomplishments mentioned in the article last week was the Farm Board. I ask you Garrett county farmers to pass judgment on the Farm Board. It is listed by all, even the President's closest friends and followers are an absolute failure. And right here I would like to tell the Garrett county farmer that at the same time he was getting 30 cents a hushel for wheat the farmer in France was getting a dollar and fifty cents for his wheat because the French government takes care of it's farmers.

Are we to charge our government with lack of understanding or indifference to the farmers' needs?

Then when the Wickersham Commission report, containing a long list of sound recommendations, was sent to the President, he disapproved its findings. The next day he insisted he still had an open mind on the question, which leaves us with an unpleasant feeling that the President either did not know or feared to speak his mind, and so our confidence in his courage was again shattered.

Mr. Hoover made a long list of promises in 1928. He forgot them; have you? During his entire term of office, most particularly the first 18 months, he was President of the favored few. Now at election time he comes before us again with more promises expecting us to forget the past four years and give him another chance.

These able Republican Senators mentioned in the article last week are ridiculed in that article because they had the courage to do as Abraham Lincoln declared right. They stood with the President when he was right, but when they found him to be wrong they parted from him, because to these great men (and some truly great men are listed there) Mr. Hoover has been and is wrong. For honesty of purpose, courage of his convictions, plus being a champion of the people's rights, Senator Norris stands head and shoulders above our President, Mr. Hoover.

Now let's look at Mr. Roosevelt's record of extravagance as quoted last week. It is fortunate that the Democratic candidate has a public record also by which he can be judged. As Governor of New York, Franklin D. Roosevelt's plan for State's development of the hydro-electric power on the St. Lawrence stands a bold affirmative of the people's rights to their natural resources. His old age pension system is saving thousands of men and women from destitution and beggary. He put teeth in the Public Service Commission law, bringing public utilities under a real control. His labor laws compare with the best in the country. He has placed his State an a firm business pasis, relating out-go to income, and by persistent effort he is bringing about reforms in the useless extravagance of town and county government.

In 1931, while the National administration still denied unemployment, Governor Roosevelt stood for a $20,000,000 fund raised by a fifty per cent increase in income taxes. The money being used for a sweeping public works program with jobs distributed on a five-day hasis.

In connection with farm relief, he has done a good job of trail blazing. His tax equalization plan saved the farmers of New York more than $31,000,000 the first year, and a soil survey of the State not only had a value as a guide to crop programs but revealed one million acres unfit for farming. This was withdrawn from agriculture and planted in trees.

His handling of the Jimmy Walker case forever clears him of any connection with the powers of Tammany.

He carried out this splendid program in spite of being handicapped by a Republican Senate and Assembly, which tried to block his every turn and of which conditions Mr. Hoover in his administration complains and tries to pass the buck. But Mr. Roosevelt, believing in his cause, always legislating directly for the masses of the people carried his cause directly to the people with plain speech and forceful purpose. He did not give an inch and carried through to the end everything he undertook.

No man ever was or will be big enough to direct America's vast affairs all by himself. Mr. Roosevelt surrounds himself with the ablest and best men obtainable, without regard to party affiliation.

And last, his reply to Al Smith's criticism of him in his plea for the forgotten man, "I am quite frankly one of those who have the deep conviction that there are festering unequalities in our national life that shame the Declaration of Independence. I believe with all my heart that America's race is between reformation and revolution."

He ha sthe courage and will to end the selfish and destructive rule of privilged classes.

He should be the logical choice of the farmer, the laborer, the miner, the small merchant, the white collared man and all who belong to the great common class of America.

Let us join hands, Republicans and Democrats alike in Garrett county and rise above party affiliation and like the great Republican Senator from Nebraska realize and admit this is not a Republican administration but an administration for special privileges for the favored few of which we have no part, and from which we receive no benefits.

Let's say it at the ballot box in an effective way next Tuesday.

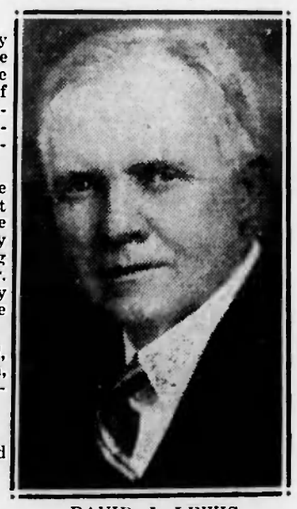
To The Voters of Garrett County, Md.



It hardly seems necessary to rally the forces of Garrett county to the support of our life-long friend, noble champion of people's rights—father of the parcel post and Workmen's Compensation Act, for re-election to Congress of the Sixth Congressional District.

He is your friend and mine. He labors untiringly for our interest. Let us let him know how thoroughly we appreciate his labor in our behalf by giving him on November 8 a sweeping majority over the nice young man, Mr. Smith, of whom we know so very little. Mr. Lewis has been tried in the balance and found not wanting.

He will speak at McCullough's Hall, Friendsville, Saturday, November 5th, at 7:30 o'clock. Let's give him a rousing welcome.

A Lesson in Keeping Family Ties Closely Bound . .

Mrs. Jones is sad and lonely tonight—children away at school and her husband out of town on business.

Mr. Jones is pacing restlessly about his hotel. "By George," he mutters, "I'll be glad when my traveling days are over."

Something has happened! Mrs. Jones is all smiles. Wonder why!

It's Mr. Jones calling. "Oh, I'm all right, Dear," he says, "I was just lonely and wanted to talk to you and find how things are. Yes. You bet! Will be home Thursday."

Mrs. Jones is as thrilled as a girl over the call. But she is thrifty and wonders what it cost.

She finds that this call, 100 miles away, cost only 35¢ (it was a night station-to-station call). And that she could talk 135 miles for 45¢, 275 miles for 75¢* and 400 miles for $1*. *Excluding Tax

Now that she knows out-of-town telephoning is so cheap she is going to have regular chats with the children away at school—as well as talk to Mr. Jones.

A THIRD OF A MAN?

The Democratic Campaign Committee, in a political advertisement appearing only in agricultural magazines, calls the American farmer "A third of a man." This advertisement, which is as frankly deceptive as have been the so-called farm speeches of the Democratic candidate himself, says many things which are not true.

The advertisement declares that the farmer was "ruined in prosperity." He was. He was ruined in 1913 by the Democratic free trade Underwood Tariff Act. This was one of the worst tariff bills ever enacted. It placed most of our leading agricultural products on the free list and so drastically lowered rates of duty on other products of the farm that the duties were not at all effective. This was demonstrated after the World War, when the flood of competitive farm products from abroad so inundated our home market that, despi the properity of those days in 1918 and 1920, the prices paid for farm products hit such low levels that many farmers did not attempt to sell. They did not do so because our home markets were glutted with Argentine beef, Australian wool and mutton, Canadian wheat, Chinese eggs and millions of tons of other farm products from the four corners of the earth. It took a Republican tariff, the Farmer's Emergency Act, which, by the way, was vetoed by a Democratic President, but re-enacted in 1921, to stem this flood. This act and the Fordney-McCumber Tariff of 1922 was just one step taken to assist agriculture toward recovery by a Republican administration. Twenty-one measures, which were hailed by the legislative depresentatives of the American Farm Bureau Federation as "Far more important to American agriculture than all the legislation relating to agriculture passed since the adoption of the Constitution," were enacted by a Republican Congress and signed by a Republican President.

This false and misleading advertisement also asserts that in 1928: "Republican leadership promised the farmer equality with industry." Before the tidal wave of world depression struck our shores the Republican party had taken steps to fulfill that pledge. The Hawley-Smooth Tariff Act, which is the only tariff in American history that ever gave the farmer the rates he wanted, was enacted. This law increased the duties on 250 farm products. The average increase on farm products was 30 per cent. The average increase granted non-agricultural products was only 12 per cent. This was the first step toward placing the farmer on an equality with industry. It was followed by others. Had it not been for these measures conditions would have been vastly worse than they are today.

Further on this typical deceiving advertisement asks the farmer to vote for the Democratic candidate on his record. Franklin D. Roosevelt has no farm record. He deliberately attempted to deceive the farmers of the country by saying, at Topeka, that he had lived on a farm for fifty years. This is not a fact. It is another example of the sort of loose talk that won the designation "demagogue" that was applied to him by former Governor Alfred E. Smith. Franklin D. Roosevelt has never lived on a farm. The place he calls a farm is a typical country gentleman's estate located at Hyde Park, New York. It consists of a mansion of 25 rooms, a stable of eight riding horses, an eight-car garage, cultivated woodlands, elaborate flower gardens and it commands an excellent view of the Hudson River. Not a single farm crop and no stock is raised on this imaginary farm for sale in any market. Furthermore, as Governor of the State of New York, Candidate Roosevelt has done nothing to help the farmers of that state. On the contrary he has vetoed many measures designed to help these farmers. He does claim credit for the enactment of one excellent law. This credit does not belong to him. The law in question is the Commission Merchant's Bonding Act. It was introduced in the State Legislature when the Democratic candidate was a State Senator and the Chairman of the Senate Committee on Agriculture. He kept that bill in his committee for one year. It was not reported from that committee until a committee representing the agricultural interests of the state demanded that it be reported. It will also be recalled that the Democrat candidate refused to even countenance a proposal to eliminate the State tax of $13,000,000.00 that largely falls on the farmers, but substituted for this proposal lower income taxes, which largely benefitted those who are more fortunate than the tax paying farmer is.

The advertisement also speaks of the Democrat candidate's "national programme". This gentleman has no programme, unless he calls the one announced by President Hoover his own. As a matter of fact the President is now and has been advocating many of the policies that Candidate Roosevelt now calls his programme. Mr. Roosevelt, however, does promise to lower the tariff that is not in Mr. Hoover's programme.

Later on in this brazen attempt to deceive the farmer through the columns of the farm magazines, we find that there is a "Six Point Programme" in Candidate Roosevelt's bag of tricks for farmers.

Point one calls for the refinancing of farm mortgages with lower rates and a longer time for payment. President Hoover has already started this. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is helping and President Hoover stands pledged to continue to do what this Roosevelt advertisement says the Democrat candidate promises to do. Actions still speak louder than words.

Point two of this farm magazine advertisement promises to restore trade by tariff reform. The Democrat candidate's plan for tariff reform is something new. It is "competitive" tariff with "international agreements" thrown in for good measure. His plan calls for sweeping tariff rates with competitive countries. The rates that our competitive countries want lowered are our agricultural rates. Canada would make no agreement with us unless we lowered our tariff on wheat, milk, eggs and so forth. Argentina would insist upon lower duties on her corn and beef. Australia would not be satisfied unless we lowered our rates on wool and mutton. Mexico would insist upon lower duties on cattle and vegetables, and the nations of the world would make similar demands.

Point three promises to raise domestic prices on farm products. This runs counter to Candidate Roosevelt's own statements that the farmer's hope is to be found in foreign markets. As a matter of fact, thanks to our tariff and standards of living, and despite world wide depression the prices paid for farm products in our home markets is higher than it is in the other markets of the world.

This deceptive screed's fourth point declares that the Democrat candidate will put into effect a national land planning policy. Well, what of it? President Hoover and the United States Government has just such a project under way today. President Hoover has done what Candidate Roosevelt promises to do.

The fifth point in this remarkable advertisement tells all who read that the Democrat candidate will reduce and equalize land taxes. He has failed to do this in his own state, despite the fact that he has been Governor for over three and a half years. President Hoover advocated the reduction of land taxes long ago. He told the Governors of the several states that this should be done and urged that they take steps to do so. The United States Government does not collect land taxes in the several states. The states do. President Hoover stands pledged to continue his efforts to bring about a complete readjustment, not only of land taxes, but of other taxes as well.

The sixth and last point in this advertisement is typical of the Democratic party and worthy of Tammany Hall itself. It calls for the reorganization of the United States Department of Agriculture. Such a reorganization would do one thing well. It would give quite a few jobs to deserving Democrats. However, in view of the excellent work that the Department of Agriculture has done to aid the American farmer and to help him combat the things that injure his crops, the pests, blights and so forth, it is extremely difficult to see why the department should be reorganized except for job getting purposes.

Candidate Roosevelt should repudiate this advertisement. If he don't common sense will tell American farmers to repudiate him by their votes on Election Day.

GRAVER DANGERS THAN LOSS OF WEALTH

"There is no reason why we should worry about our material wealth," writes Senator Guy D. Goff, in the current issue of the National Republic, in an inspiring article entitled, "The Voice of Washington." "Language can not picture nor words paint the great wealth that has come to this nation. There are dangers ahead far greater than abundance of poverty—or the denial of certain rights. It is not what we have but what we are that measures our worthwhileness. There is not an adequate love of country, nor sufficient patriotic self-secrifice, nor an inborn heart's desire on the part of the majority of our citizens to take an active interest in public affairs. The men and women of this country are proud and honest. They love government and they respect its institutions, but in their ease and their radical comfort they forget that every gift is accompanied by an obligation to do. They are indifferent to the fact that public participation and public service, and personal domestic and family morality are absolutely necessary to the security of individual happiness and prosperity. They are too much absorbed in their own selfish affairs to love this blessed land of such dear souls and secred memories with a passion enduring when all other earthly desires have gone. They do not care enough for the priceless fabric of liberty transmitted to them as the most precious of heritages, and in the pursuit of their selfish aims they have become too envious, desirous and jealous even to care to serve the nation.

"We must substitute for this false, defective selfishness the undeniable truth that there can be no permanent prosperity for one class of our people at the expense of another class. We must teach those who do not know, as well as those who have forgotten, that democracy is no miracle worker, that it guarantees this and nothing more; that men of unequal ability shall be equal in their rights to develop their potentialities. We must insist that every avenue be open and every opportunity free. We must make the world a better place in which to live. We must improve the morals, conserve the health and advance the welfare of every man, woman, and child with whom we come in contact, and whose lives touch ours. We must soften the severity of labor and increase the reward of those who do the intelleetual as well as the manual work of the world. To fail in these things is to take the first long step back to despotism. To close our eyes to these eternal and moral voices is to approve a combination of the mediocre and the inferior, to the end that character, ability and morality shall be punished and restrained. Most men, aside from the lazy, the weak, the criminal, the defective and the tainted yearn for something that has the mark of personal ownership—something won by struggle—something to love and defend—to use and enjoy. Mankind wants a home, and all the virtues that cluster around it. This sentiment constitutes the poetry of life, and it dwells in humble surroundings just as much as it does in places of wealth and culture."

No new cases of scarlet fever have developed in the Accident community since the outbreak several weeks ago. A large majority of the pupils who had been absent from school for several weeks have returned and while all officials concerned feel that the situation is well in hand it is hoped that all pupils who remain out of school will return in the very near future as absence will certainly retard their progress in school work.

The Hallowe'en social which was to have been held in the school on Saturday night was postponed until later.

Cooking With Crackers

Crackers may be used in many economical dishes and are always helpful in serving left-overs.

Meat Loaf

One lb. chopped beef, 1 small onion, minced; 1 tsp. salt, ½ tsp. pepper, 2 eggs, 12 crackers, 1 cup canned tomatoes.

To meat, add onions, salt and pepper and eggs. Crumble crackers fine into meat mixture. Mix all together and shape into loaf. Place in a buttered mixing dish. Cover with tomatoes. Bake in a moderate over ½ hour, basting two or three times.

Scalloped String Beans

One cup string beans, 12 crackers crumbled, 2 tablespoons grated cheese, paprika, 1 teaspoon minced onion, 1½ cups thin white sauce, 1 tablespoon butter or bacon fat

Into a buttered baking dish put a cup of well seasoned, drained string beans and half the crumbled crackers. Sprinkle with half of the cheese. Add minced onion to sauce and pour half of it over bean-cracker mixture. Arrange the remaining ingredients in the same way. Dot with butter, sprinkle with paprika and bake in a very hot oven for 10 minutes.

Champion Cheese Chops

Three-fourths cup grated cheese, 2 eggs, beaten; 20 crackers, rolled; 2 teaspoons parsley, chopped; ¼ cup butter, 2 teaspoons mustard, salt and pepper.

Mix all ingredients, and shape like chops. Put a piece of macaroni in the small end to give the appearance of a bone. Fry in a small amout of hot butter or fat. Six chops.

Economy Pudding

Twenty crackers, 1 cup milk, ¾ cup brown sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon vanilla, ½ teaspoon cinnamon, 4 teaspoons baking powder, ¼ cup butter, 1 cup cooked prunes.

Crumble crackers, add milk and let soak about 5 minutes. Mix sugar, salt, cinnamon and baking powder and add cracker mixture. Add melted butter, prunes and vanilla and mix well. Butter mould and turn mixture into it. Steam over hot water from 1 to 1½ hours. Serve warm.

MT. LAKE PARK

Municipal Finances

An audit of the books of the town for the fiscal year ending September 30, has just been completed and ordered to be published.

The audit shows that the total valuation of real estate was placed at $488,066 and automobiles owned by residents is placed at $9,147. making a total of these two items, $497,213. The details may be studied by reference to the report in The Republican.

As will be noted there is a balance in the hands of the treasurer of approximately $103 which does not include any taxes collected for the year 1932, amounting to approximately $1,500.00. The publication of this audit is commendable. The taxpayers have a right to know how their money is being spent.

Taking No Chances With Fires

We are glad to note that leaves in many sections of the Park are being removed now. We ought not to wait to do this work until spring comes. The president of the American Tree Association in a recent address asserted that 98 per cent of woods fires are caused by human carelesness. We have nearly half a million dollars invested in property in the Park. Fallen leaves unremoved are a canstant menace and danger to this investment from a monetary standpoint and it also places the lives of those residing in the Park in jeopardy.

Allegheny Tableland Plans

Allegheny Tableland plans for next year are already being discussed and they sound good. Just what arrangements can be made to carry them into effect remains to be seen. The clouds of depression seem to be lifting and by the time spring rolls around the prospects for a bigger and better program may materialize. Hope springs eternal.

Lights Cut Off From Streets

"Now is the winter of our discontent," made more so by the taking off of a number of the summer lights from various streets. Well, I suppose we have no business trapisin' around at night, anyway.

Birds of the Wild Still Here

We have recently noticed a number of specimens of the Arctic three-toed woodpecker, a milion or so English sparrows (did you know there were approximately 50 varieties of sparrows in the United States?), a few blue jays and some yellow breasted sapsuckers in the Park during the past week. Wo don't know whether this is common or not, but we hope their late presence portends an open and mild winter.

Work On New Road Progressing

For the benefit of our friends who have been divorced—from the Park—and are now living separate and apart from us, we will state that the new road up the glade toward Deer Park, or at least the first unit, is being graded as rapidly as the weather will permit. The weather, by the way, has been just a little "soft," and darned chilly these past few days.

Welfare Branch Established

A welfare branch has been established here and is located in the office of the Mayor and Council in the C. P. Martin & Son building. Supplies are being received and we understand several applications for relief have been listd. These are trying times. May they soon pass!

Personal and General Mention

Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Higginbotham and sons, and Mrs. Maude Fawcett, of Fairmont, were guests in the Park on Sunday.

Mrs. Lydia Malone and daughter, Mrs. A. L. Sanders and Mr. Harry Clinton, all of Baltimore, spent Friday in the Park as guests of friends.

Mrs. Richard Cale, of Terra Alta, was visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Comerford, the past week.

Mr. Shoup and family, Pittsburgh, are spending a short time in their cottage, "Sunset," in the Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred. C. Fleming have been in Fairmont for a few days.

Mrs. Daisy B. Hicks and son Robert have closed their cottage and returned to their home in Moundsville, West Va.

Mr. J. L. Grimes, of Fairmont, is here for a short stay.

Superintendent H. R. Laughlin and family, of Cumberland, spent Sunday in the Park.

Mrs. J. L. Rodgerson, of Moundsville, W. Va., was a guest at "The Colonial" this week.

Mrs. J. W. Traver and son William are spending a few days in Marietta, Ohio, where they are guests of Mrs. Roscoe Brown.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Killius and son Albert, of Springs, Pa., and Noah Bittner and son, of Accident, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Killius in Loch Lynn Heights.

KEMPTON

A Hallowe'en social was held in the Kempton theatre on Saturday night for the benefit of the local school. Refreshmetns were sold by the teachers and a bingo stand was conducted by Mr. Lewis and Mr. Kesner. A large crowd turned out and prizes were given to those wearing the most comical and the best costumes. Prizes were won by Miss Ruth Dilgard, Mrs. B. F. Willis, Maxine Dilgard and Jack Duling.

Miss Lena Speicher visited her sister, Miss Kathryn Speicher, over the week-end.

Mr. J. E. Grimes is visiting his daughter, Mrs. B. F. Willis.

Miss Elsie Proud spent the week-end with Miss Audrey Sowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Asa Lewis, Mrs. G. P. Smith, Miss Kathryn Speicher and Miss Lena Speicher were recent visitors in Oakland.

Mr. Thomas, of Henry Road, died of dropsy at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Lewis Pifer, on Sunday. He was aged 84 years. Funeral services were held Tuesday at Fairview. He is survived by two daughters and one son.

UNDERWOOD

Henry Hauser and Harry Nicholson went to Cumberland Memorial Hospital where Harold Hauser is a patient, he having recently undergone an operation for sinus trouble.

Mr. and Mrs. Webster Ashby announced the birth of a son on October 18, at Memorial Hospital, Cumberland.

Mr. and Mrs. John DeWitt recently announced the birth of a daughter at their home in Crellin.

The Nicholson children are all ill of tonsilitis and influenza.

Mrs. Dorsey Ashby and Mrs. Cornelia Friend were guests of the Nicholson family on Tuesday.

Mrs. L. C. Nine is ill.

On Saurday a baby beef in the pasture of Sam Barkman was killed, dressed and hauled off by an unknown party. It is thought it was done by one living outside the community as such an event is unusual in the community of Underwood. The ealf was nine months old and was about ready to be slaughtered.

We Cannot Afford To Change

There is no more insidious propaganda in the world than that developed by defeatism. The defeatist spreads not only discouragement but discontent. His words, though not the flaming crimson of the toreador's cape, are tinged with pink. Defeatism is the whip-lash used on the back of the man who is already down. It has no mercy. The man who preaches it has neither fairness nor sense. His arguments are based on false doctrine. His assertions are the smoke rings blown from cheap tobacco. They evaporate quickly, but leave in the nostrils a most unpleasant stench.

The watchword of this tawdry philosopher today is "We need a change." If the voting citizen whom he assails with this sophistry will but examine the record of the Hoover Administration for the last three years, he will see the fallacy of this defeatist's argument.

We are traveling along a highway in a powerful automobile, gathering momentum as we go until we reach a highly accelerated rate of speed and suddenly the tire blows. The car swerves to the side of the road—and it is only due to the ingenuity of the driver that we are not wrecked or killed. We climb out of the tonneau, frightened and cowed. Our nervous system is intensely aware of itself. We even become panicky. We stand shivering at the road side, blue and discouraged. Our trip is ruined, time is uncertain and the future looks black.

But we watch the driver. He is going about his job, steadily and methodically, righting the car, removing the flattened tire, replacing it with a solid one. He is surrounded with wrenches, screwdrivers, jacks and many strange looking implements not understandable to our lay minds. But we realize that the man in charge of operations is gradually getting things back in shape so that we can continue on our way. Do we change this man? Do we insist that a passer-by take charge? Of course not. We allow the man we chose in the first place to carry on and finish the job he has shown by his ability he is able to do.

This is an excellent example of the state our nation has been in for the last three years. We have struggled through the throes of depression and are now on the road to recovery. The man who is at the helm has brought us through this terrific economic struggle with a steady hand and a steadier eye. Not once has he wavered. Now that the trend has turned back to normality, slow as the process may seem, it certainly is not the time to change the man in control of the situation.

It is too late now for the insidious insinuations of the professional croakers and misery singers to break down our morale by the use of a fallacious slogan. We have confidence and faith in the man who is doing the job. We know now that we have at our command the perfect answer to the defeatist: "We cannot afford to change."

PRESIDENT HOOVER has overcome the FORCES that almost destroyed INDUSTRY and EMPLOYMENT. His efforts to start the Country back to work are showing RESULTS. . . . . .

Allegany, Garrett and Calvert Go For Hoover—Only Two for Smith Four Years Ago

Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt's majority in the Democratic landslide which swept Maryland in Tuesday's election, with returns complete in the State's Presidential vote, last night reached a total of 129,983.

Senator Tydings beat his Republican opponent, State Senator Wallace Williams, by a margin of 153,305 to establish a record for majorities in Maryland.

City Majority 80,956

President Hoover carried only three of the twenty-three counties—Allegany, Garrett and Calvert. The majority for the Democratic national ticket in Baltimore city alone was 80,956. Smith lost Baltimore to President Hoover in 1928 by 9,076 votes, and carried only two counties—Queen Anne's and St. Mary's, losing the State to Hoover by 77,853 votes.

The Roosevelt majorities in the counties Tuesday, as compared with the Hoover majorities in 1928, were:

Coolidge Won By 14,342

In the 1924 national election Maryland went Republican by 14,342, giving Coolidge a vote of 162,414 to 148,072 for Cox. The Republicans carried Maryland for Harding in 1920 by 55,491, the Republican candidate polling 236,117 votes to 180,626 for Cox.

In Tuesday's election President Hoover polled 37,197 fewer votes than were cast for Smith in Maryland in his contest with the President in 1928. The total Smith vote was 223,626, while Hoover received 186,429 Tuesday.

To Wield Much Influence

Senator Tydings in an interview yesterday said he would not hold out too many promises but he wouldn't be surprised if beer is legalized at the short session of Congress, which begins in December, and "if it doesn't come then I feel sure it will win in the following session."

Senator Tydings is expected to wield considerable influence in molding the Democratic policies in the next session of Congress. He took an active part in consideration of the last revenue bill. With the reorganization of the Senate, he probably will become chairman of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

To Back Wet Move

Representative Vincent L. Palmisano, Third district, and William P. Cole, Jr., Second district, said they believed modification of the Volstead act was inevitable in the Seventy-third Congress and that any movement in that direction would receive their wholehearted support.

Representative David J. Lewis, of the Sixth (Western Maryland) district, said he believed there was "a good chance of getting beer back" next year if a special session of Congress is called." He said revision of the tariff laws is necessary to relieve the "economic stagnation" of the country.

Motorists Slow In Getting Automobiles Inspected

Although there are but three weeks left in which to have automobiles inspected, only 75,000 motorists in the state have had their cars approved, according to the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles. This is about 125,000 less than the number which should have been inspected by this time, it was estimated. There are 332,140 Maryland cars.

UNEMPLOYMENT SURVEY COMPLETED IN SCHOOLS

Teachers Send in Reports on Unemployed and Needy School Children of Their Communities

APPOINT SOCIAL WORKER

A report, one hundred percent in that each school teacher in Garrett county sent in information, has been compiled by Miss Anita J. Faatz, Baltimore, State supervisor of social welfare and Field Worker of the Governor's Advisory committee on Unemployment, through cooperation with the county board of education, and has been turned over to the county commissioners of the county stating that 297 families are totally unemployed and that 167 school children are absent from school because of lack of shoes or clothing.

That other families needed assistance and that 114 more children urgently needed clothing although they were in school at the time the report was made were also included in the information handed to the commissioners.

As a result, the County Commissioners appointed a committee to recommend a temporary fieldworker to supervise distribution of relief among school children. The committee was composed of F. E. Rathbun, Mrs. E. Z. Tower, Charles Ream, and Rev. W. B. Brock. W. W. Dawson, another member of the committee, was unable to be present at a meeting on Tuesday, at which time Mrs. E. Z. Tower was named as temporary relief worker, until January, 1933, when the State Legislature meets.

Mrs. Tower will have $300 from the Red Cross and $300 from the County Commissioners to expend on shoes and clothing for school children. In each a personal investigation must be made and a report made to the County Commissioners as to the disposition in the matter. This fund will be used only for school children, it was emphasized.

The report gave the following statistics: families totally unemployed, 297, in which there are 1,732 persons.

Families in which wage earners are working one or two days a week, 281, involving 1,650 persons.

Families in which wage earners are working three or four days a week, 252, involving 1,630 persons.

Total unemployed or underemployed, 830, involving 4,982 persons; total number of families in danger zone, that is, either totally unemployed, or underemployed, with large families, 628.

The figures given in the report did not include the farm families who are poor who will need assistance. Twenty-six families of this type were reported. Families without children are not included in the survey.

Held for Carrying Away Keg of Cider

Vincent Casey, William Guthrie, and Walter Reall are being held on the charge of carrying away 10 gallons of cider and one bushel of apples from a cellar of A. G. Cullers, Germania. Casey and Guthrie waived a hearing, and Reall has not been given a hearing up to the present time.

Reconsiders Resignation

Mrs. Samuel Cole, who recently resigned her position as county health nurse, to take effect November 1, has reconsidered her action and will remain as a member to the State department of health.

RED CROSS ROLL CALL TO BEGIN ON ARMISTICE DAY

National Red Cross Already Has Sent Much Money and Clothing Into Garrett County

QUOTA THIS YEAR IS $600

With the advent of the annual Red Cross roll call tomorrow, an appeal for members is being made by Mrs. Samuel Cole, county chairman this year, and all other community chairmen who are assisting in the attempt to raise the quota of $600, set by the National Headquarters.

Inasmuch as fifty percent of the amount collected remains within the county, it was hoped that the entire amount would be raised. For the past two years, Garrett county has fallen short of her quota by a small margin.

This year a very special appeal is made for generosity in paying dues to the Red Cross and in making larger donations to the work than membership fees. Need for Red Cross funds this winter will be unusually great. Since many children will be unable to attend school unless they are provided with shoes and other clothing, the Garrett County Chapter of the Red Cross has pledged three hundred dollars to help in securing these necessities, and our County Commissioners will appropriate a like sum for the same purpose.

Already the national Red Cross has sent for distribution among the needy in our county twenty thousand yards of clothing material; large shipments of stocking and ready-made clothes will be here soon. In all, during this year of great need, thru the American Red Cross, many thousand dollars worth of food and clothing for destitute people have been received.

The drive will continue until Thanksgiving Day. Those who contribute will be given a button, a receipt and a Red Cross sign for their window.

Jolly Junior 4-H Club Conducts Achievement Program

The Jolly Junior 4-H club of Loch Lynn held its annual Achievement Day program Monday night, November 7. Miss Mildred Ford, local leader, of the group, arranged and directed the program.

The club has on its roll the youngest 4-H members in the county yet they have achieved a high standard of work for their age. Besides learning to sew the girls have carried the flower gardening project.

A group of fifty parents, friends, and club members were present. Junior Extension certificates were awarded to Dorothy Kesner, Helen Liller, and Rosemary Simpson for completing the above project.

The exhibit held in connection with the achievement Day consisted of work boxes, aprons and canning.

REPUBLICAN MAJORITIES CAST IN GARRETT COUNTY

Leads in Other Western Maryland Counties Brings Victory to Democratic Candidates

BOND ISSUE IS DEFEATED

Although failing to carry the State of Maryland, President Hoover was given a majority of 721 in Garrett county, in unofficial returns, at the election on Tuesday, while Republican candidates for the United States Senate and House of Representatives were given the edge over their Democratic opponents. The leads acquired in Garrett county, however, were not sufficient to elect the candidates and the majorities in other counties of Maryland for the Democratic Senator Tydings and Representative Lewis put them back in office for another term.

The total vote cast for President in Garrett county was slightly over six thousand, or 62 per cent of those registered and eligible to vote. President Hoover received 2,946 of these as compared with 2,225 for Roosevelt. The President-elect carried the second precinct of Friendsville District, Accident, Johnson's, The Elbow and the third precinct of District No. 14—Oakland. Other districts in the county remained faithful to the Republican candidates.

Wallace Williams, Republican candidate for the United States Senate, although having a majority of 483 in this county, was defeated by Millard E. Tydings, the present incumbent. Tydings carried Accident, Kempton, Johnson's, The Elbow, Kitzmiller and the third precinct of District No. 14.

By unofficial returns Harold C. Smith, Republican candidate for Representative in Congress, had a majority of 78 in Garrett county, but lost out in other counties of the Sixth Congressional district. Ballots cast for the Senatorial candidates and the House of Repersentatives' candidates were only about half the votes cast for President. Smith lost Swanton District, first precinct of Friendsville, Jennings, Bloomington, Accident, Kempton, Johnson's, Deer Park, The Elbow, Kitzmiller and the first and third precincts of No. 14.

School Bond Issue Defeated

The school bond issue, which sought to bond the county in the sum of $150,000 for the purpose of building and equipping public school buildings, was defeated by a twenty-five to one vote is the estimate made yesterday, unofficial, however, which result was expected by both Republicans and Democrats.

Unofficial returns in tabulated form will be found on another page of The Republican today. The official returns will be printed next Thursday, the canvass of votes being under way as this paper is being printed and will not be completed until very late this evening.

200 Attend Socialist Meeting

Dr. Robert T. Kerlin, of Potomac State College, Keyser, West Va.; Mrs. W. Thompson Burch, of Loch Lynn, and William Munro, of Cumberland, spoke at the Maryland Theatre last Sunday afternoon at a meeting called by Socialists of the community. Approximately two hundred persons attended.

DESIRE FOR GOVERNMENTAL CHANGE BROUGHT THE GREATEST VOTE TO THE POLLS IN NATION'S HISTORY

Every State But Six Gave Majorities To Roosevelt, Bringing His Electoral Vote to Record of 472 Against President Hoover's 59 Votes In The Nation—Votes Necessary To Elect 266.

OLD LEADERS IN CONGRESS ARE DEEPLY BURIED UNDER LANDSLIDE

Democrats Won 18 Gubernatorial Contests With 11 Still In Doubt—Socialist Balloting Gains Over Last Presidential Election

The revolution at the polls which elevated Franklin D. Roosevelt to the presidency and cut down Republican office holders was emphasized by late election tabulations.

The figures told the story of an electorate so determined upon a change that it braved almost every variety of weather to register the greatest popular vote ever known, millions higher than the outpouring drawn by the intensity of the 1928 campaign.

President Hoover saw every state west of the Alleghenies turn against him. Only Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Delaware, New Hampshire, Vermont and Maine kept the Republican faith. Roosevelt's electoral vote reached a new high figure of 472. Mr. Hoover had 59. For election 166 were necessary. Hoover received 444 four years ago.

Michigan went Democratic. So did Iowa, birthplace of Herbert Hoover; California, where he lives; Kansas, home of Vice President Curtis, and among others, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Minnesota.

That was only part of a country-wide political upheaval. The result was substantially the same whether one looked at the Senate, the House, gubernatorial races or even returns affecting prohibition.

Political old timers blinked as they tried to envision a Senate without such captains of the Republican old guard as "Jim" Watson, of Indiana, Reed Smoot, of Utah, George Moses, of New Hampshire, and Hiram Bingham, of Connecticut. All beaten by Democrats. Add to them another veteran, Senator Wesley Jones, of Washington. The eloquence of Senator Borah in Idaho apparently failed to save his Republican colleague, Senator John Thomas.

The opposition of anti-prohibition organizations and of devoted followers of Al Smith, combined with the ordinary Republican opposition, did not prevent William Gibbs McAdoo from winning easily in California.

There were 34 Senate seats at issue. The Democrats captured 25 of these to give them 56 seats in the 73rd Congress. The Republicans took five. The others were still doubtful.

On the house side, already democratic, the tale of Republican disaster was repeated. The winners have 218 seats there now. They are certain of about 260 after next March 4—and 78 house races are still in doubt.

The aggressive and independent LaGuardia, of New York side, often voted with House Democrats but the label, Republican, seemed too much for him to overcome. A Democrat will take his place.

Ruth Baker Pratt, of New York, lost to a Democrat. Republican floor leader, Snell, was reelected, however, from upstate New York.

Democrats Win State Contests

The tabulations tell another sad Republican story in the gubernatoral races. There were elections in 34 states. The Democrats won 18 of these and on the basis of votes compiled late Wednesday were leading in eleven others. They displaced eight Republicans. Floyd B. Olson, farmer-labor was elected in Minnesota.

The Kansas Democratic trend reversed in choosing a state chief executive, however, and a Republican was leading Governor Woodring, surprising many who felt the choice would be the goat gland specialist, John H. Brinkley, independent.

In Wisconsin, the combinations of Progressives and Democrats not only carried the state for Roosvelt but elected a Democratic senator and governor, beating Walter J. Kohler for the state office.

Bitterness Almost Forgotten

Characteristic of the paradoxes of American politics, most of the anger and bitterness of the preelection campaign seemed already dissipated.

Following a sportsman's tradition, President Hoover waited only until he was certain he was beaten to send his congratulations to Governor Roosevelt.

The latter, elated but sobered, too, by the responsibility so vigorously thrust upon him, expressed his appreciation for the president's mes-

Airplane Pilot Brought Back on Bad Check Charge

Edwin Kenneth Reese, Dayton, O., airplane pilot who wrecked his plane just south of town during the month of August, and who is charged with passing a worthless $50 check here, was brought to Oakland early this morning by Clarene Spear, deputy, and lodged in the county jail.

He was arrested in Dayton and held there by the police until Deputy Spear arrived. Reese waived extradition. He is alleged to have approximately $800 in worthless checks in various states.

MAKING A LIVING

Deuteronomy 24:14, 15; Amos 5:6-15; Mark 6:34; Luke 12:13-21; Luke 19:1-26; II Thessalonians 3:6-13; I Timothy 6:6-16.

GOLDEN TEXT—I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. Romans 12:1.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Idea of Being Rich.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Right Way to Make Money.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Right Ways of Earning Money.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Christian Spirit in Business.

I. Treatment of Hired Servants (Deut. 24:14, 15).

1. Oppression forbidden (v. 14). The man who hires out is usually poor. The employer should not take advantage of his condition.

2. Foreigners to have the same treatment as fellow countrymen (v.14). Those who fear God will accord the same treatment to foreigners as to their own countrymen.

3. Servants to be promptly paid (v. 15). The laborer was to be paid at the end of the day. The credit system in these times is greatly to be deplored.

II. Ill-Gotten Wealth (Amos 5:11-13).

1. By oppression of the poor (v. 11). The rich built magnificent houses of the proceeds extorted from the poor. They took the bread out of the mouths of the poor by high rents and taxes—a picture of the conditions of our own day. The prophet assured them that God would interpose saying that they built houses and planted vineyards, but they would not be privileged to live in them nor to drink of the wine thereof.

2. By affliction of the just (v. 12). This they did by taking bribes. Many are today living in luxury from the proceeds derived from bribes.

3. By turning aside the poor in the gates (vv. 12, 13). Because the poor had no money to hire advocates, they were turned aside. It is difficult today for the poor to get justice in the courts.

III. Jesus, the Carpenter (Mark 6:3).

While Joseph lived, doubtless Jesus assisted him in the carpenter trade. He is therefore known as the carpenter.

IV. The Rich Fool (Luke 12:13-21).

Many today are seeking gold and forgetting God. Those who are concerned with getting riches while neglecting God are displaying utter folly. Observe,

1. His increase in goods (v. 16). His riches were rightly obtained, for the ground brought forth plentifully. It is not sinful to be rich. The sin is sometimes in the use made of riches.

2. His perplexities (v. 17). His land was producing more than his barns would hold. He did not know what to do about it. Had he personally held right views of life and a sense of stewardship to God, he would have seen that his barns held enough for himself and a surplus for the poor.

3. His fatal choice (vv. 18, 19). He chose to enlarge his barns and to give up his life to ease and luxury.

4. The awful indictment (vv. 20, 21). God called him a fool. Riches furnish neither contentment in this life nor a guarantee of continuance of life. It is not only foolishness, but madness to forget God while heaping up riches.

V. Reward for Laborer (Luke 19:16-23).

When Christ ascended on high, he gave gifts to men (Eph. 4:7-12). At His return to the earth. He will summon his servants to give an account of their stewardship. He will give rewards for faithfulness (vv. 16-19) and will impose judgment and condemnation upon the faithless.

VI. The Man Who Will Not Work Should Not Eat (II Thess. 3:10).

Growing out of Paul's teaching concerning the coming of the Lord, a tendency to idleness developed at Thessalonica. Earnest attention to present duties is the Scriptural attitude toward the Second Coming of Christ. Those who will not work should not eat. This is the right principle governing all charitable work.

VII. Peril of Working for Money (I Tim. 6:6-11).

Those who are working for money fall into temptation and a snare, and are exposed to many foolish and hurtful lusts. The obligation is to flee these things and follow after righteousness.

No Comfort There

"When a sinner is dying, he finds no comfort in counting the hypocrites in the church."

True Happiness

Happy are they who have learned the art of abiding within the inviolable protection of the eternal God, the shield on which all arrows are hunted, all swords turned aside, all sparks of malice extinguished.

Fountain of Blessing

Change of circumstances should not affect a Christian's joy. He should be independent of life's sorrows and losses. Then he becomes also a fountain of blessing in the world.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

Win or lose, I guess I have a right to use that picture at the head of this column this week. And since this column is being written on Tuesday, (BVAC) before votes are counted, the privilege of guessing is still mine. But I won't bet.

"CROWS Cheer Roosevelt at Every Point," says a headlinc in the Democrat last week. Yes, but the real American eagles screamed.

The typewriter has been oiled for operation, but no words seem to come forth. If this stagnation of ideas keeps up, I'll have to send for a laboratory brain.

The election has brought about a valuable invention that might become a life-saver of either the Republican or Democratic party, depending upon which one got control of the manufncture. And since this invention was brought about at The Republican headquarters, the patent has been applied for under the elephantic party, and so the country is saved for another 17 years at least.

When in operation it works as follows: place in booth gently, a member of the Democratic party or Republican who has gone socialist or just bolted the organization. Shut door, making sure that gas is lit. Have Neil Fraley or Walter Dawson talk for five minutes, or if they are not available, get Major Hoople. It really doesn't matter who you get. The result will not be because of any outside interference. For no apparent reason at all, the person in booth will let go of chair and also his convictions. Operation may be repeated without danger. Will be found to be most effective right at voting booth.

The Watchdog of the County Found Asleep at the Switch

Coming to the end of this column, we beg to reassert that it is still Tuesday (BVAC) and we predict that the school bond issue doesn't get 200 votes in the entire county.

Which makes it nil very amusing as to why a man in this county would go to the extent of spending money to send out a circular letter telling people to beware of the bond issue.

As a matter of fact the people of the county have been thinking of the bond issue since the last session of the legislature when it was placed on the statute books.

Quoting a sentence from the letter it says, "The voters of Garrett county are not asleep at their post." This is absolutely right. But a resident of the county who is not even a registered voter, who claims to be the people's watchdog, was asleep. A complete story of the coming bond issue was printed on column one of The Republican, issue of March 26, 1931, but the watchdog asks "Why do they try to sneak this bond issue over on the voters of our county at the eleventh hour?" Evidently our watchdog does not use eastern standard time. In fact he talks of going back to 1894.

What a prophet we have in our midst. Our watchdog says, now that he has uncovered this "eleventh hour" coup of our county officials, that the voters will go out on Election Day and whip this bill to a frazzle. At least we agree on one thing.

At our next election, we really should vote on a county watchdog. These self-appointed ones might not win, if it was put to a vote of the people.

Added Tuesday night, Wednesday morning, or Thursday, it doesn't matter.—Evidently the people wanted a change in the country.

SMOOTH tires don't hold on wet pavement. Punctures are more dangerous when it's slippery. Changing tires is also dangerous and disagreeable. Better put on new Goodyears now—they'll protect you, save you money on repairs and delays, and still be like new when spring arrives.

MOUTH HYGIENE IMPLIES MORE THAN CLEANLINESS

Brushing Teeth Only Part of Job In Keeping Mouth Healthy

"When they speak of hygiene in connection with the mouth, most people limit the meaning of the term to 'cleanliness,' but oral hygiene, that is, mouth hygiene, implies a great deal more than merely brushing the teeth," Dr. Richard C. Leonard, Chief of the Division of Oral Hygiene of the Maryland State Department of Health said recently.

"Mouth hygiene," he continued, "means mouth health. The healthy mouth is one that is free from disease and that has adequate care and attention to keep it in proper condition. Since the mouth is the gateway of the body, it is of the utmost importance that it be regarded as a citadel that must be protected against hostile forces. If the citadel is weakened through the invasion of such forces the entire system may suffer. The hostile forces in this case are the disease producing germs that develop in the mouth, especially in the particles of food that cling to the teeth and gums. In this connection, it must be remembered that tooth decay is a disease, not a 'condition.'

"Cleanliness—regular brushing of the teeth and rinsing out the mouth several times a day with plenty of clean water—will help to protect the citadel from these insidious disease germs. But nearly every citadel requires constant supervision and attention in order that the structure itself may be kept equal to the demands upon it, and that needed repairs may be made promptly. The mouth is no exception to this rule. Cleanliness is an important line of defense, but a proper diet is equally important and regular dental supervision completes the protective trio.

"The power of resistance to tooth decay and to other diseases that affect the tissues of the mouth may be increased by a properly balanced diet. The early discovery of tooth decay and prompt repairing of the damaged structure are necessary to keep the citadel in good working condition and to maintain mouth health.

"Mouth health is so closely related to the general health that drastic measures are sometimes necessary. A tooth that has become abscessed as a result of accident or disease, is a menace and may be the source of a serious infection that makes itself felt in some part of the body quite remote from the mouth. A diseased tooth of this sort should be treated or extracted, according to the judgment of the family dentist.

"The chief duty of the teeth is to prepare the food for digestion. In order that this may be accomplished effectively, conditions in need of care must be attended to promptly; teeth lost by extraction must be replaced by artificial ones and in some mouths it is necasary for arches to be straightened so that the teeth may chew the food property. The healthy mouth is one that functions normally."

TABLELAND RALLY HUGE SUCCESS

By H. W. Correll, Secretary of the Allegheny Tableland Council of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce.

The Allegheny Tableland Convention in Pittsburgh on October 13, 14, and 15, was successful beyond the expectations of the Allegheny Tableland Council of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, which sponsored it.

Naturally it was believed that many agriculturists in the Tableland would avail themselves of the opportunity to show to Pittsburghers the products of their farms and homes; but those in charge of the fair, which was a feature of the occasion, were amazed as day after day entry forms came from all parts of the Allegheny Tableland until a total of more than one thousand individual entries were listed.

Farm agents from eight counties representing three states laid aside all thought of political boundaries and faced the fact that the people of their combined districts all faced the same marketing problems, and with commendable goodwill and helpfulness they worked hand in hand to stage an agricultural fair such as seldom if ever has been viewed in America. There have been county fairs, and state fairs; but this was an eight-county fair for the people of adjoining states.

The towns of the Tableland interested themselves to the end that their respective counties would have good displays, and the extension workers of the state colleges busied themselves so that their people would not be behind the residents of the neighboring states.

And then when the fair was at its height, they all met together with the people of Pittsburgh at a good-fellowship banquet in the Chamber of Commerce on Friday evening, October 14th, to get acquainted and have a general good time.

Mr. Ralph M., Johnston attended the convention on October 13 and 14 as official representative of the Commissioner of Agriculture of West Virginia; and Honorable John A. McSparron, Secretary of Agriculture of Pennsylvania, took time from his numerous duties to be with the visitors at the banquet on Friday evening. The presence of these officials greatly pleased the agriculturists, since it gave evidence of the interest their state officials take in their efforts to develop their land and reach a high standard in their produce.

* * * One hundred and seven individual prizes were given.

Big Attendance at Banquet

At the Good-fellowship Banquet, Mr. Walter Rosenbaum was toastmaster, and Mr. Burt Mustin was master of ceremonies. Since the affair was for the purpose of fostering friendship, those at the speakers' table extended a hearty welcome to the hundreds of Tableland visitors in the hall. The speakers were Mr. Thomas A. Dunn, President of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce; the Honorable John S. Herron, President of Pittsburgh City Council; Ralph B. Johnston, official representative of the Commissioner of Agriculture of West Virginia; the Honorable John A. McSparron, Secretary of Agriculture of Pennsylvania; and representing local department stores were C. J. Wolff, of Kaufmann's; C. A. Marsh, of Gimbel's; W. H. Burchfield, of Jos. Horne Co.; H. C. Engle, of McCreery's; Col. Franklin Blackstone, of Frank & Seder Co.; and W. H. Newmyer, of Boggs & Buhl. * * *

Tableland President Pleased

Speaking for the Allegheny Tableland Association, Mr. J. B. Watson, President of the organization, thanked the Pittsburgh group for the splendid opportunity offered for displaying Tableland produce and for the visitors, stating that he was certain that never again would there be any fear that the people of the eight Tableland counties would consider any other city than Pittsburgh as their trading center.

His remark drew attention to the purpose of the entire Allegheny Tableland movement, which originated about two years ago in the Tableland, where the leading agriculturists and business men realized that marketing problems of all the Tableland counties were the same. They organized with the resolve that county and state lines were to be forgotten, and that they would work for the good of the entire area.

How Tableland Movement Rose

A communication was sent to the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, representing that in the past the Tableland people had made Philadelphia, Baltimore and other eastern cities their trading centers, but that now, with good roads and automobiles, it would be much more advantageous to come to Pittsburgh. The Association asked that the Chamber of Commerce help them to become acquainted with Pittsburgh business men and organizations.

Much publicity has been given to the bus tours which left the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce during the past summer to carry business men and women to the Allegheny Tableland to get acquainted with the potential customers who were knocking at the door; and those who went know that results have already been seen in the opening of new accounts in local stores and in visits from Tablelanders who seldom before had visited Pittsburgh.

Therefore, Mr. Watson spoke truly when he said that now the people of the city and the people of the Tableland were not merely neighbors—they are friends.

Following Mr. Watson's brief remarks was an elaborate stage show put on by radio stations WWSW, KQV, WJAS, and KDKA. * * * *

An indication of the effect produced upon the people of the Allegheny Tableland region of Western Pennsylvania, Maryland, and West Virginia by the affair is contained in a telegram received by Thomas A. Dunn, president of the Chamber of Commerce, from Garrett County's Commercial Club of Oakkland, Maryland, which says:

"Any doubt that may have been in the minds of the citizens of Garrett county regarding the success of the Tableland Fair most certainly has been dispelled. Only loud acclaim and enthusiastic boosting is to be heard from those who visited the booths and displays while in your city. That cooperation between Pittsburgh and the Tableland area is no longer a myth, and that the potential possibilities of such cooperation are in evidence so overwhelming that even the most skeptical sees and seeing believes, has been the result of this Fair. No one event or act in the Tableland movement has so convincingly proved that Pittsburgh is our neighbor, our friend, and our helper, and that joined hands will mean much to both Pittsburgh and the Tableland. That busy men take time for these things transforms your city from massive piles of steel and stone to a group of human hearts working and striving, as we are, for better things. Our wish, our hope and our determined purpose in that through these delightful contacts and associations there shall be formed a mutual, helpful attitude that shall link together your city and our area in efforts of progress that will result in great things for all. Again thanking you for your splendid work and assuring you that we unreservedly pledge our efforts for a greater Pittsburgh and a greater Tableland, we are cordially yours,

Garrett County's Commercial Club
of Oakland, Md.,

THE TIDAL WAVE

What swept over the country Tuesday was plainly no ordinary ebb and flow of partisanship. Here was a tidal wave of popular emotion demanding a change. Beneath its flood the familiar landmarks of party lines vanished. The matter which normally decide elections—the merits of the candidates, the debate of policies, allegiance to party—were forgotten.

In a very real sense the country experienced a final upheaval from the World War. Remote as those destructive years are in time, their mark is still heavy upon the world. Fundamentally the whole world depression was due to its dislocations and Tuesday's balloting was the depression's own child. What was recorded was a blind protest against forces of destruction that defied precise analysis and for which there is no simple remedy—save time. In the mood of Tuesday's voting there was room for neither patience nor reflection.

These forces have swept round the world leaving a trail of revolution and bloodshed in their wake. It is a tribute to the stability of American institutions that Tuesday's great overturn took place amid complete order and entirely within the letter and spirit of the Constitution. Americans without regard to party can be supremely thankful for the admirable structure of their government and they have a right to be proud of the admirable temper of the nation in the darkness of unemployment and hardship.

Mr. Hoover labored manfully to win the voters from their resolve. We have said and we still believe that he was right. In our judgment, Tuesday's verdict did a gross injustice to an able President, which history will not be slow to reject. But no one can remonstrate with a cataclysm. Plainly the Republican case was hopeless from the start.

The depression was the major cause of the result. Yet we think that the prohibition issue must be ranked as a contributing cause. With some of the driest spots in the Union going for Governor Roosevelt, the folly of placing any reliance on the dry vote cannot be missed. The truth is that in respect to this vital issue, Mr. Hoover lagged months behind the sentiment of the nation. He failed to appreciate the strength of the evidence against prohibition which was first summed up in the Wickersham report and which has since become overwhelming. Rightly or wrongly, wet voters felt that Mr. Hoover did not realize the difficulties in the way of retaining any degree of Federal regulation and they were loath to intrust the task of repeal to his leadership.

A difficult four months lies ahead. The more cooperation there can be between the parties and between their leaders the better for the country. The national welfare must come first in this difficult winter. We hope that the bitterness of the late campaign will be buried promptly and that a united nation will carry on through these months of strain and want.

To Governor Roosevelt we extend our congratulations and our good wishes for a happy and successful administration. He should have the sincere support of every loyal American. Much as we regret Mr. Hoover's defeat we are glad to see a New Yorker bearing a name that is a symbol of stanch Americanism the country over. We can think of no better wish to make for the Governor than that he may live up to it.—New York Herald Tribune.

ARMISTICE DAY

It's so easy to forget; and 1918 was 14 long years ago.

Yet there are some things that we must never let ourselves forget. And Armistice Day brings some of them to our minds.

There is no danger, of course, that we will actually forget the war. But already the details of it are getting a bit hazy to some of us; already memory is beginning to play her old trick of softening the harsh outlines of past events and bathing unpleasant happenings in a soft, rosy light that makes them seem actually enjoyable, in retrospect.

When the average non-combatant thinks of war, for instance, what are his emotions? He thinks of the easy money that prevailed then. He thinks of the waving flags, of the pleasant, spine-tingling thrills of patriotism that came to him so often. He thinks of the wave of idealism that swept the land in those days under which the humblest citizen could feel that he was part of a great army of brothers. All in all, the war doesn't seem half bad, in retrospect.

And the former service man; how does he feel about it?

As like as not he, too, has memories that, on the whole, are not unpleasant. The horror and the terror that were part of his life do not intrude themselves so much nowadays. Instead he remembers the easy comradeship, the happy-go-lucky good fellowship of the army.

Yet the fourteenth anniversary of the war is a good day for jogging our memories, for reminding ourselves that the war wasn't all skittles and beer.

War is quite all that General Sherman said it is, and a casual inspection of one's memories of the days of 1917 and 1918 will bear out that statement.

The non-combatant might recall the daily casualty lists; the worry and the anxiety over absent loved ones; the unsightly spectacle of profiteers waxing fat on the situation that was bringing grief and destruction to all of Europe; the sky-rocketing prices, so often rising faster than wages and salaries rose.

And the soldier might recall—well, he knows what scenes of horror he can turn his mind to, without our telling him. He can recall the mud, the filth, the hard-boiled officers, the machine guns, the shrapnel and the rest; and he knows that, however many tricks his memory may play on him, these things were not pleasant.

Such are the memories we might stir up for Armistice Day. And why?

Simply to remind ourselves that we went through a terrible experience a few years ago, and that experience had a definite purpose. If we pledge ourselves again to the task of seeing to it that that purpose—the bringing of freedom and peace closer to every man on earth—is brought nearer fulfillment, it will be well. If we do not, our memories may rise to torture us again.

FOREIGN PROPAGANDA

During the World War and especially before the United States entered into the conflict, the American people were flooded with all sorts of foreign propaganda, designed to win the sympathy of the nation to one side or the other. There was British propaganda, French propaganda, German propaganda and Austrian propaganda. That a great deal of this propaganda was effective goes without saying. The American people at that time were not so well acquainted with European diplomacy as they are today. It took a long and costly war, followed by a slow and painful reconstruction to convince them of the fact that the less interest America took in European politics the better off it would be.

It should not be believed that the depression has ended the work of the foreign propaganda artists in the United States. They are still at work, busily at work. Some of them want Uncle Sam in the League of Nations and others are concerned about the cancellation of the World War debt. Some of the propaganda is so skilfully devised that it seems to be coming from purely American sources, but if we could get under the surface we would find that a great deal of it, in fact nearly all of it, has foreign inspiration.

The attempt has not been given up either, of interesting America in the purely political problems of Europe. One of the fertile subjects of foreign propaganda now is the Polish corridor. Only recently there was sent out an imposing looking pamphlet on the "Polsh Corridor," written by one "Observer," and calculated to enlist the sympathies of the American reader in the cause of Poland and why that nation should be guaranteed permanent occupation of the corridor. Doubtless if search was made, abundant propaganda could be found on the other hand, purporting to show that the corridor should be given back to Germany. No nation has a corner on the suhject of propaganda.

The example is cited to show that the efforts to get America entangled in the political problems of Europe have never been given up. If we had joined the League or had plunged into the World Court without safeguarding reservations there is no doubt that we would be by this time "up to our necks", so to speak, in European political problems. One of the most ticklish of these is the Polish Corridor problem which threatens some of these days to plunge Europe into war again. It is a question in which America has no interest one way or the other, and it is up to Europe to solve it. Uncle Sam has troubles enough of his own, and trouhles which require his entire attention. And the best assurance he has that he can stay at home and mind his own business is that he is not disposed to join any super-organization of the world governments.

THE WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

Since the days of Benjamin Franklin no bit of literature has visited so many rural homes as the weekly or home newspaper. For generations it was regarded by its avid readers as the symposium of all the worthwhile news, and its editorial page expressed views on current topics that were generally accepted as crystalized public opinion.

Editors of the publications have, with few exceptions, been men and women of high moral character and sharp intellect. Above all, they possessed uncanny knowledge of human nature. They correctly opine that an occasional paucity of editorial thought is easily compensated by a plentitude of comment on personal happenings among their clientele.

To see it chronicled in the local paper that Mary Jones was a visitor in Smithville on a certain day arouses more personal interest in the Jones family than did the recent assassination of the president of France. County editors know that in satisfied personal pride and vanity resides much of the popularity of the weekly press.

But the weekly newspaper has and performs a higher mission. Its editor lives in close social and intellectual communion with the people he serves. This intimate contact enables him correctly to anticipate and appraise public sentiment and to direct aml mould that sentiment in its incipency in the right direction.

This is an opportunity and responsibility which only good men and good women should have. While rural mail delivery has given wider circulation to daily newspapers and the radio carries intelligence to the uttermost parts of the globe, the home paper, whether weekly, semi-weekly, or bi-weekly, still has a welcome and an influence in the average home. It typifies and represents that sincere personal interest one feels in people and things around him a moral and mental attitude upon which Christianity and civilization are founded. —Journal. At the Helm—In Time of Need!

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

Charles West and Scott Shreve, of Deer Park, were convalescent from an attack of typhoid fever. W. C. Jones, merchant of Deer Park, was ill of the same disease.

Fire was raging to an alarming extent on the mountains between Altamont and Piedmont. The atmosphere around Oakland was hazy and almost entirely hid the sun.

George M. Mason arranged to have a first class roller flour mill in operation in Oakland soon.

John Stevens, east Oakland, while down in a well which he was digging at the C. C. Michael residence, was struck by an iron bound bucket used in hauling out the dirt. His skull was cracked.

The stage in Offutt's hall was decorated with palms, blooming plants, bunting, flags and life size portraits of Mr. Harrison, Mr. Reed and Mr. Wellington, for the largest political meeting ever known in Oakland.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Charles F. White, who secured the fallen timber in the Oakland hotel grounds from the B. and O., moved his sawmill from near Hutton and began operations.

The death of James Sherman, vice-president of the United States, was recorded.

B. and O. brakeman, Gaither R. Moody, who was struck by a westbound passenger train at Deer Park, died at the Home Sanitarium here.

T. B. Doman installed the latest roller process for buckwheat in his mill at Mt. Lake Park, and was running 18 hours every day.

In the high school notes it stated the juniors were looking forward to Hallowe'en as a night of study.

W. R. Offutt and family moved to their new home on Second street.

Mrs. Harry Rasche visited relatives at Uniontown, Pa.

The musical comedy, "Mut and Jeff," was advertised to be shown at the Maryland theatre.

HEALTH CONDITIONS ARE FAVORABLE IN MARYLAND

Fewer Deaths Reported During Nine Months' Period of 1932

Reports of the State Department of Health for the nine months ending on September 30, show that health conditions as indicated by the general death rate and the infant death rate have been unusually favorable during the current year. There were 15,623 deaths reported—923 fewer than were reported during the corresponding period of 1931. Of the total during the current year, 7,933 occurred in Baltimore City, and 7,703 in the counties. There were fewer births reported than during the corresponding period of 1931—22,287 in comparison with 22,198 during the first nine months of 1931, but there were fewer infant deaths in proportion to the number of births, 1,456 infant deaths being reported in comparison with 1,718 in 1931. Of the infant deaths reported during the crurrent year, 630 occurred in Baltimore City, and 826 in the counties. During the corresponding period of 1931, 767 infant deaths were reported from Baltimore City and 951 from the counties. Of the total births reported during the current year, 10,828 occurred in Baltimore City and 11,459 in the counties.

In pointing out the significance of some of the figures, Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health said: "Two of the yardsticks used in measuring the health of a community are the general death rate and the death rate of infants. Both rates have reached unusually low levels this year. The general death rate for the entire State for the last five years has ranged from 13.2 to 13.6 in every thousand of the population. The general death rate for the entire State for the nine months ending on September 30, was 12.5 in every thousand of the population,—the lowest figure we have ever been able to reach for the entire State. The rate for the corresponding period of last year was 13.4.

"The infant death rate for the first nine months of the current year was 65.3 in comparison with 77.4 of the corresponding period of last year. This means that during the current year there were 65 deaths under one year to every thousand live births, and that last year, there were 77 infant deaths to every thousand live births."

The records show that there were 3,159 deaths from heart disease in comparison with 3,220 during the corresponding period of last year, 1200 of pneumonia in comparison with 1649 during the first nine months of 1931; 1161 of tuberculosis in comparison with 1222 in 1931; 995 from diseases of the digestive system in comparison with 1106 in 1931; and 106 maternal deaths in comparison with 141 during the corresponding period of 1931. Two of the leading causes of death which showed an increase were cancer and diabetes. There were 1438 deaths from cancer in comparison with 1383 last year, and 320 from diabetes in comparison with 274 last year.

The deaths from heart diseases, nephritis, cancer, cerebral hemorrhage, pneumonia, tuberculosis and diabetes, reached a total of 10,314 and constituted two thirds of the total deaths from all causes and in all age groups.

AIRPLANES WILL COLLECT LEGION MEMBERS' CARDS

Membership Drive Continues—To Hold Rally at Friendsville

Six Maryland National guard planes will leave Baltimore on Monday to visit every American Legion district in the State and collect their membership cards, it was announced by Brig. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, adjutant general of Maryland and State commander of the Legion. The plane is scheduled to come to Oakland on Tuesday.

The purpose of the airplane collection is to enable General Reckord and Arthur L. McGee, State adjutant to go to the annual meeting of State commanders and adjutants at Indianapolis November 16, with latest figures on Maryland membership.

That this year's membership would exceed that of last year in the local American Legion post, was predicted by Joseph M. Gonder, post commander. The membership drive does not end until January, but the cards are being collected next week in order that Maryland can make a complete report as possible at Indianapolis. Mr. Gonder urges all legionaires to join immediately and notify their team captains, Clarence Spear or Samuel Cole, before Monday evening, so that the local post's record will be available when the plane arrives.

To Hold Rally

A membership rally for all ex-service men will be held at Friendsville on Wednesday, November 16. The Legion drum and bugle corps will participate.

SIX ARRESTED IN LIQUOR RAIDS DURING WEEK-END

Agents Harvey and Poore Make Large Seizures; "Western Bill" Harvey Again Arrested

HELD FOR COURT ACTION

Federal Investigators William R. Harvey and Leon Poore of the Prohibition enforcement office made seven arrests in four raids in four towns Saturday, three of the communities being in Garrett county and one in Allegany county.

William "Western Bill" Harvey was arrested near Deer Park on charges of manufacture and possession of intoxicants. According to the officers they seized a gallon of whiskey together with a 100 gallon still on his premises, which they confiscated. Harvey is a well known character in this county, and several years ago was involved in the shooting and killing of a neighbor, Lee Colter. In the hearing that resulted from the shooting, Harvey was released, as it was shown Colter had shot at Harvey several times with a rifle, after an argument, and in self-defense, Harvey shot and killed Colter with a double barrel shotgun.

Following his arrest Saturday, "Western Bill" was arraigned before Magistrate George Poole in Kitzmiller, and held for Garrett county circuit court under bond of $500.

Seize Quantity of Whiskey

At Vindex, near Kitzmiller, Sam DeCost and Virginia M. Boaten, alias Mary Colter, mother-in-law of DeCost, and the widow of the man killed by Harvey, were arrested by the officers. The agents claim they seized 79 gallons of whiskey in a number of five gallon kegs, in the home of DeCost. His mother-in-law, who resides in an adjoining house, is charged with sale, and DeCost is charged with sale and possession. Officers Harvey stated DeCost had a half ton of grain and a ton of sugar stored on his premises, and expressed the opinion the place has been a large operation center for the manufacture of liquor. Both Mrs. Boaten and DeCost were arraigned before Magistrate Poole, in Kitzmiller, and held under bond of $500 each for action of the Grand Jury. Mrs. Bolten is an alleged second offender.

Arrests Man, Wife and Daughter

At Kitzmiller the officers arrested Frank Orbin, his wife Helen Orbin, and his daughter Orcella Orbin, each charged with sale and possession of intoxicants. They were cited to appear before Magistrate Poole, and were held under bond of $500 each for action of the Grand Jury. A half gallon of whiskey was seized.

TEACHER TRAINING CLASS OPENS ON SUNDAY NIGHT

Oakland and Kitzmiller Classes Will Alternate Program

The Standard Teacher Training school schedule to begin in the M. E. church, Oakland, on Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock will alternate with Kitzmiller instead of with Friendsville as was originally planned. They will alternate two evenings each instead of three evenings. The opening session of the Kitzmiller school will begin Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

There will be no registration fee in the Oakland school, as the expense of the school will be borne by the participating schools of the town, allowing the schools to send more students to take the courses offered, which are: Course 1, taught by Miss Gambrill, of Baltimore, "The Pupil," and the other course taught by Mr. Delbert Davis, of Oakland, "The Prophets."

All persons having credits should continue to take these courses. Both are basic courses and fundamental to the Sunday school teacher or for general religious education, Rev. C. A. Shilke stated.

Gets Wheelbarrow Trip For Election Pay-Off

Yesterday at noon, people stopped to gaze at a strange sight on Second street. Mark Moon was hauling James "Colonel" Bell in a wheelbarrow.

Col. Bell was in Miller's store boasting that Mark was afraid to come around, when the latter gentleman put in his appearance, ready to pay off his election bet that Hoover would win.

Due to rainy weather Col. Bell wasn't anxious that the bet be paid right then, but Mark insisted, and when Mark insists, he means it.

Thus it was that the two-man parade was held, regardless of weather conditions, and Col. Bell was given a free ride on Second street, Liberty to Alder, and up Alder street to the postoffice.

An Annual Achievement Day program was given by the Good Will 4-H club on November 4 at the Ladies' Aid hall, Loch Lynn. Mary Had a Little Lamb

By JANE OSBORN

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

IT WAS the summer after Mary Lester's sophomore year in the state university that she met Bob Lamb at a country house-party. Bob Lamb had just finished his junior year at a smaller college. It was perfectly clear from the end of the first day at the hospitable old farmhouse that Mary liked Bob and that Bob was keen about Mary. But Bob thought he had no right to speak about marriage—he had a year more of college and it would be still another year—whatever work he took up—before he could think of supporting a wife. But he did not hesitate to tell Mary of his feelings for her. For the time all he begged of her was that she would permit him to be somewhere near her. It was Mary's idea, then, that Bob should transfer himself from the smaller college and enter the senior class of the university she attended.

So when Mary went back to college it was noised about that she had brought a "heavy suitor" with her. The girls in her fraternity house laughed at her and with her. Then one of them sitting at the piano began softly playing the strains of "Mary Had a Little Lamb."

The girls took up the words and Mary sat there blushing.

"But Bob's fleece isn't as white as snow," protested Mary weakly. "He has black hair."

"But he did follow you to school one day—you'll have to admit that," laughed one of the girls, and they went on singing their song.

Bob Lamb had been transferred from the fraternity in his own college to the chapter in the university where it was soon passed around that they had a girl to thank for the transfer.

"Nice girl—Mary Lester—a junior Gamma Sigma," informed one of the men. "Some one ought to drop a word of thanks to Mary—she did us a good turn."

One of the men who had listened to the remark began softly to whistle the notes of "Mary Had a Little Lamb."

Some one with a bass voice began croaking the words. A tenor took it up. Two others joined in and the impromptu quartette stood up with mock solemnity and chanted the song.

No one meant to give offense but everywhere Bob Lamb appeared with Mary—at college dances, at concerts or just strolling around the campus—there was always some one nearby to warble or whistle the annoying tune. All Bob desired was just to be somewhere with Mary. Yet as the teasing persisted they saw less and less of each other than they had hoped would be possible by both attending the same college.

So after the end of Mary's junior year and Bob Lamb's senior year they felt that they had seen far too little of one another. Bob was going to New York to go into business with his uncle and Mary would be back at college for her final year—a thousand miles from New York.

Bob heard of a college camp somewhere in the next state. There was a tent colony for the men and another for the women—a study camp where serious-minded students went to study astronomy under the direction of a number of renowned astronomers. Neither Bob nor Mary had ever felt more than a passing interest in the study of the stars, but at least there would be opportunity to see each other at lectures and on observation excursions. They could sit together in the evening on mountain tops gazing at the stars. True, there would be the other students and the learned professors, but there would be no one to tease them. They needn't let anyone know that they had ever met before. It was Mary's idea that their names must not go with them. Some one might think of the stupid song about Mary and her little lamb. It would be simple enough in Mary's case. She could easily use her middle name, Eila. It took some maneuvering on Bob's part. Finally he took an old friend, Bill Ball, into his confidence and arranged to use his college certificate for enrollment.

For the first two weeks of the sessions at the summer camp everything went beautifully. Then it became apparent that Bob—now Bill Ball—and Mary—not Ella—contrived to sit next to each other on all occasions. One evening when the class of campers were starting off up the mountain side some one in the party began to hum the tune of the nursery song that had become so odious to Mary. It seemed as if everyone took up the air—whistling or warbling as they went. Then some one began singing the words.

"Ella had a little Ball, his fleece was black as coal—
And everywhere that Ella went the Ball was sure to roll."

"Let's pretend we don't know they mean us," whispered Mary.

"That won't work," said Bob Lamb—rather Bill Ball. "Let's pretend to like it."

So they stuck it out—wherever they were seen together some one was pretty sure to take up the notes of the old song. And at the end Bob got a letter from his uncle—offering him a little more than he had expected by way of a beginner's salary. On the strength of this Bob asked Mary to marry him as soon as they left summer camp. Mary, in spite of a final year at college, was willing.

"Don't let's have a church wedding," she suggested. "The organist would be sure to play that hateful tune instead of the wedding march."

Backgammon Pastime of Old Egyptian Royalty

In accordance with the Egyptian custom of burial, when images of servants and pictures of daily activities were placed in the tomb so that the departed one could enjoy all the pleasures of her earthly life in the after life, a picture of a queen playing "tables" or backgammon was included so that her soul could indulge in a game whenever she desired.

In later centuries backgammon was a favorite among the gentry. Kings and their mistresses wagered their jewels on the dancing dice. To Louis XIV it was second only to billiards. James I of Scotland spent the evening before his murder playing at the tables with the ladies and gentlemen of his court. It is also recorded that Mme. Pompadour owned many expensive boards, one, in particular, inlaid with gold and ivory and appointed with men of green and white ivory delicately carved.

Luck played an important part in the winnings then, and so it does today, though our best gamesters insist that backgammon is as much a test of skill as chess or bridge, love or the stock market.

No End to Procession of Living Yellow Men

If all the Chinese in the world were to march like an army, four abreast, past a given point, they would never finish passing though they marched for ever, according to Ripley. It is this way: There is no definite information on the population of China, as a census has not been taken since 1403, but he takes the reasonable estimate of 600,000,000 as the number of Chinese on earth. He now assumes the Chinese would march four abreast at the rate of three miles an hour for the average 15 miles per day, and that they would then rest, like an army, till the next day. They would, therefore, pass at the rate of 26,280,000 each year, the 600,000,000 passing in nearly 23 years—a generation. Assuming that the birth rate of the Chinese is 10 per cent, and that half of the children die before they are able to walk, there will be 30,000,000 new Chinese coming along each year to take the place of the 26,280,000 who have passed the given point.

On Reading in Bed

All persons except those marvelous exceptions who fall asleep the instant they are horizontal, should read in bed. The selection of a book for this purpose is important. I do not advise anyone to follow the example of King Ahasuerus, and read the Congressional Record, because if one reads a book that is too dry, one cannot forget oneself; and the only chance to forget oneself in slumber is to forget oneself before slumber. On the other hand, one should not read anything connected with one's professional work or any book that is wildly exciting. The best bed books are entertaining biographies or autobiographies of a placid nature.—William Lyon Phelps in Scribner's Magazine.

Among the Clever

The prince of Wales was once talking to King Edward about Roosevelt, who was at that time President of the United States.

"Mr. Roosevelt is a very good man, isn't he?" he queried.

"President Roosevelt is a very clever man," replied King Edward.

For a time the prince did not speak, but went on turning the leaves of the album through which he was looking, and which contained the President's portrait. The next day he said to the king, "I have changed Mr. Roosevelt's portrait from the Album of Rulers to the album where the clever men are!"—Montreal Star.

State Birds

While a few states have adopted certain birds officially, the following birds are identified with particular states: Alabama, flicker; California, California quail; District of Columbia, wood thrush; Florida, mockingbird; Georgia, brown thrasher; Illinois, cardinal; Kansas, Western meadowlark; Kentucky, cardinal; Louisiana, brown pelican; Maine, chickadee; Maryland, Baltimore oriole; Michigan, robin; Missouri, bluebird; Nebraska, Western meadowlark; Oregon, Western meadowlark; Texas, mockingbird; Virginia, robin; Wisconsin, robin, and Wyoming, Western meadowlark.

Historic Site Now Park

Impressed by the great historical importance of the ruins of Fort Anne at Annapolis Royal, N. S., not only to Canadians but to the descendants of the early colonists along the Atlantic coast of North America, the Dominion government of Canada set aside the military works and about 20 acres surrounding them as a national park under the Department of the Interior. Many of the features have been restored while others have been added, so that the park is one of the most interesting historic spots in the East.

No Substitute for Coal

The wind and the tide are of no economic importance, says Samuel S. Wyer of Columbus, Ohio, consulting engineer. Wood is too limited to be a factor. Petroleum gives one-fourth of our energy. Alcohol costs more and its fuel worth is less than oil. If all the water powers of the United States were developed they would not equal the stationary power we are now using, let alone the enormous quantities of energy used for heating and locomotive purposes.

IF YOU GET UP NIGHTS

Try This 25c. Test

Get a 25c. test box of BU-KETS, the bladder physic, from any drug store. After four days if you are not relieved of getting up nights go back and get your money. BU-KETS containing buchu leaves, juniper oil, etc., acts similar to castor oil on the bowels. If you are bothered with backache or leg pains, arising from bladder disorders, you are bound to feel better after this cleansing and you get your regular sleep. J. E. Harned says BU-KETS is a best seller.—Advertisement 39-1t.

Fable of the Almost Deserted Village

By GEORGE ADE

(©, Bell Syndicate.)—WNU Service.

ONCE there was a Prairie Town called Maple Heights because over toward the Crick there was a Knoll nearly eight feet high. It was just one of those Places that have kept the Rand McNally Co. in the Map Business. If the Trains stopped there it was largely from Force of Habit or to cool off and not because there was any Prospect of Important Freight or Passenger Traffic.

A Filling Station reared a gaudy Front where once the Hitch Rack smiled. All of the human Protozoa of the Village knew Bill Hart, Bebe Daniels and Tommy Meighan by their Front Names, and nearly every Yokel knew how to measure himself with a String and send to a Mail Order House for a whiz-bang Suit with diagonal Pockets such as are worn by the Undergraduates at Princeton.

For a long Time the Residents of the Settlement stuck close to Home, seldom venturing into the great outside World unless there was a Dollar Excursion. They regarded Maple Heights as a fairly accurate Reproduction of the Garden of Eden with the Snake left out.

Even after there was a Smoke Buggy standing at nearly every Front Gate it was not considered safe to venture more than fifty Miles from the Fireside. No one had an Urge to pick up and migrate because good old Maple Heights was supposed to be a Crown Jewel in the Diadem of one-horse Dumps.

Most certainly no one had ever dreamed of wearing a Straw Hat and a two-piece Lisle Suit right in the middle of January. Until the Propaganda was floated, Cold Weather was popular. A popular Song at the meeting of the Literary Society on Friday Evening was "Jingle Bells," Rabbit Hunting was held to be a Sport of Kings. Who wanted anything better on a Snappy Night, when the Snow was crunching underfoot, than to camp alongside of a large and active Base Burner, until one side was barbecued and then shift around until the Other Side was done?

The long Arctic Period of every Year was enlivened with Taffy Pulls, Oyster Suppers and Revival Services. To shovel Snow was regarded as one of the Penalties of being connected with the Human Race. The Folks had heard the Hymn about a Place where never-ending Spring abides and never-fading Flowers but they figured that only the Church Members would ever visit the Locality and they would have to reach it via the Cemetery.

Maple Heights probably would have continued to wear Red Flannel and Ear-Laps for all Time if it had not been for Henneberry Kilgore. He was a retired Farmer who owned a Frame Residence on Second Street and was a Ring-Leader in the Croquet Set. Nearly ten years ago he helped to make a Discovery which threatens to revolutionize the Social Routine of America. He learned that if he didn't burn any Coal in the Winter he could save enough Money to purchase two round trip Tickets to Florida. Mr. Kilgore also figured that if he could rent his House to the new Superintendent of Schools he could get a Monthly Income which would pay the Cafeteria Bills of Himself and Drusilla while they were soaking up the Sunshine in what someone with a Streak of Originality has designated as the Palmetto State.

When the Kilgores started, the proposed Journey seemed almost as important and hazardous as a non-stop Flight to Madagascar. All the Neighbors came down to see them off. They had two Shoe Boxes full of Home Cooking. The whole Thing seemed adventuresome and extravagant.

The Low Cost of Fording.

Very soon the tantalizing Bulletins began to arrive. On one of those Sausage-and-Buckwheat Mornings, when the Smoke went straight up and there was a general Discussion as to how far below Zero it really was, then all of the Friends would receive Post Cards showing Miles and Miles of Orange Groves in Golden Bloom or Alligators dozing in the Warmth or a Vista of a Summer Sea beyond the Avenue of tropical Palms. Also snapshots of Henneberry Kilgore in his Shirt Sleeves, holding up Fish. These are the Influences which Undermine Civilization and convert Strong Men into Weaklings.

The Kilgores came back full of that Conversation about the Sun being on the job every Day and the coldest Morning they had all winter being just nice and snappy. It was evident that they had been Sold. They began to line up the Converts. Within two Winters so many Retired Farmers were heading South along about Thanksgiving that the demand for Shoe Boxes could hardly be supplied. Those who formed the Habit put in all Summer telling about the Great Times they had down yonder all Winter. They were hard to put up with.

A romantic Visit to the Southland ceased to an Adventure and threatened to become one of the Necessities of Life. Especially when the Boys came back with a new Idea. They had seen the Tin-Canners all the way from Jacksonville to the Keys, giving the Laugh to Hotels, Rooming Houses and the High Cost of Living in general. All you had to do was get a Chassis costing about $13.50 and build on top of it a small House containing Bunks, Kitchen Outfit and an unlimited Food Supply and then roam all over the Map for Months and Months at a time without buying anything except a little Juice.

About the Time the Highways became congested with gliding Chicken Coops, the whole Population of Maple Heights got a Kick out of the News that Henneberry Kilgore had been offered $6,500 for a Lot in Cocabola which he had purchased at an Auction Sale in 1917 for $225. Also it was reported that Bricklayers were getting $12 a Day in Miami and the Building Permits for the Year were about Two Million in excess of what we claim France owes us.

Big Talk—Big Results.

The endless Chain which had been put into motion by Mr. Kilgore now began to work overtime and at high speed. Every Pilgrim who arrived in the Promised Land began to send back those come-on Post Cards and Reports of how many Cars went across the Gandy Bridge each Day and also Carbon Copies of that famous Recital to the effect that he bought so many Acres outside of such-and-such a Place expecting to build a Bungalow and now he had sold the East Half for more Money than there really is and had been offered whatever Amount you care to think of for the Other Half, always by a New York Syndicate.

That was how it worked. Every Bird who went down sent back the illuminated Lithographs and began to talk in Big Figures, whereupon at least two of the Lads back in the Home Town would join the Trek and in a couple of Weeks they would be loading the Mails with wild-eyed Yarns and each of them would induce two others to hurry and get in while the Water was great, so that by this time there would be seven Pilgrims instead of one and these seven would land two apiece or a grand Total of fourteen plus the seven or twenty-one. You can see for yourself that any such System will run into a lot of People in a short Time.

The Bank Building is still standing in Maple Heights even if the Funds have been withdrawn. Six of the Boys have decided not to go down this Winter as they are on the Volunteer Fire Department.

MORAL: No matter what you've heard, it's so.

Bear Grows Extra Pair of "Shoes" for Spring

While the bear hibernates in the winter the soles of his feet thicken, and by spring he finds himself wearing an extra pair of shoes, according to Hamilton M. Laing, writing in Boys' Life, the monthly publication of the Boy Scouts of America. "By spring," writes Mr. Laing, "the outer covering of the pad is composed of two layers, the newer one under the old getting ready to supplant the old. As soon as the bear emerges from his den in spring his feet are subjected to rough usage—wet ground or snow. This soaking helps to soften up the dead outer shoe and cause an easy separation. The wear on this part of Bruin's anatomy is tremendous. He is very heavy and he travels over the roughest footing. A hard-wearing shoe is a necessity; his sole must have the rubbery toughness of an auto tire.

"When the old shoe peels off, the fresh new layer underneath has a certain softness, yet the toughness and elasticity of sponge rubber," concludes Mr. Laing. "This layer will remain alive through one season only, and then die and be shed in the next spring when Bruin again gets his annual change of footwear."

Impressive Salzburg

The oldest part of Salzburg, Mozart's town in Austria, is about St. Peter's abbey, its oldest monument. It was begun in A. D. 589, burned and rebuilt in the Twelfth century and took its final form in the Seventeenth century. It was a famous library of 70,000 volumes and 400 manuscripts. To the right, the visitor will find St. Peter's Cellar, now a restaurant, on the first floor of which will he found the Haydn-Stuberl where the famous composer sat evenings over his wine. St. Peter's cemetery is probably the most impressive part of the section, lying at the foot of the mighty Schlossberg, honeycombed by cells and chapels where early Christian martyrs are entombed.

War Veteran's Funeral

The American flag which drapes the casket of a deceased veteran of the World war is furnished by either the veterans' administration or the quartermaster corps of the War department. The veterans' administration customarily supplies the flags if the veteran was not in active service at the time of his death, while the quartermaster corps generally furnishes those for active service men. The flag should not be lowered into the grave with the coffin, but should be removed at the point in the burial service when the casket is started downward. The flag is customarily turned over to the relatives of the deceased.

Coblenz on the Rhine

Coblenz, the provincial capital of the Rhineland, standing where it has stood since it was founded by the Romans in 9 B. C., where the Rhine and Moselle join their waters, is one of the most attractive cities of Germany. Here the medieval ages and the modern industrial world blend to give the visitor beauty, charm and comfort. The ancient castle of the Electors, the Kaufhaus and the churches of Our Lady and St. Florian incorporate the old spirit, as do its great Vintage festival, organized every year in the Weindorf.

Insubordinate Smith

By JOHN RATHMERE

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

"GOOD morning, Smith," Mr. Laurence said, and looked inquiringly first at Walter Smith and then pointedly at the clock on the wall at the end of the large office. It was five minutes after nine o'clock and never in the five years that Walter had been employed by Laurence and Street had he ever come in later than a quarter to nine.

Walter simply said "Good morning, Mr. Laurence and went to his desk, ignoring Laurence's obvious displeasure.

After all, Mr. Laurence quite frequently made his first appearance much later than this and Mr. Street was not yet in.

When Walter had looked over the letters that lay on his desk he turned to Miss Greely, the stenographer, who was obviously doing nothing. "Take these answers, will you, Miss Greely," he said, and Miss Greely looked up in amazement. Always before Walter Smith had said: "If you have nothing to do for Mr. Laurence—or for Mr. Street—I wonder if you would have time to take a few letters."

An hour or so later Walter gave another amazing sign of insubordination. "Go out and see Jones Brothers today," Laurence told him. "Tell them that we will discontinue deliveries immediately if they don't make a payment for everything up to date. Speak sharply to them."

"No, no," said Walter. "That won't do. Jones Brothers are one of our best customers. They are a little hard pressed now but perfectly sound. We can't afford to antagonize them."

Mr. Laurence turned red in the face. "See here, Smith," he said. "I told you to go up and tell those people—what right have you to dispute my authority?" Walter merely grinned genially at Laurence and went into Mr. Street's private office.

"These specifications you've drawn up for So and So," he told Mr. Street, "won't do." Mr. Street looked in amazement at the young man and then feeling the new note of sureness and self-confidence in his voice listened intently. Obviously Walter Smith was right. As the day advanced every one in the organization was aware that a change had come over young Walter Smith, and no one was more aware of the fact than Walter himself.

At twelve Mr. Street asked Walter Smith to have luncheon with him at his club—a hitherto unprecedented occurrence.

"What's got into you, Smith," Mr. Street asked abruptly when they had taken their places at a table for two in the club dining room. "You had Laurence all worked up."

"Nothing has got into me," Walter told him. "My manner has doubtless changed because I'm through. For the first time since I went to work it doesn't matter whether I keep my job or not. When I left college five years ago I had to support my sister and brother. My brother was through college last June. He's doing well. And my sister was married last night. I've a few thousands in the bank. I no longer have to put up with Mr. Laurence's stupidity and your shortsightedness. I intend to take a few months vacation and then make connections with a really going concern. To be sure you people are holding your own, but you're missing big opportunities because you're too conservative and you discourage your employees—"

"But look here, Smith," Mr. Street was all solicitude. "We don't want you to work for one of our competitors. That's bad business. Why do you want to work for another concern?"

"Because another concern would pay me more nearly what I'm worth. They would or I wouldn't work for them. I've only myself to consider now—"

"If I'd known you had it in you I'd have given you more money," Street explained. "I'll talk to Laurence."

"Laurence has nothing to say about it," Walter said with assurance. "Laurence is merely a figurehead. I know as well as you do that he's lost whatever ability he ever had."

Street looked perplexed. "You certainly have changed," he told the younger man. "I'll think things over. You weren't thinking of making any changes before the first of January?"

"I am planning to leave at the end of the week. After all when you fire employees you give them less notice than that—"

That evening while Laurence and Street were lingering at the office in heavy conference discussing ways and means of keeping young Smith while they were going so far as to consider how he might be taken in as a junior partner—Walter Smith was dining at the best hotel restaurant in town with Marjorie Black, Mr. Laurence's favorite niece.

"Of course I didn't tell your uncle we were going to get married," Walter told Marjorie. I thought you ought to tell him that. But he's had enough surprises for one day—"

"Shall I tell him we're going to be married—next week?" she asked. "And that after we come back from Europe you'll go back to work for him."

"Tell him we're going to be married next week," said Walter. "But don't tell him I'm coming back—that's entirely up to him. For the first time in my life I know I'm good, and I'm going to stay good by being independent."

TWO KILLED IN AIRPLANE ACCIDENT NEAR GORMANIA

Clarksburg Men Are Trapped in Blazing Wreckage and Are Burned Beyond Recognition

ENROUTE TO WASHINGTON

O. R. Hamrick, 33, manager of the Clarksburg, W. Va., airport, and John Shulte, 21, also of Clarksburg, were burned to death when their plane crashed near Gormania, W. Va., Sunday.

The were enroute to Washington, D. C., to bring Louis A. Johnson, national commander of the American Legion, to his home in Clarksburg.

Hayes Zieman, who saw the crash, said the plane's motor was missing badly and that it suddenly nose dived and burst into flames when it struck the ground.

The bodies were brought to Oakland in Bolden's ambulance where they were sent to Clarksburg Sunday night.

A heavy fog made air travel difficult, residents of Gormania said, but the accident apparently occurred from motor trouble.

The bodies of the two men were burned so badly as to be unrecognizable. The plane was destroyed. The men were identified by articles they were carrying.

Hamrick, a licensed transport pilot, was believed to be flying the plane. Shulte was said to be a relative of Hamrick's. The men were flying the "National Commander," named in honor of Johnson who was enroute home to vote. Johnson made the trip by train.

The plane was reported to have landed at Red House, Md., at 10 a. m., Sunday when there was a low ceiling, but took off again later toward Washington. The plane belonged to a corporation in which Johnson is interested.

MT. LAKE PARK

It is not hard to figure the cause for the broad and knowing smiles that light the countenances of Mac Clayton, Wilson Camden, John Morgan, Arthur Fike and a few more of the birds that rode the donkey thru to a flying finish. Nor will we mention the down-in-the-mouth expression on the faces of the writer and others of his ilk who packed their clothes in the trunk, and grabbed the tail of the elephant and are now on their way for a four-year camp on the briny waters of the historic Salt River. Judging by the magnificance of the Empire building in New York, erected under the supervision of the 1928 Democratic Presidential candidate, no doubt we will find the cabins erected by our late opponents in livable condition. We wish them good luck. We hope they will wish us a pleasant journey.

Fun is fun. But vandalism is pure eussidness. We refer to Hallowe'en, when some person broke the tops off a number of young pine trees adorning the front of the property of Mrs. Isobel Hill.

Mrs. Hill takes great pride in beautifying her property, and we know it must be disheartening to see the results of beautifying efforts destroyed by vandals.

Unless we miss our guess, the gale that is now sweeping down off the mountains and across the glades, will wind up in a nasty bit of weather. The thermometer is dropping about as fast as did Republican hopes when the results from New York state were received over the radio.

Word has been received by friends that Major and Mrs. Skyles have located in Winchester. Well, that is close enough to the Park so the Major can drop in for an early spring trout trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Fleming motored to Fairmont to cast their votes. Mrs. T. A. Deveny, accompanied by her son. Mr. T. A., Jr., and Mrs. Frank Murphy went to Fairmont for the same purpose.

Mr. A. D. Fike and Mr. J. O. Morgan were in Morgantown Monday on business.

Mrs. Isobel Hill, Mrs. Allie Haymond, Mrs. E. C. Frame and Mr. Jas. C. Frame motored to Cumberland Monday.

Mrs. Frank Morgan has closed her cottage and will spend the winter months in the east.

Mr. Graham Weeks is recovering from a severe attack of acute indigestion from which he suffered during all of Monday night.

Mrs. Ada Armstrong Decine has closed her cottage and departed Wednesday for her home in Baltimore.

There will be preaching in the U. B. church Sunday evening at 7:30.

Mrs. Margaret Getz and daughter, Washington, D. C., spent the weekend with the former's parents, Rev. and Mrs. William Anderson.

THE MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY'S CORNER

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

Scholars tell us that the Old Testament was written in Hebrew, with the exception of about three-fifths of the book of Daniel and one-third of the book of Ezra, which was written in Chaldee. They further point out that the prophecy of Jeremiah contains a single verse in Chaldee, Chapter X, verse 11. Hebrew was the language of the Canaanites at the time of Abraham's sojourn among them, and from them he learned this language.

Tradition informs us that the Canaanites referred to Abraham as "The Hebrew," meaning the man from the other side of the river—the Euphrates. Abraham's native language was Aramaean, the vernacular of Mesopotamia; but he adopted the speech of the land of his inheritance, and that became the mother tongue of the Israelites. The tablets from Tel el Amarna and the Moabite stone have shown that at least the Canaanites and the Moabites, if not the adjacent tribes, spoke a language quite similar to Hebrew. It is impossible to tell exactly how long before the advent of Christ the Aramaic, in use in his time, had become the prevailing tongue. Languages, like all living things, have their periods of growth, comparative maturity, and perfection, and then decay. Two stages are traceable in the Hebrew; these are generally called its golden age and its silver age, paralleling roughly the rise of the national power to the Golden age of David and Solomon, and the period of decline from the Babylonian captivity till the language ceased to be spoken.

The Hebrew is a branch of a family of languages called Semitic, from Shem, the ancestor of the peoples using them. Shem was one of the sons of Noah, whose descendants spread from Ararat toward the East, covering Mesopotamia, Arabia, Syria and Babylonia. Other members of this family of languages are Arabic, spoken generally in northern Arabia, the Himyaritic in the South, and the Ethiopic in Abyssinia. To these branches of the Semitic family must be added the cuneiform inscriptions on the monuments of Assyria and Babylonia.

The Koreish dialect, in which the Koran of Mohammed was written, is also a member of this ancient family of languages, out of which the light of the world has come.

For our purpose this sketch must suffice. Any critical examination of these languages would require more time and a greater degree of scholarship than these simple messages would warrant, if the writer were equal to such a task.

Not a single original manuscript remains. The flight of time, the ruthless hand of ignorance and the devastations of war have destroyed many of these valuable records of the word of life. Yet through changing dynasties and vanishing civilizations, by word of mouth, as well as lettered monuments and fragmentary inscriptions, these mighty truths have been gathered up by scholars and devoted scribes and handed down to us as our most priceless heritage from the great past. We dare affirm with Isaiah in his message of comfort to God's people, "The Word of our God shall stand forever."

For the second morning in succession, the New York governor had a late and leisurely breakfast. All his day, however, was not given to rest for he made his first address as president-elect during the afternoon, thanking the supporters and inviting them in solving problems which loom just as large after election as they did before.

More Than Party Victory

"It is a vote that had more than party significance," he said of the election. "It transcends party lines. It became a national expression of liberal thought. It means, I am sure, that the masses of the people of this nation firmly believe that there is a great and actual possibility in an orderly recovery, through a well conceived and actively directed plan of action.

"Such a plan has been presented to you and you have expressed approval of it. * * * This clear mandate shall not be forgotten. * * *

President Hoover, described by his aides as the "tiredest man in America," got a much needed rest at his Palo Alto home. He was considering a trip through the Panama Canal before returning to Washington, but he also thought of getting on his special train and returning to Washington and his job.

Thomas Got About 300,000 Votes

The Socialist candidate for the presidency, Norman Thomas, substantially increased his total over the 1927 record. He received 267,800 votes four years ago and yesterday had exceeded that by more than 30,000 with less than a third the returns in.

The Democratic platform and the Democratic candidate urged outright repeal of the 18th amendment and immediate modification of the Volstead Act, but not all party candidates agreed with that stand, just as there were differences among Republicans on the issue.

Classifications by anti-prohibition organizations estimated that at least 47 senators in the 73rd Congress would support repeal or resubmission of the 18th amendment. From the same source came claims that approximately 203 house members in the same body would favor giving the people a chance to express themselves on the liquor laws.

The question of repeal or modification in the coming Congress moved further up front with the assertion by Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic leader, that he saw no reason why the issues should not be passed on when Congress meets again.

At that, the economic situation may overshadow prohibition as it did in the campaign just closed. Economics incompass any number of specific issues—taxation, the tariff, relief, unemployment, and that gray bearded legislative query, what shall we do to help the farmer?

George Altstetter Is Elected Head of District League

At the district Luther League convention held last Sunday in St. Mark's Lutheran church, George Altstetter, Oakland, was elected president; Coleman Shaffer, Aurora, vice-president; Oliver Frickey, Accident, secretary; and Sara Catherine Jones, Red House treasurer. Sixty-two were present from Accident, Bittinger, Aurora, Red House, Fairmont, and Oakland.

Miss Maybelle Thieling, Charleston, president of the Synodical Luther League of West Virginia spoke on the meaning and benefit of leagues, and points concerning the formation of a district league were discussed by George Altstetter, Coleman Shaffer, Miss Jessie Moon, of Red House; Miss Althea Schlossnagle, Accident; and Elbert Buckel, Bittinger. Miss Norma Gantz, Fairmont, State Educational Secretary, gave some of the achievements of Luther Leagues throughout this section.

A dinner meeting and social hour was followed by a vesper service in charge of Rev. W. P. Cline, Jr., pastor at Fairmont.

MANY PREPARE FOR OPEN SEASON ON LAWFUL GAME

More Than 800 Have Already Procured Hunting Licenses

With only a few days remaining until the opening of the hunting season, over eight hundred persons have obtained licenses from the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court in Oakland, and it is thought that many more will obtain them before next Tuesday, November 13, upon which day the hunting season lawfully opens.

Upon that date it will be lawful to hunt squirrels, dove, woodcock, ruffled grouse, rabbits and male pheasants. The season for squirrels ends on December 24; the season for doves on December 15, while rabbits may be hunted until December 31, all dates inclusive.

Male deer with two or more points to one antler may be killed in Garrett county December 1 to 3, inclusive.

Reports from various sections of the county are to the effect that game of practically all species is more plentiful than it has been for some years past.

E. Lee LeCompte, State Game Warden, warns that it is unlawful to hunt without first procuring a hunter's license and have it in possession while hunting and have tag displayed on the outer garment at center of back. A landowner or tenant, or their children are not required to procure hunter's license to hunt on land owned or tenanted by them.

To Stage North-South Football Classic

Baltimore will stage a North-South All-Star football game at its municipal stadium seating more than 60,000 persons on December 10.

The North team will be recruited and coached by Jock Sutherland, of the University of Pittsburgh, whose Panthers recently won over Notre Dame, while the Southerners will have Dick Harlow, coach of the Western Maryland eleven, as mentor.

It is planned to make the event an annual affair, vying in popularity with the famous East-West series.

Va.

Election Sidelights

As the loser of a bet that President Hoover would be re-elected Harold Yutzy is scheduled to roll a peanut from the First National Bank building to the Court House. The rolling is supposed to be done by his nose. Harold has not been seen in Oakland the past two days.

Paul Turney spent Tuesday afternoon vigorously electioneering only to remember about 8 o'clock that evening that he hadn't voted.

Upon the basis of early returns Tuesday night several Oakland wets re-enacted a scene of some years ago on Second street. An old bar was dragged from an abandoned saloon and empty bottles were placed in position. A self-appointed barkeeper began waiting on the customers.

In an election scuffle in front of Hinebaugh's restaurant, a large window was smashd.

OVER 500 NEW MEMBERS STILL NEEDED IN RED CROSS

County Workers to Increase Efforts This Week—Drive To End Thanksgiving Day

QUOTA IS 600 MEMBERS

Increasing the intensity of the drive, Mrs. Samuel Cole, county chairman of the National Red Cross, and her district chairmen will endeavor to secure the quota of 600 members thruout the county during the next week. "With only 63 members reported this week, the county workers will carry on their work with greater effort than ever before in order that Garrett county goes over the top in this important drive," Mrs. Cole said yesterday.

This year a very special appeal is made for generosity in paying dues to the Red Cross, as needs for funds this winter will be unusually great.

It has been suggested by the county chairman that citizens not being called upon by a solicitor, to forward their dues to the district chairman who will immediately send them their receipt, button and Red Cross sign for the window. This suggestion is made because of the fact that many times a solicitor calls at a home when no one is there, and therefore the solicitor fails to get into personal contact with any member of that household.

Crellin took first place during the first few days of the drive for members, which got under way on Armistice day, by reporting 12 members. They are, Mrs. Sara Hughes, Miss Eva Montgomery, Merle Frantz, Miss Anna Dawson, Miss Rosalie Click, L. C. Yutzy, Miss Hasaleah Yutzy, little Miss Dolores Yutzy, Homer Shaffer, Mrs. Stanley Ashby, and Howard Phares. Later, however, Oakland came through with a larger list, which includes the names of Joseph M. Gonder, Miss May E. Wass, Miss Willoughby McCormick Cole, Mrs. Paul McIntire, Mrs. Thurl Bullard, Mrs. E. Z. Tower, Mrs. Harry White, Mrs. Archibald Moore, Miss Lois Ross, James Hart, S. H. Jackson, Berne Teter, A. T. Matthews, Mrs. Dora Coddington, F. A. Smouse, N. C. Fraley, H. L. Miller, J. M. Jarboe, The Garrett National Bank, J. B. Littman, The Coffman-Fisher Company, West Maryland Power Co., First National Bank, W. L. Gibson, H. C. Sincell, J. E. Harned, Henry Lauer, A. G. Gortner, T. A. Gonder, F. A. Thayer, E. A. Shaffer, and Mrs. Eva Falkenstein Bishoff.

Other persons in the county who have paid their membership dues for this year's drive are George Wagner, Grantsville; Mrs. Jennie Freeland, Gormania; Henry Speicher, Miss Nelle Alexander, Accident; Samuel Wright, Salisbury; Mrs. George Warnick, of Bloomington, Mrs. C. B. Miller, Friendsville, E. J. Hamill, Mrs. Maude Hamill, Mrs. Milton Pritts, Mrs. Earl Pritts, Stanley Bender, Mrs. Ethel Bender, H. I. Wilson, Mrs. Edward James, Mrs. Daniel Walker, Joe Runkalo, Frank Vodipevic and Dr. A. K. Fidler, all of Kitzmiller, and Mrs. B. O. Aiken, Accident.

Mr. Wagner, of Gransville, has been the first person in his district for the past four years to send in his membership fee, and Mr. Speicher, of Accident, was the first in that district to send in his fee this year.

Mrs. B. O. Aiken is district chairman for the Accident district.

Golden Eagle Killed Saturday

A Golden eagle, with a wing spread of seven feet one inch, was killed Saturday during the noon hour by W. E. Spoerlein, near Gortner. After firing a number of charges at the bird from a shortgun, but without striking a vital spot, he secured a rifle from his home and shot it as it was resting in a tree on the farm of a neighbor.

The weight of the bird was ten pounds and it had a wing spread of 7 feet 1 inch and a tail spread of 27 inches. Mr. Spoerlein expects to have it mounted.

The eagle had been in the community where it was shot for upwards of two weeks and as far as could be learned had done no damage to poultry or other property. It was the first eagle to be killed in this section in a number of years.

MORE THAN $15,000 TO BE PAID TO CHRISTMAS CLUBS

Approximately 425 Depositors Residing In and Near Oakland to Receive Checks December 1

$440,000,000 IN THE U. S.

More than $15,000 will be sent out from the Oakland banks on December 1 in Christmas Savings Club checks, it was announced today. This is slightly less than the amount distributed last year. The money will be disbursed to more than 425 depositors in the Garrett National and the First National Banks.

Four hundred forty million dollars will be distributed to about ten and one-half million members of Christmas clubs by more than seven thousand banking institutions and organizations, according to an estimate by Herbert F. Rawll, president of the incorporated organization.

The average amount received by each member amounts to $42. Over seven millions of the entire amount will be distributed in Maryland.

Member banks, reporting, uniformly predict an increase in Christmas club activities for 1933 as a result of greatly improved conditions in the general banking situation and a restored confidence of the public in the country's banks.

The inception of the plan and organization of Christmas Clubs twenty-two years ago anticipated the need of providing an easy method of systematically accumulating funds for the specific purpose of Christmas requirements. Based on a direct-by-mail inquiry to a number of individual members of the Christmas Club, Mr. Rawll points out that an increasing number of people are becoming tax conscious and using the facilities of the club for accumulating money for the payment of taxes falling due at the end of the year.

The Christmas Club savings feature was established seven years ago in Garrett county by the First National Bank of Oakland. Six years ago this feature was adopted by the Garrett National Bank of Oakland.

Many of the checks which will be received on December 1 will be cashed and the money spent in the immediate community.

Small Amount Each Week

By depositing small amounts each week those who have taken advantage of the clubs now have sufficient sums accumulated to meet the demands for Christmas.

New Year's Christmas Clubs will be opened in the local banks on December 8. There are clubs for 25 cents a week; 50 cents, $1.00, $2.00, $3.00 and so on. The money deposited in the banks draws interest which is included in the checks paid at the end of the year.

Corrections

In the county financial statement printed in today's issue of The Republican it is erroneously stated that Maude Pritts King received funds for the support of herself. The funds paid Mrs. King by the county was for the support of the Friend family. Another item was in error, that of $250 paid the Garrett National Bank for interest should read Garrett National Bank for rent for the Garrett County Public Library. These corrections are made by direction of the clerk to the County Commissioners, W. M. Frazee.

TWO FIRES DURING WEEK CAUSE MUCH DAMAGE

Incendiarism Is Blamed For Oakland Blaze

Fire of undetermined origin practically gutted the second floor of the residence of F. M. McClelland, Mt. Lake Park, shortly after 1 o'clock Saturday morning. The blaze was discovered by Mr. McClelland, it was said, when debris from the ceiling began to fall upon his bed, waking him from a sound sleep.

The Oakland Volunteer Fire department responded and confined the blaze to the McClelland residence, but the flames had made such headway before they were discovered that the fire was not controlled until much damage had been done. Several adjoining properties were endangered but the fire department prevented the flames from spreading.

Fire of incendiary origin destroyed a barn on the property of George Fulk, Oak street, Oakland, on Sunday morning at 3:33 o'clock, after the flames had been discovered by officer B. B. Nethkin.

This fire marks the sixth in a series of incendiary fires in Oakland during the past several months and effort is being made to apprehend the insane person responsible for these conflagrations.

GARRETT COUNTY SHINER FIRES ON REVENUE FORCE

No Casualties Reported Following Gun Battle at Still In Bear Hill Community Last Night

DELBERT WILT CAPTURED

Federal investigators and Garrett county officers will go out on a man hunt today. They will seek an alleged moonshiner who fired several times at the officers when they raided a still on Bear Hill, near Jennings, Garrett county, last night. The officers arrested Delbert Wilt, of Jennings, and brought him to the Garrett County Jail on charges of manufacture and possession of liquor. Wilt returned to his home less than two months ago after serving a term in the Maryland House of Correction following his conviction on the charge of attempting to kill his father with an axe.

Federal Investigator Harvey accompanied by four aides and Deputy Sheriff Clarence Spear, of Garrett county, raided the plant, which had been under surveillance for several days. The officers noticed volumes of smoke arising over the tree tops and surrounded a small log hut before closing in. Wilt was apprehended, but his companion, a new man in the community whose name is for the present withheld, fled down the hill toward his home.

Two of Officer Harvey's aides gave chase to the fugitive, who stopped and started throwing stones at his pursuers. After a brief stone battle the man again fled and reaching his home obtained a pistol. He ordered the deputies to leave and fired three shots at their feet. The men, who were unarmed refused to retreat and the man told his wife to get his rifle. He then fired two shots close to the men's heads and they returned to the log hut where the other officers were dismantling a 60-gallon still and where they had also seized 15 barrels of mash and several gallons of alleged whiskey.

While the officers were demolishing the plant Wilt's companion again approached through the woods and fired several times. The officers crouched behind the log hut and Harvey fired several shots from his automatic shot gun. The man disappeared and the officers could find no trace of him.

The man is known and according to Deputy Spear the man-hunt will go on and his arrest is looked for.

Plans are progressing for the organization of another Oakland troop and one at Deer Park. Harley Dawson, Eagle Scout, is assisting in the formation of the Deer Park troop.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 17, 1932

THE G. O. P. FUTURE

The immediate future of the Republican party was well summed up on the night after the election by Everett Sanders, the party's national chairman, when he said:

"What of the Republican party? It will become the minority party. It repudiates none of its policies, abandons none of its principles. It apologizes for no part of the matchless record of the Hoover administration or the traditions and records of the party throughout its 75 years of existence. But as a minority party it will not pettifog, it will not obstruct any Democratic legislation or executive proposal merely because it bears the stamp of the Democratic party."

There can be no gainsaying the soundness of these statements. That the Republican party will come back and come back rapidly there can be little doubt. Those who remember the days of 1912, when the party seemed permanently disorganized by the great split, but came back miraculously, will not have any doubt about this. The ability of political parties to recover rapidly is evidenced by the fortunes of the Democracy four years ago. Let it not be forgotten that in 1928 its ranks were demoralized and its political enemies had split the solid South for the first time in post-Civil War history.

The duty of the minority in the coming Congress is clear. It must and will not petifog or obstruct. It must and will support all sound and constructive measures put forward in the interest of efficiency, economy, and the defeat of depression. Its duty will be to obstruct only when measures are proposed which are contrary to the principles of sound economics and American traditions.

That the Republican as a temporary minority party will aid the majority in constructive measures can be judged by its record of the past. In the Wilson administration it gave heroic and needed help on critical occasions during the World War. It fought an obstructive battle only when an effort was made to overthrow time honored American principles and place us in European political entanglements and subsequent history has proved that both in its support of the administration, and in its obstrution to European entanglements it fought wisely and well.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

At a meeting of Garrett Lodge, No. 113, Knights of Pythias, a class of six members was initiated, bringing the total membership to sixty-nine.

From the Selbysport items: "A neat little snow paid us a visit on the 9th."

Jacob Bender had his arm broken in the wheel of a boring machine while drilling a well for Jack Stanton, near Grantsville.

Joseph Martin, of Oakland, fell on the pavement at the corner of Third and Oak streets and broke his left arm.

T. E. Hinebaugh left Oakland for Elkins, West Va., where he was to take charge of the Elkins Hotel.

Capt. J. M. Jarboe was in Baltimore attending the sessions of the Grand Lodge of Masons as a representative of the local lodge.

"Uncle" John Washington, colored, died after having been found unconscious in a house on Railroad street in Oakland.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

The new bridge over Deep Creek was opened Monday morning and the State road from Oakland to McHenry was unbroken for a stretch of more than twelve miles.

Official election returns from Garrett county gave Roosevelt 1069 votes; Wilson, 1005; Taft, 655.

The general store of William Pendergast, Hutton, was broken into and a fire was started in a room back of the storeroom, which was discovered and extinguished after having done damage estimated at one thousand dollars. Blood hounds were brought from Fairmont to trace the thieves.

Those of the high school enjoying a hay ride to Aurora included Isabel Broederick, Bertie Carskadon, Marguerite Hart, Edna Shank, Kathleen Helbig, Bernadette Hart, Bessie Ault, Marguerite Carney, Homer Turney, Pat Murphy, Fred. Peddicord, Frank Ross, Carlton McComas, Harry Weimer, Preston DeBerry, Carroll Kelly and Albert Kahl. The trip homeward required six hours on account of a snow storm.

Austin Brown and E. A. Weimer disposed of their interest in the firm of Bolden, Brown & Weimer to D. E. Bolden, who was to continue the general merchandise business.

MT. LAKE PARK

Fire Hydrants

It seemed to be the irony of fate that the fire hydrant located at the corner just in front of the McClelland property, where a fire occurred on Saturday morning at an early hour, had not yet been installed when the fire occurred. It was about ready to be placed when the work was halted by the cold, rainy weather. However, is it now in place.

On Tuesday afternoon just as soon as the connection with the water main was finished the Oakland Fire Department, under the direction of Chief Kerins, made a test. It was found to be all that was expected. The pressure was fine and a stream of water was thrown above the tallest oak trees in the vicinity.

There is a sufficient volume of water and the pressure is such that, when the hydrants are placed in various sections of the Park, Chief Kerins expressed himself as being of the opinion that the Oakland department can successfully handle any fire that may occur.

Another hydrant is now being insalled, a test of which will probably be made this afternoon. Others will be placed as soon as the finances of the town will permit.

Shooting Season

A number of inquiries have been made as to whether or not rabbits may be killed in the Park. We are advised by Town Clerk Martin that there is no provision in the town ordinance prohibiting the shooting of rabbits within the corporate limits. However, the practice may be dangerous unless extreme care be taken not to aim in the direction of houses or places where people are in the habit of walking or riding.

It is well to remember that there is an ordinance, carrying with it a fine, for hunting or shooting squirrels within the corporate limits. In fact, a warrant may be issued today for a man suspected of violating that ordinance.

Even though there was no ordinance prohibiting their killing, squirrels in the Park should not be molested. Many householders feed them both summer and winter and many are now so tame that they will come within a few feet of persons to be fed.

Presidential Gardener

The President's garden goes back to the days when John Quincy Adams of Massachusetts lived at the White House, says an article in a Boston paper. It was said that President Adams had the tastes of an English squire. In his diary he mentions that he delighted to work in the garden in the dew of the morning.

"In this small garden," he wrote, "of not less than two acres there are forest and fruit trees, shrubs, hedges, esculents, vegetables, kitchen and medicinal herbs, hot-house plants, flowers and weeds to the amount I conjecture of at least 1,000. Onseley, the gardener, knows them all by their botanical names."

Beautiful Old Cathedral

The cathedral at Rouen, France, which is of the Thirteenth century period, is one of the most impressive in existence. It once possessed the heart of Richard Coeur de Lion, which is now in a museum. It is 447 feet long, the nave is 92 feet high, and a tower, built to replace an old one struck by lightning, is of iron, 500 feet high. The front varies from Romanesque to the Flamboyant. The fine rose windows and the sculpture about the rich gabled portals are noteworthy.

Ancient Water Organ

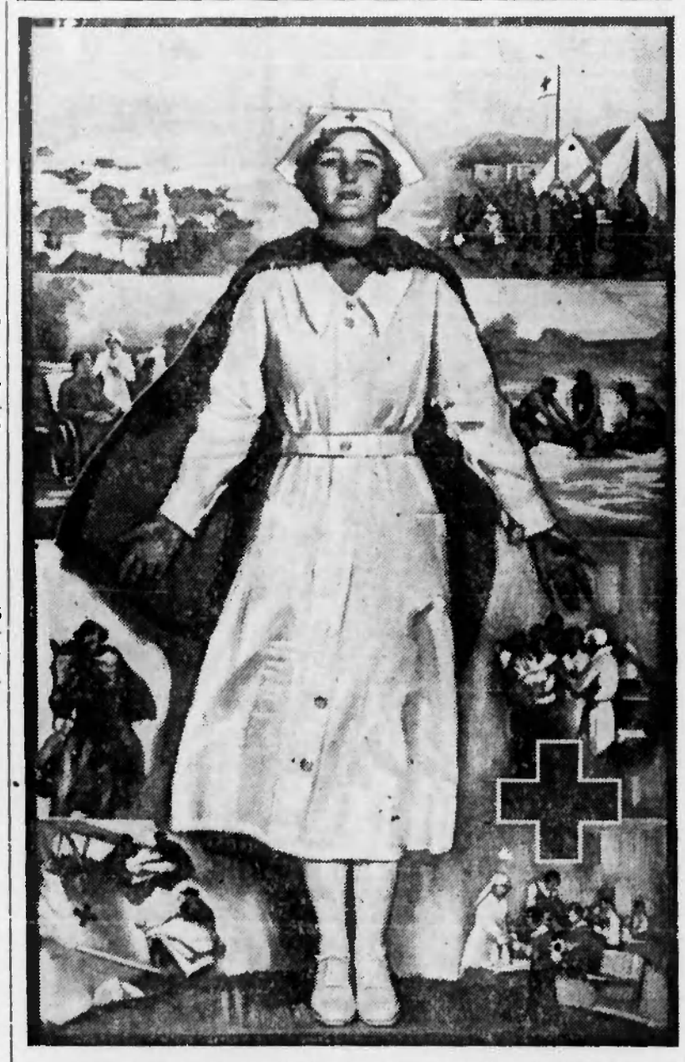
One of the strangest musical instruments, and which, by the way, plays an important part in the history of music, is the ancient water organ or hydraulic. The water organ was the musical instrument of ancient Alexandria and Rome. One of these old organs was discovered in making excavations for a new electric plant in the suburbs of Budapest, Hungary. Despite the fact that it had been buried for centuries it was in a good state of preservation.

Old Jewish Burial Customs

The ancient Jews of Palestine buried their dead by placing the corpse either in the earth or in caves hewn out of the rock. Sometimes the sepulcher was dug in the ground in the neighborhood of the family dwelling. More frequently, however, rocks were excavated so as to form compartments or galleries with as many vaults as desired. These vaults were known as "koklm." The burial place was often in a garden situated at least 50 cubits distant from the city. The site was usually marked by a whitewashed stone.

At the Helm—In Time of Need!

Join the Red Cross and Help The Distressed and Needy



3,000,000 FAMILIES HELPED BY RED CROSS

Distress in All Areas Met by Giving Food, Clothing and Other Aid.

More than 3,000,000 families throughout the nation were given relief of various types by the American Red Cross in the past winter, to aid them in their distress caused by unemployment, disaster or other misfortune.

A major relief task, due to unemployment and other unusual conditions in the bituminous mining counties in twenty states, was met by the Red Cross chapters alone, or participating with other agencies. In these 143 counties, the Red Cross aided 90,000 families through giving groceries, school lunches, clothing, flour and other necessities to combat privation.

Flour, milled from government wheat turned over to the Red Cross by Congress, was given to 15,000,000 persons in the period from March 8 to June 30, the close of the fiscal year. Flour will continue to be given through the winter of 1932-33, and Red Cross chapters also will give cotton clothing, made from government cotton turned over to the Red Cross for distribution.

"The Red Cross faces the busiest winter since the days of the World War," Chairman John Barton Payne said. "It is organized in virtually every one of the 3,072 counties in the United States, and will co-operate with all agencies to meet distress wherever found. The flour has proved of great benefit, and the cotton clothing will be given wide distribution."

While carrying on nation-wide these unemployment and other relief measures, the Red Cross also was engaged in its regular peace-time activities in public health nursing, service to ex-service men and their families, teaching home hygiene, life saving and first aid. The Junior Red Cross, composed of almost 7,000,000 school children, also rallied to the support of the society's relief efforts, and the children aided others of their age in practical ways, formed sewing and food canning classes, and were of great assistance in chapter relief work.

While the wheat and cotton were given by the U. S. Government, no money was provided to pay for the necessary work entailed. The Red Cross will meet this expense of almost $500,000 from its treasury. Citizens can aid by joining as members of the local Red Cross chapter during the roll call from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving Day.

Species of Salamander

"Water-dog" is a common name for hellbenders, large, ugly but harmless salamanders, which are found in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Tennessee and the Southeast. They feed on crayfish, fish and other water animals, and readily take the bait from fishermen's hooks. They exude much slime, are difficult to handle, and can live for hours out of water. The spawn resembles that of frogs, but is lighter in color. They reach a length of about twenty inches.

YOUR NEWSPAPER

The value of your local newspaper to the success of your business cannot be ovreestimated. It's worth all the support and co-operation you can give it. For the newspaper is a mirror reflecting the life of the community in which you and your store have an important part. Your advertisement is the reflection of your store in this mirror. Everybody sees it there. If it is not there, the mirror is dark where your store should be. You are there but you cannot be seen. Your store is open for business as usual, but "Out of sight; out of mind!" To keep in step with the progress of your community; to get your share of business, you must advertise regularly. Take your newspaper publisher into your confidence; he can give you invaluable assistance. Establish an advertising budget. Plan a regular schedule for your advertisements. It's a policy that is followed by the most successful stores; it's an idea that will be profitable for you.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

Well, the election is over, and it looks very much like the people of the country wanted a change in administration. Except, of course, good old Garrett county, which was one of the few faithfuls left. This column was right in one prediction, although the figures were just a bit higher than the ones printed here last week. We said the bond issue wouldn't get 200 votes. Well, it got 317. And it wouldn't surprise me if our county watchdog tried to take credit for the defeat of it. I had always heard of a Hoover for cleaning carpets but it's the first time I ever heard of Roosevelt sweeping the nation.

This is one neck of hote; I mean note of a heck; hock of a net—you say it—heck of a note. Harland Jones goes to Baltimore again this week and I must go along to see that he doesn't come out in the hotel corridor like a Dukhabor and let the wind blow his door shut. You remember what happened on the last rip—I mean trip.

And next week gives promise of the sequel or what not to Mr. Hyde's account of his "Rambling 'Round Garrett County." If Mr. Jones doesn't require all my time I might ramble 'round Baltimore for a day and then give a historical account of it.

My good friend, Mr. J. E. Moomaw, of Princeton, N. J., is a life-saver this week. With only ten minutes to write this column before I leave for the big city, I get a letter from him with parts well worth printing. Here are some:

"I have done quite a lot of traveling over these United States and the place most near and dear to my heart is Mountain Lake Park, the only place one can live, love and labor as he chooses, so long as he ehooses to love his own. With Miss Huff having the cooperation of the entire community, Mountain Lake will be the most popular summer resort in the States in a few years.

"I could never understand why Mt. Lake had to go to Loch Lynn for her mail and Loch Lynn had to go to Mt. Lake Park for hers. I think the postoffice should be in Loch Lynn and a sub-station in C. P. Martin's store with a subway from the postoffice to the store.

"I have done quite a lot of advertising here in the east for dear old Mountain Lake Park, telling people of the land free of mosquitoes, where the lawns need to be mowed in February, where parsnips grow six feet long, where squashes wiegh 600 lbs., and of Deep Creek Lake where the trout's average weight is 350 pounds and jump ten feet out of the water to laugh at us poor nuts sitting on the shore catching 2-inch sunfish or "punkin" seed bass.

"I have been busy catching bugs for the children's biology classes, but it was easy last week as I used candidates for doodlebugs.

"If you don't print this I will see that you are nominated for president in 1936; but if you do, you'll never even get on the State Central Committee."

Personally I never did want to be president. And my convictions are stronger after seeing the country elect a man who no doubt has ability and defeat one of the greatest men of his day.

Well, here it is just three minutes until four o'clock, Tuesday morning and the column not out yet. What a pellish predicament. The boss editor is going to get wise if I don't get an idea before long.

One hundred sixty-seven school children without shoes and 114 more needing them is a lot different than the 5000 reported by David J. Lewis some few weeks ago.

And the peanut has not yet been rolled up Alder street toward the Court House.

A little boy just remarked Sunday to his uncle that they were building a dog house out the State road, just north of town, and that he ought to go out to see it. Driving out in his car the little boy pointed it out. "There," he said. The house with the smoke-stack on the side of it."

It's a good thing I hadn't moved in yet. Anyway, I'm no relation to the county watchdog; a different breed entirely. I'm part pointer and setter myself. I always point to a chair whenever possible and go and sit in it. Ask the boss editor.

CHURCH SERVICE TO MARK CLOSE OF BI-CENTENNIAL

Celebration In Honor of Washington to Close Thanksgiving

The George Washington Bicentennial celebration will be brought to a close on Thanksgiving Day, November 24, in the same manner in which it began on Feburary 22—with religious services in honor of George Washington in all the churches of America.

The United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission estimates that more than 75,000 churches will participate in separate Thanksgiving Bicentennial exercises. In many cities and towns, the Bicentennial Commission reports, churches of all denominations will hold joint commemorative Thanksgiving Day exercises in honor of the Father of his Country.

The reports from the religious societies of America indicate that every church of the land will participate in this closing tribute, either by holding separate Bicentennial exercises or by joining with the other churches of their community in a combined celebration.

The Bicentennial Celebration has been going on in all parts of the world for the past nine months. More than 700,000 separate committees, representing the schools and churches as well as civic, fraternal and patriotic societies, have been actively engaged in honoring the memory of George Washington on the two hundredth anniversary of his birth. Every state, city and town in the United States has participated. Besides, the celebration has been carried out in all our territories and dependencies as well as in seventy-eight foreign countries.

The records of the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission indicate that to date more than one million separate Bicentennial programs have been held in all parts of the world.

This unprecedented celebration—the greatest tribute ever paid to a national hero—will come to an official close with observances of simplicity and respect. A united nation will show its reverence and admiration for its founder.

The United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission announces that it has prepared special booklets to assist organizations in arranging their Thanksgiving Day celebration programs. More than 25,000 of these booklets have already been distributed. In addition the Commission has prepared a book of sermons made up of contributions from the leading clergymen of the various denominations of America. These sermon books have been distributed primarily to churches in small cities and towns where facilities for research are not abundant. Copies may still be procured by writing to the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission in Washington, D. C.

F. J. REED NAMED HEAD OF TABLELAND DIRECTORS

Preston County Agent Elected at Meeting Held Friday—Plans For New Year Discussed

TO MEET PITTSBURGHERS

Directors of the Allegheny Tableland Association who were elected to the governing board at a meeting in Grantsville in October, met last Friday afternoon in the office of the Mountain Lake Institute to organize and formulate a policy and plans.

Fred J. Reed, Preston County agent, acted as temporary chairman. The following were present: Fred. J. Reed, J. D. Prettyman, C. D. Uibel, E. M. Hansel, Paul Rouzer, J. B. Watson, Bushrod Grimes, Grover C. Stemple, W. F. Lipscomb, John S. Miller, A. D. Rothermal and I. S. Middaugh.

Mr. Reed was elected president for the ensuing year; John S. Miller, vice-president; I. S. Middaugh, secretary, and C. N. McIntire, treasurer.

During the meeting a discussion was centered around the plans and policies of the Association for the new year. It was decided to ask for a meeting with the Pittsburgh Tableland Council as a joint board of promotion and control to be held in Pittsburgh on November 30th.

Plans for financing an enlarged program were discussed and the spirit of the whole governing board was for a forward program working with the Pittsburgh Tableland Council to promote the Tableland festivals which were such a success this year and to encourage the development of the Tableland fair in Pittsburgh. Recommendation to this effect was passed and will be presented at the meeting of the joint board of promotion and control.

The opportunities now developing through the Association in the fields of marketing and grading, were carefully discussed and steps taken to encourage the development of this phase of the work of the Allegheny Tableland Association.

Twelve community units are now organized and others will be set up in the near future. The success of the Tableland Association will depend in a large measure on the wholehearted support given the organization and program in the communities of the Tableland, it was stated.

Pittsburgh Fair at the Park

Looking toward a larger program at Mountain Lake Park Institute, an invitation is being extended through the Institute and the Tableland Association to the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce to hold a Pittsburgh Fair at Mountain Lake Park probably the first week in June. The Tableland Fair in Pittsburgh was such a decided success and drew many thousands to the exhibit that the idea should be carried out and the products and developments of the Pittsburgh area should be exhibited in the heart of the Tablelands.

OAKLAND A. A. WILL OPEN SEASON THURSDAY NIGHT

Rowlesburg to be Met on Oakland High Floor at 8:15

Oakland A. A. will open its basketball season on Thursday evening, on the Oakland High school court when Rowlesburg will be met.

The basketball club is playing this year under the auspices of the Oakland Volunteer Fire Department, and is composed of practically the same players at last year with the exception of Garthright May, former Oakland boy who has been playing on the court at Cumberland for the past several seasons.

The game is scheduled for 8:15 o'clock. All proceeds will go for the benefit of the fire department. Admission will be 15 and 25 cents.

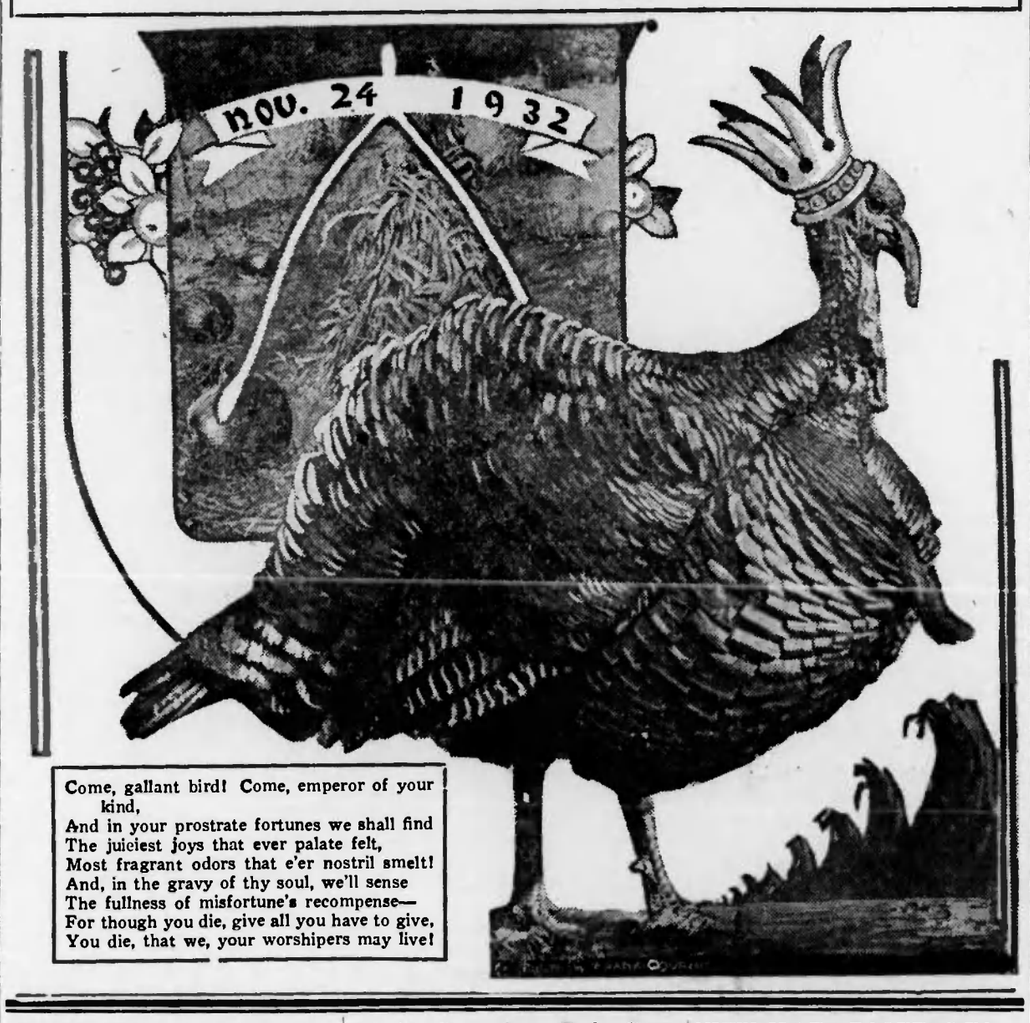
The team will appear for the first time in new uniforms, gold and blue, with the fire department monogram on the jerseys.

Making Clothing for Needy

The second year girls of the vocational home economics classes of Oakland High school are busy at present making garments for the needy of the county. Outing slips, dresses, and shirts for boys are being made by these girls with material furnished through the American Red Cross.

The first year girls are at work on on class uniforms.

AUTOCRAT OF THE DAY



Come, gallant bird! Come, emperor of your kind,
And in your prostrate fortunes we shall find
The juiciest joys that ever palate felt,
Most fragrant odors that e'er nostril smelt!
And, in the gravy of thy soul, we'll sense
The fullness of misfortune's recompense—
For though you die, give all you have to give,
You die, that we, your worshipers may live!

Admit Swapping Red Cross Flour for Whisky

The story of how flour stolen from a Red Cross relief depot was bartered for liquor was unfolded in Federal Court at Charleston, W. Va., yesterday as four men were sentenced to terms in Federal institutions.

Arthur Tuman, William Shelton and Cecil Chapman, all of Clay, W. Va., pleaded guilty to stealing thirty-eight sacks of flour marked with Red Cross insignia from a storehouse at Clay and exchanging it at the rate of eight sacks of flour for one gallon of liquor. They were sentenced to two years each in the Chillicothe Reformatory.

Howard Stephenson, also of Clay, was sentenced to three years in the Atlanto Penitentiary for trading liquor for the flour.

FIRE ENTIRELY DESTROYS FARM DWELLING MONDAY

Defective Flue Cause of Blaze at Home of Dewey Rice

The farm dwelling occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Rice and family, in Pleasant Valley, south of Mountain Lake Park, was entirely destroyed by fires shortly after noon on Monday.

It is thought that the blaze was occasioned by a defective flue which communicated the flames to the upper part of the structure.

The Oakland Volunteer Fire Department was summoned and had a spring on the farm held out it was stated by the firemen that the building would in all probability have been saved from complete destruction. All of the house furnishings on the lower floor of the house and some from the upper portion were carried out and thus saved from burning.

The farm upon which the destroyed building stood is owned by Stuart F. Hamill, attorney, of Oakland. Some insurance was carried on the property.

Another Farm Home Burns

The farm home of James Mahaffey, of Backbone mountain, about four miles from Gorman, was completely destroyed by fire shortly after one o'clock Monday. Mr. Mahaffey and his two sons had finished eating dinner and it was stated that fire in the kitchen stove had almost died out.

Returning to some work at cutting timber about three-eights of a mile from the house, they had just reached the place when they glanced back and saw the upper portion of their home full of smoke.

They were able to save their canned goods and a small part of their furniture and bed clothing. Fire evidently started in the attic from a defective flue above the kitchen stove. Mr. Mahaffey and his two sons occupied the home.

KITZMILLER BOOTERS TO MEET BRUCE ON TUESDAY

Allegany and Garrett County Champions to Fight it Out

Kitzmiller High school's soccer team, champion of Garrett county, will meet Bruce High school of Westernport, at Grantsville, on Tuesday, November 29, at 2 p. m., in the first of the series of elimination contests for the championship of the state.

Kitzmiller is Garrett county's league by a small margin, having lost no games and having tied none. Oakland High, although not losing a game, tied Accidednt at Oakland to give them second place.

Kitzmmiller is Garrett county's champion for the sixth time since 1921, having won in 1921, 1922, 1927, 1928, and 1930. Grantsville won in 1929 and 1931, while Oakland was victorious in 1923, 1924, 1925, and 1926. The closest score recorded in the series between Allegany county and Garrett county was made in 1921 when Barton defeated Kitzmiller 4-1.

Playground Athletic League officials have also announced that Central High, of Lonaconing, field ball champions of Allegany county, will meet Friendsville High, Garrett county champions, in the first round of the annual state fieldball tournament eliminations. The game will be played Tuesday, November 29, at a place to be determined.

Second Golden Eagle Seen In County Is Captured

The second golden eagle seen in Garrett county has not met the same fate as did the one killed last week by W. E. Spoerlein, near Gortner, but is now a prisoner at the home of L. C. Beckman, a farmer of the North Glade section of the county.

The captured bird is as large as the one killed last week, having a wing spread of seven feet one inch, and in all probability is its mate, although it was reported to The Republican yesterday that another eagle was seen on Monday in the Gortner section.

The eagle at Mr. Beckman's was shot and stunned and while in this condition was taken to the home of the family and placed in a wire cage.

The bird is just now beginning to test out the strength of its prison and seems to be fully recovered from the charge of shot it received and the blow on its head when the attempt was made to capture it.

Miss Caroline Gambrill, who was instructor at the recent Bible school in Oakland and at Kitzmiller, returned to her home in Ellicott City yesterday after having concluded the school at Kitzmiller last night.

COMMISSIONERS ASK STATE FUNDS FOR USE IN COUNTY; PROPOSE 37-CENT REDUCTION IN COUNTY SCHOOL LEVY

Favor Allocation of Portion of Gasoline Tax to Counties of the State For Road Work

RESOLUTION IS PASSED

Favoring the allocation of part of the receipts from the State gasoline tax to the counties of Maryland for road work and the reduction of the amount each county must include in its tax rate in order to participate in the public school equalization system, the county commissioners of 22 counties of the State, meeting at Annapolis last Friday, adopted two resolutions setting forth their recommendations. All three members of the County Commissioners' board of Garrett county attended the meeting and took part in the discussions as questions arose.

The commissions recommended that a portion of the funds now raised from a tax on gasoline and expended under the supervision of the State Roads Commission for maintenance of State roads, be allocated to the several counties to be spent under the respective boards of county commissioners for maintenance of county roads.

Opposition to the resolution on this suggestion was registered by Brooke Lee, member of the State Roads Commission and spokesman for Governor Ritchie, who said the State was prepared to aid the counties in the upkeep of their roads to the extent of between $1,200,000 and $1,500,000, but insisted that the commission have the right to expend the money.

The second resolution requested a reduction of 37 cents in the sum each county must include in its tax rate in order to participate in the public school equalization system. The present system requires each county to collect 67 cents on each $100 of assessable property before the State will provide any deficit between the collections in that county and the expenses of its school system.

Garrett County Commissioners recommended that a part of the reduction be made up by an assessment or tax on the salaries of every public official of the county and state above $1,000. "This would cause no greater State assessment and would necessarily reduce the tax rate on all assessable property in the counties," George D. Browning, president of the local board, said in the meeting. Nothing, however, was done with our recommendation at the session on Friday," Mr. Browning said yesterday in conversation with the writer.

Only one county in the State was not represented at the meeting and only one county voted against the resolutions.

Would Cut County Road Costs

Enactment of legislation as provided in the gasoline tax resolution, it was pointed out, would reduce materially the sums the respective counties now must raise for local maintenance purposes. It would make a corresponding cut in the total now expended in the State for new highways.

Seek Permanent Relief

Proponents of the resolutions asserted they had not been drawn with a view of shifting the tax burden from the counties to the State, but in an effort to gain permanent relief and to cut down the overhead, especially in the schools.

The resolution as adopted by the Eastern Shore commissioners' meeting on October 17, and ratified at the meeting of the Western Shore commissioners in Frederick two weeks ago, was the one adopted at the joint meeting Friday.

The Resolutions Adopted

1. ROADS. The burden of maintenance of county roads should be relieved by a change in the law relative to the gasoline tax and the motor vehicle license fund, so as to permit revenues derived from such tax and fund to be applied to the maintenance of said roads, under the direction and supervision of the local boards of County Commissioners of the various counties in the State, under the present method of allocation of State road funds.

2. SCHOOLS. We recommend that legislation be enacted so that no county will be required to levy more than thirty cents (.30) on the one hundred dollars ($100.00) in order to share in the equalization fund.

3. LAW ENFORCEMENT. We recommend that the law relative to fines paid by violators of the automobile law be changed so as to permit fines collected thereunder to be returned to the county treasurer of the county where the violation and trial took place, Instead of the Automobile

YOUTH'S HEAD BLOWN OFF SATURDAY BY SHOTGUN

Henry Halterman Killed Instantly When Gun Trigger Strikes Rock and Is Fired

FORBIDDEN TO HAVE GUN

The first fatal hunting accident of the season in Garrett county occurred Saturday afternoon about 12:45, when Henry Halterman, 17, of Henry, was instantly killed when his shotgun accidentally exploded, blowing off the left portion of his head.

Halterman and a boy companion, Wilmer Pifer, were on their way to a store at Henry. Wanting to hunt along the way the lad took a gun from his home against the protest of his mother.

The gun was loaded and he had fired one of the two charges it contained at a rabbit and then attempting to climb upon a rock to observe the course the rabbit took, the hammer of the gun struck against the rock as he was drawing it toward him and exploded the second charge, the shot striking him in the head and killing him instantly.

The youth was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Halterman, of near Henry. Their daughter was drowned a number of years ago when she fell into the Potomac River near her home.

State's Attorney Walter W. Dawson and other county officers investigated the accident.

SPIRIT OF THANKS

THANKSGIVING: A Parable

THE frail boats of these Pilgrims had been delivered from the vast and tumultuous masses of the dark sea. Under the frowning battlements of the black forest they lifted their roof trees and muscled their walls with oak, laid open the new soil and cast the shining grain, forgetful in labor and hope of their great loneliness.

AND now their strong, small cabins stood, seamed with snow, in the utter whiteness of the clearing. The blue smoke of their sturdy chimneys drifted warmly against the black wall of the wilderness and their hearths were ruddy with deep embers.

THE harvest was bountiful. The dark barns were musty with maize and bulging pumpkins glowed in the light of the candle. The walls of the cabins were festooned with dry herbs and at each door hung the frozen carcass of a wild beast.

THE dark ocean thundered with winter storms. The vast wilderness frowned. Death lurked in the forest and the clearing. Men had died from ax wounds and arrows. Children had perished of starvation and disease and young wives had died in motherhood. Over each door hung the weapons of hunt and warfare. Life was grim and heroic with Odyssean uncertainty.

BUT there were the rooftree and the precious fire, grain in the bin and the stripped carcass by the door. This was their home; only death could dispossess them. Their minds and their hearts were their own and not even death could dispossess them. Here a man might speak as he pleased and pray as he pleased. He could not ask for more, having known the wrongs of oppression and the terrors of the wide sea and a strange land.

AND so a day was set aside for Thanksgiving to God for His great goodness, for the boon of life, for rooftree and fire and food and the privilege of the thankful heart. On that day, between the stormy sea and the awful wilderness, these people sang and feasted on the small bounty of the first harvest.

—Hubert Kelley, in the Kansas City Star.

American Spirit Shown in Washington's Order

In the darkest hour of the American Revolution, at Valley Forge, Gen. George Washington made December 17, 1777, Thanksgiving day by general order. That spirit eventually broke the American power of the British crown. In the Presidency, Washington proclaimed the celebration, though his example was followed only occasionally by other Presidents and the states had no uniform rule of observance. It was a growth. Notable and significant of the meaning is the fact that in 1864, with the nation yet engulfed in the Civil war, exhausted, bankrupt, President Lincoln issued the Thanksgiving proclamation which since has been repeated year after year by succeeding Presidents. The South long repulsed the feast as a Puritanical, even, therefore, a Satanical invention; yet for half a century the South, too, has known the spirit and has joined to make the day one of national participation.

For all the hands that wrought for us,
For all the minds that thought for us,
For all the men who looked ahead
And saw us living in their stead;
For kindly hands that sow for us
And shining fields that grow for us,
For all the thoughtfulness of toil
And all the benisons of soil,
We thank Thee, God—and may we live
To dream and hope, to work and give,
With eyes beyond and hearts to bless
A world of so much loveliness.

Concluding Article In Sunday Sun on Maryland Travels Gives Garrett County High Place

Henry M. Hyde, in his articles, "Roaming 'Round Maryland," in the Baltimore Sunday Sun, gives the high spots of his journeys in last Sunday's issue, placing Garrett county at the head in impressive mountain scenery and a place for the establishment of winter sports.

Parts of his article follow:

"After driving through all the twenty-three counties of Maryland, I bring back with me certain especially striking pictures. Because they are strikingly picturesque or beautiful or full of historic interest they stand out in my memory.

"The visit to each county was brief and hasty. Many points of great beauty and interest were, certainly, not seen at all. The list printed below is not offered as comprehensive. It includes many scenes familiar to most Marylanders. Doubtless, it omits others which surpass in charm or beauty those named. It represents, at best, only personal reactions to a hurried drive of several thousand miles through the State. Better judges may well disagree with the choice made.

Varied Scenery

"One initial impression was most fully confirmed. Small as it is, Maryland offers the widest possible variety of land—and water spaces. Lacking any stupendous or overpowering natural feature, the State—divided yet connected by the great bay—contains within its irregular and almost disconnected limits, land which varies from sea level to half a mile in height. With only a single county on the Atlantic Ocean, there are fifteen others which border on or are penetrated by great tidal rivers, while in the western counties there are rushing mountain torrents and waterfalls and branches which discharge their waters into the Gulf of Mexico.

"The most impressive mountain scenery is in Garrett county. To see it at its best one should drive from Cumberland over the river road which runs into the borders of West Virginia and then climbs the rugged sides of seven-mile mountain. From its crest one may look back over miles of wild and beautiful country, while the slow descent into Garrett county opens up a whole series of picturesque views.

Mountain Vistas

Oakland, the county seat, lies west of the Allegheny Mountains, and the whole circuit back to Cumberland is a succession of sweeping mountain vistas, the highway leading finally through the historic Cumberland Narrows, from earliest days the gateway to the great west. Through this gap in the mountains passed General Braddock, George Washington and most of the pioneers who took possession of the Ohio and Kentucky country.

A familiar but always beautiful mountain picture is that seen from the crest of Braddock Heights, a few miles beyond Frederick. The hill is about 2,000 feet high. It breaks away abruptly to the west and reveals the wide sweeping of the charming Middletown Valley.

Mountain Cataracts

" * * * Different again and in their own manner quite as beautiful, are the views of Deep Creek Lake in Garrett county, where for miles the blue mountain water fills the deep valleys between the mountains and the prospect from the crest of the Dulaney Valley road, in Baltimore county. * *

"To those who like their water in swift motion, Garrett county offers Swallow Falls and the still higher cataract near by where Muddy Creek drops over a cliff of limestone. Having seen these, the Marylander is bound to visit the Great Falls of the Potomac, some miles above Georgetown, in Montgomery county, where the great river runs for a long distance over and around big boulders and rushes down a series of steep rapids.

"In Garrett county would seem to be the ideal spot for the establishment of winter sports on a large scale. Here are a thousand hills and mountains, varying in height and steepness and, in a normal winter, thickly covered with deep snow for months. Toboggan slides and courses of skiing are almost everywhere, made to order in advance. And, as for skating, the winding water of Deep Creek Lake extending for miles among the hills, with shelter houses here and there along its banks, offers every attraction, to say nothing of the rivers and branches which, when frozen over, make pathways leading far back into the wild country of the hills.

28 DIE IN WEST VA. MINES IN OCTOBER

International Hay and Grain Show

Maryland producers of superior farm crops are planning to make a strong showing in the competitive classes of the 1932 International Hay and Grain Show, which will be held in Chicago from November 26 to December 3 in connection with the International Livestock Exposition. F. W. Oldenburg, agronomist for the University of Maryland Extension Service, is assisting in the work of selecting the best possible display of samples from Maryland to be shown at Chicago this year. According to Mr. Oldenburg, new classes have been added by the International management for smoother types of corn which have not been included in former years.

The winnings of Maryland exhibitors at previous Internationals have demonstrated that this State can produce as high quality crops as any place in the continent.

Feeding Wheat to Hogs

When wheat is low in price or damaged by insects, it may be more profitable to market it through feeding it to hogs than by selling the grain; the way to secure a large and efficient utilization of ground wheat by hogs is to supplement the grain with a high protein feed, or pasture, or both. This provides a ration that gives good growth and calls for a continuously increasing amount of feed, it is stated by B. E. Carmichael, animal husbandman for the University of Maryland Experiment Station, in a new bulletin, "Feeding Wheat to Fattening Hogs."

Experiments conducted at the University, according to the author, showed the use of a high-protein supplement resulted in a 51 percent larger consumption of feed and the use of both a high protein supplement and abundant pasture gave 57 a per cent larger consumption of feed aside from the pasture, as compared with the use of only ground wheat and minerals in dry lot. The use of abundant pasture along with wheat and minerals resulted in a 34 percent larger feed consumption aside from pasture, as compared with the use of wheat and minerals in dry lot.

No substantial advantage was found in feeding ground wheat and shelled corn together as compared with feeding either of these feeds separately. A mixture of equal parts of shelled corn and ground wheat was superior to shelled corn but was less efficient than ground wheat.

Whole wheat, according to Mr. Carmichael, was found to be more palatable than either ground wheat or shelled corn and ground wheat was fully as suitable over a moderately long feeding period as shelled corn, when each is supplemented by minerals and fish meal.

Copies of the new bulletin may be secured free of charge by writing the Experiment Station at College Park, and asking for Bulletin 336.

BAUGHMAN CITES NEED FOR HAND SIGNALING

Says Accidents Would Be Lessened by Following Rules

Calling attention to disregard of hand signaling, E. Austin Baughman, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, points out the necessity of autoists to acquaint themselves with three minor signals which would lessen the number of accidents in the towns and the cities as well as upon the highways.

Following the report last week that an increasing number of accidents had been caused by the disregard of hand signals, Mr. Baughman said:

"If autoists would follow the simple and reasonable system of signals many accidents could be avoided. For instance, the straight extended left arm with the finger pointing to the left cannot mean anything but that the operator is going to make a left-hand turn. In doing this the driver should ease himself over to as near the middle of the street as possible.

"The signal for a right-hand turn, tha tof extending the arm well out so that it can be seen from the rear and making a slowly circling forward movement with the forearm, is equally easy to understand.

"When this signal is made and the intention is to turn right the operator should draw as close to the curb on the right-hand side of the street as possible as he approaches the intersection.

"This will clearly indicate to the following cars 'come on; I am getting ready to turn out of the way and you may pass me.'

BITTINGER

The hunting season opened last week with a bang and throughout the week there was a continuous volley on every mountainside and in the valleys of this community.

District Game Warden Richard S. Browning, of Oakland, was in this section early last week.

A number of sportsemen from Cumberland and Frostburg spent part of last week hunting in this vicinity.

Merchant C. E. Ellithorp and Asa J. Orendorf spent last Saturday afternoon duck shooting on Deep Creek Lake.

The fall butchering has begun in this community and the pungent odor of fresh sausage and buckwheat cakes may be noticed on the early morning breezes.

Ralph Buckle, teacher of the Sunnyside school, spent the week-end here with his parents.

Many tall hunting stories may be heard each evening when the local Nimrods gather in the corner grocery, but no one has as yet decided who is the champion yarn spinner.

Lesson for November 27

STEWARDSHIP OF LIFE

Mark 1:16-20; Acts 26:12-19; I Corinthians 9:16-27.

GOLDEN TEXT—And this they did, not as we hoped, but first gave their own selves to the Lord, and unto us by the will of God. II Corinthians 8:5.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God Choosing a Worker.

JUNIOR TOPIC — Following the Leader.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Serving God Where We Are.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Living as God's Stewards.

By stewardship of life is meant the recognition of the fact that our personal being, including all of our powers, faculties and possessions—all that we have and are—belongs to God.

I. Four Fishermen Called to Stewardship (Mark 1:16-20).

1. Who they were (vv. 16, 19). Simon and Andrew, John and James; two pairs of brothers. It is usually wise to engage in the Lord's service in groups. This is not only desirable for effective testimony, but for needed fellowship on the part of the workers, and protection of the witnesses.

2. From what they were called (vv. 16, 20). These men were fishermen.

3. To what they were called (v. 17). They were to become fishers of men. The qualities which made them good fishermen were patience, courage to face the storm at night, and perseverance which led them to toil all night though no fish were caught. These qualities would make them good fishers of men.

4. The cost of obedience to Christ's call (vv. 18, 20). Obedience to Christ's call meant sacrifice and painful separation. It was to give up all business interest and leave their father.

5. Their reward (v. 17). Their names have become immortalized. Christ promised one hundred fold in this life and eternal life in the world to come.

II. Paul's Call to Stewardship (Acts 26:12-19).

1. His manner of life (vv. 1-12). In his defense before Agrippa he showed that he had been in the strictest accord with the most rigid sect of the Jews. He possessed the same hope of a coming Deliverer and reminded them of the fact that formerly he was most bitterly opposed to Christ.

2. His supernatural conversion (vv. 13-15). He declared that Christ had appeared and revealed himself to him on the way to Damascus.

3. Commissioned by Christ (vv. 16-18). He was sent to the Gentiles.

a. To open their eyes, which had been so awfully blinded.

b. To turn them from darkness to light.

c. To turn them from the power of Satan unto God.

d. That they might receive forgiveness of sins.

e. That they might obtain an inheritance among the saints.

4. His consecration (vv. 19-23). As soon as he received his commission, he rendered instant obedience.

III. Paul Impressing Stewardship Upon the Corinthians (I Cor. 9:16-27). The Corinthians were an intemperate and dissolute people. The surest and most effective way to combat vice is to inculcate virtue.

1. Paul's own life and example (vv. 19-23). Though free from all men he made himself servant unto all. He most rigorously limited himself in order to gain others for Christ.

2. The Isthmian Games (vv. 24-27). Paul uses these popular games to illustrate the need of self-control. He showed that man was redeemed for a purpose. Those who would apprehend that purpose must possess a definite motive. He shows:

a. Life is a race (vv. 24-25). In order to win a prize there must be self-denial, and definite self-exertion. The Christian obtains life by contact with Jesus Christ through faith (John 3:16; John 3:35; John 5:24). This life must be possessed before he can begin the race. While he gets salvation, (life) at the beginning, God places before him definite rewards as incentives for exertion. The Christian believes for salvation but works for rewards. As the racer in these games abstains from everything that might hinder him, so the Christian will make any sacrifice in order to win. If the heathen would practice such self-denial for a garland of laurel, certainly the Christian should turn from all bodily indulgences to obtain the crown of righteousness which fadeth not away.

b. The Christian's life is a fight (vv. 26-27). His efforts are not merely beatings of the air. He has a real antagonist. In order to win success, his body must be kept in subjection. The believer has a severe struggle with his carnal nature.

The Natural Thing

We should seek to make our lives straight, and true, and healthful, and beautiful, because that is what they were meant to be; just as a tree grows upright, and broad, and leafy, because it is the natural thing for it to do.

Light to Our Path

"The word of God is not only a lamp to our feet and a light to our path, but exhorts us to courage and victory."

Thanksgiving

OH, LET me linger by my fireside embers—
Thanksgiving is no day for idle roving,
Old friends, old days, old songs, my heart remembers,
Are gathered to my side for hours of loving.
I take life's book and turn its yellow pages,
Before the firelight glow I watch them brighten.
Old faces of old friends of outgrown ages,
Through windows, with me, watch the brown earth whiten.

I SEE old homesteads with their snowy thatches,
And from huge chimneys grayish smoke ascending.
I hear the welcome sound of lifting latches.
I feel the warm handclasps of hands befriending.
Oh, faces of the past, when life was living,
Come, gather 'round this board and lift your voices
Again, as yore, in one long, glad Thanksgiving,
In which the heart of youth and age rejoices!

ALL ASKED TO ASSIST IN T. B. PREVENTION IN STATE

Children and Young People Particularly Susceptible to Disease

Only a few days before Thanksgiving Day when the annual sale of Tuberculosis Christmas Seals will begin! The sale will be conducted as usual under the auspices of the Maryland Tuberculosis Association.

Year by year, the tiny symbols have carried their message of hope throughout the country. Good old Santa Claus has appeared on some; bells gayly ringing out their reminders of good will on others; ships under full sail on others, and this year, healthy looking little choristers bring the thought of a Christmas that is made happier through service to others.

"It is especially appropriate for the message of the Tuberculosis Seals to be brought to us by healthy, happy children," Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health, said in calling attention to the opening of the annual seal sale, "because if we can safeguard the children and young people of today from damage by this insidious disease, we will do much to check the danger at its very source. We are also laying the foundations for healthy manhood and womanhood—the best barricade against the disease.

"Tuberculosis doesn't 'just happen'. Every case of the disease is derived, or 'caught' as we say, in some way from some other case. Children and young people are particularly susceptible to the disease. Persons who have it are often careless, ignorant, or indifferent about spitting, sneezing, coughing, and spray their germs around where other people are endangered by them. Children and young people are frequently the victims of such carelessness.

"The keynote of the fight against tuberculosis is prevention. The tremendous victories that have been won in the fifty years since Koch made his great discovery of the germ that causes the disease, have been accomplished through applying the knowledge that has accumulated as to the ways and means by which the disease can be prevented. The means of prevention have been found to be comparatively simple—sunshine, fresh air, nourishing food, suitable clothing, plenty of sleep, wholesome recreation, and protection from infection. If there has been a weak spot in the defense and the disease has gotten a foothold, there is still hope of arresting it, if discovered in the early stages and prompt care is given.

"Part of the money derived from the sale of the Christmas Seals is contributed by the Maryland Tuberculosis Association toward the support of clinics held every month throughout the counties for the examination of persons who show symptoms of the disease, or who have been in contact with it. The clinics are held under the joint auspices of the State Department of Health and the Tuberculosis Association. Thousands of people have been benefitted by this service, and many of them have been started on the road to health.

"This is only one of the ways in which the money you put into the Christmas Seals helps others. You don't have to have a great deal of money to have a part in the fight against tuberculosis. The seals are only a penny a piece. Let's help to the utmost."

ASKED TO REMEMBER SEAL SALE IN CHRISTMAS LIST

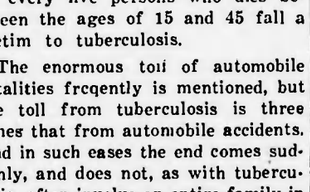
Tuberculosis Has Decreased 50 Per Cent Since First Campaign

When you make up your Christmas list, be sure to remember the Christmas Seal, said Mrs. C. Milton Sincell, local chairman for the campaign. Small in size, it has done a big job, and still has great things to do in these days of stress. One out of every five persons who dies between the ages of 15 and 45 fall a victim to tuberculosis.

The enormous toll of automobile fatalities frequently is mentioned, but the toll from tuberculosis is three times that from automobile accidents. And in such cases the end comes suddenly, and does not, as with tuberculosis, often involve an entire family in distress and poverty which may increase the danger of the disease to other members of the household.

Tuberculosis is preventable as shown by the history of the tuberculosis movement. During the 25 years the Christmas Seal has been sold in Maryland, the death rate has declined more than 50%. Part of this has been due to the anti-tuberculosis activities of the Maryland Tuberculosis Association, which sponsors the annual Seal Sale in Maryland. The Christmas Seal helps support the Miracle House, Maryland's preventorium at Claiborne, Maryland; state-wide free chest clinic service; health education and industrial work; and medical research.

SCOOP'S COLUMN



By Scoop Himself

Henry M. Hyde rather redeemed himself in Sunday's Sun, and so it really pains me to have to write anything about the history of Baltimore after just a two day's jaunt there. Outside of a lot of colored people, slums and dirty streets, Baltimore has historical possibilities, so I had better keep out of it. Mr. Hyde, in his concluding article in "Rambling 'Round Maryland," mentioned Garrett county in more favorable terms than was the case several weeks ago when he got an earful of Meshack Browning and forgot the real life of the country.

Seeing one dozen raw oysters slide down the aesophagus of Delbert Davis has not changed my ideas about oysters one bit. I still don't like them without a little heat. Harland Jones acted like a perfect gentleman and didn't try to stage a one-man parade through the corridors of the hotel.

All I've got to say is that I hope it will continue.

That it's against the law in Tennessee to throw stones, or a misdemeanor for a miller to grind grist for customers out of turn. Folk must not haul cotton after dark, either. The state once provided that men could pay their poll tax in squirrel and crow scalps. The scalps were burned.

Louisiana has a "hit hat" law that punishes a theatre proprietor who allows patrons to wear high hats in the audience. It's also against the law there to let a hat pin protrude more than half an inch from the hat crown unless the point is shielded.

Common law in Georgia allows a man to whip his wife if the husband uses a stick no larger that his finger. An old Arkansas law says every person who swears profanely shall forfeit one dollar per swear.

Mississippi law requires trains meeting at a crossing to halt, "Neither to proceed until the other had passed." It doesn't say which train is to proceed first.

Tennessee's musty laws provide that a fellow convicted of drunkenness would be fined 62 and one-half cents, if he got drunk on Sunday. Any other day he got off lighter—a fine of 31 and one-fourth cents.

THE CLOSE OF THE BICENTENNIAL CELEBRATION

The world-wide George Washington celebration was brought to an official close yesterday with Thanksgiving services in the churches in honor of the Father of his country. The United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission reports that Thanksgiving services were held by the churches of all denominations in every city in America and in the large cities abroad.

For the past nine months, since February 22, millions of people in all corners of the world have participated in what was the greatest celebration of history in honor of a National hero.

The United States George Washington Commission is now engaged compiling retailed records of the celebration. While these cannot be available for several months, the highlights of the celebration are here set down.

Active work of the Commission, with President Hoover as chairman, and Congressman Sol Bloom at associate director, began some two and a half years ago. Plans were mapped out for a nation-wide and world-wide celebration and not for a world's fair or a geographically centralized event.

Cooperative Bicentennial commissions were appointed in every state, city and practically every town of America. Besides, committees were appointed among civic, fraternal and religious bodies as well as in the schools.

More than 700,000 separate and distinct Bicentennial Commissions and committees functioned actively during the celebration period.

A conservative estimate by the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission claims that more than one million different Bicentennial Celebration programs took place during this nine months period.

The United States Commission has distributed, without charge, more than 12 million pieces of literature in assisting local committees. Historical pamphlets, plays and pageants, music, educational pamphlets, etc., have been published and distributed from the Commission's headquarters in Washington.

Nation-wide contests, in the elementary schools, high schools and institutions of higher learning have been conducted by the Commission. More than two million American boys and girls have participated in these contests.

The Commission has distributed to the schools of America more than one million large-size lithographed copies of the Gilbert Stuart Athenaeum portrait of George Washington.

Every library in America received a copy of the Commission's special flag chart showing all the flags in the Revolution. Every Post Office has received a large poster of Wakefield, Washington's birthplace.

More than one million copies of the George M. Cohan song, "Father of the Land We Love," were distributed. This song was written for the Commission by Mr. Cohen as his personal tribute to our First President.

A special Bicentennial quarter dollar was minted and put in general circulation. A special medal was also minted which the Commission awarded for meritorious service in connection with the celebration.

Our Post Office issued a series of twelve George Washington stamps to commemorate the celebration.

The Definitive Writings of George Washington are now being compiled and published. This is the most comprehensive undertaking on George Washington ever attempted. Twenty-five volumes will be required to complete this work.

Wakefield, the birthplace of George Washington, has been restored and turned over to the Government as a national shrine.

More than thirty million George Washington memorial trees have been planted since February 22.

The Commission collected practically all of the famous George Washington portraits which have been exhibited in the Corcoran Gallery of Washington, D. C., during the celebration. This is the first time that these famous portraits have been gathered under one roof.

Abroad, seventy-eight countries have participated in the Bicentennial Celebration. This was a spontaneous movement, without official invitation from our Government.

Twenty-six foreign cities have named streets, parks and squares for George Washington. In Germany alone four cities have renamed thoroughfares for George Washington.

The Government of Poland issued postage stamps in honor of the Bicentennial Celebration.

In Vienna a new municipal apartment house was named after George Washington.

The above includes but a few of the highlights of the celebration. In every state, city and town in America, commemorative observances were held. Plays and pageants were produced, Bicentennial trees were planted, contests were conducted, meetings and parades were held.

The United States Bicentennial Commission in Washington, hopes to gather all the reports of Bicentennial events from all over the world. Those responsible for these events should send complete reports immediately to the commission. These will be published in Memorial Volumes of the Celebration and will be deposited in the leading libraries of America. Undoubtedly these volumes will be a valuable addition to the Washingtonia now available.

HOLDING A HUSBAND

That rather uncomplimentary old adage, "the way to a man's heart is through his stomach," has been quoted so often that many men themselves believe it and act accordingly; unless the coffee, bacon and eggs are just so, the head of the house, it would seem, goes through his day miserably unhappy, hurt and mistreated, this in spite of the fact that at almost any lunch counter good coffee and other sustenance may be gotten for a very small sum.

Of course this does not excuse a woman for not being able to make good coffee or provide well-balanced dinners and lunches with the proper amount of calories, but if the coffee is muddy, wouldn't its effect upon her be just as bad as upon her husband? Wouldn't it be better to find some happier solution to the problem. Surely a man can be happy with a woman even though she cannot cook.

Present-day conditions and changes from the old regime alter most of the old traditions and change the meaning of the old adages, one of which is "woman's place is in the home." The said home would be a sorry place in some instances were the woman not outside helping provide his same bacon.

Dr. Walter A. Maier, distinguished educator of Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, may have overlooked this fact in giving statistics in which cause for divorces was prominently listed as due to "poor cooks and diminishing of the domestic instinct in the emancipated woman." Time was when woman may have been chiefly domestic in habit, her position was less anomalous than it is today. A happy marriage, recently noted, was one where both worked downtown all day. The wife prepared the breakfast, the lunch was gotten downtown and the husband, coming from his office an hour earlier, always had the evening meal started which they shared at home.

Must husbands be well fed to remain contented and faithful? It would be interesting to note how many Oakland husbands are happy merely because their wives are good cooks and housekeepers or whether companionship, temperament, mutual tastes and the happy ability to be pals does not enter, to a great degree, into the making of conjugal felicity.

THE DISASTROUS YEAR OF 1777

The most disastrous year of the American Revolution was 1777. When we look back on the troubles of that day we become convinced that our trials and tribulations of 1932 are of a minor nature after all. An interesting account of the struggles of 1777 can be found in the current issue of the National Republic. It was written by Harold C. Thompson, a student of the history of the American Revolution, who says in part:
